The systems are arranged in a grid-like fashion, with ten systems across the page. Each system consists of a staff with notes and a line of text below it. The text appears to be a form of early printed music notation, possibly a form of tablature or a shorthand notation for a specific instrument or voice part. The notes are written in a stylized, cursive script, and the text below each staff is a line of similar characters, possibly representing the same musical information in a different format or as a key.
