Handwritten manuscript page with a large central parchment insert and several smaller fragments on the right side. The text is written in a cursive script, likely from the 16th or 17th century. The parchment is heavily aged and stained, with some areas showing significant wear and tear. The central insert is a large, rectangular piece of parchment, possibly a flyleaf or a page of text, that has been pasted onto the main page. It contains several lines of text, some of which are partially obscured by the binding or the surrounding parchment. The fragments on the right side are smaller pieces of parchment, some of which appear to be remnants of a larger page or a separate document. They are arranged in a vertical column and contain fragments of text, including what looks like a list or a series of entries. The overall appearance is that of an old, well-used manuscript, possibly a book or a collection of documents.
