Badische Landesbibliothek Karlsruhe

Digitale Sammlung der Badischen Landesbibliothek Karlsruhe

A Treatise of Specters

Bromhall, Thomas

[S.I.], 1658

First Book: An History of Most strange Phantasies and Apparitions, with the various sleights and cunning delusions of Devils

urn:nbn:de:bsz:31-96270

Visual Library

's, &c.

idanus. rates, comenus, tius. baus, abo, conius. las, 1911

Heodoreus, Theodoric, Gufandus, pompus, as Patriatcha Bo ienfis, nus, Remenfis, T.

Υ.

Aler, Maximus Fincentius, s Molitor, erranus, icus, nus, rgeofis, Ternaui.

X. Iphilinsi.

Z.

A

AN

I

1423

I.

Most strange Phantasies and Apparitions, with the various sleights and cunning delusions of Devils.

Accus Brutus and Casim, who had murther'd Cafar, came together to Sardis, where it is reported, Brutus was accounted with a horrible Vision. He was a man, naturally very watchfull, and one so laborious and continent, that he afforded himself but a very small part of his time to fleep in. In the day he rested not at all, in the night very little ; and that when (all men being drowned in fleep) he had neither any employment to do, nor perfon to converse with. And, at that time, being engaged in a War, and agitating things of a moft high concernment, he was fo carefull and intent concerning the profecution and event of those affairs, that, having first (for a thore space) refreshe himself with fleep after Supper, he wholly fet apart the reft of the night for the promoting of his urgent occasions. And if it happened, that he had finished his bufineffe before, he betook himfelf to his fludy untill the third watch; when, all his Centurions and Tribunes were wont to repair unto him. When he was (I fay) at Sardis, and projecting how to convey his Army out of Afia, in the beginning of the night the Moon began to abate of her wonted luftre, the Camp being in a deep filence. Whileft Brutus was deeply cogitating of fome ferious matters, he thought he heard the footfleps of fome one near him; wherear he looking back towards the door, behold, a prodigious Apparition, one of a monftrous and horrid fhape and bigneffe flood by him, without speaking one word. Brutus, not without some reluctancy, ask't him, what Man or God art thou? or what is thy bufineffe here? The Vision answered, O Brutus, I am thy evil Angel, and thou shalt fee me again at Philippi. At which Brutus nothing daunted faid again, I shall then. But when it was vanished, he called together his Servants, who averred to him, they neither faw nor heard either

2

2.

3.

4.

either Vision or voyce; after which Brutus took his rest again. When it was light, he went to Cassim, and told him of this Phantasm. When, after Cassim was slain at Philippi, whiles the prepared for a second fight, wherein he was conquered, after he had been Victor in the first; In the night (as the story fayes) the same Vision appeared again to Brutus in the same shape, not speaking a syllable, but so vanisht. Plutarehus in Bruto.

THen Marcus Antonius became bankrupt at Allium, Cafins of Parma his Partner fled to Athens; where, in the dead of the night as he lay in his bed ingulph't with cares and perplexities, he phancied, a man of a monttrous magnitude, a black and ugly bue, his beard incompt and fqualid, and his hair diforderly hanging down, came to him; And being askt who he was? answered, RaxoSaipova; i.e. thy evil Angel, or Genius. Being at last affrighted with to horrid a prefence, and fo evill a name, he called in his fervants, and queftioned them, whether they faw one of fuch a dreffe and vilage either come in, or go out of his Chamber ? and when they had affured him they faw none fuch, he again composed himfelf to his reft : but prefently the fame Phantafm haunted him; Wherefore he caft off all thought of reft, and commanded a Candle up to his chamber, and enjoyned his fervants not to depart from him. Between this night and his execution inflicted by Cafar, was but a very fhort interval, as you may read in Valerius Max. 1. 1. c. 7. and Sucton. in Aug. and Plutarch. in Vita Antonii.

Dien of Synacufa, after the Synacufans were made free, and a little before he was flain by Calippus, as he fate by chance in his Porch in the evening full of carefull thoughts, heard a fudden noife; and looking about him, (it being yet day-light) he faw a huge woman, in face and habit nothing differing from a Tragick fury, fweeping the houfe with a Broom. He, very much terrified, called his friends, and acquainted them with the fight, and intreated them to fkay and lodge with him that night, for he fhould fink under his terrour, if they fhould leave him, and the Ghoft haunt him again. The Ghoft, indeed, troubled him no more, but his Son, being almost arrived to Manhood, by reafon of fome flight and puerile crofic, became fo fortowfull and enraged, that he precipitated himfelf from the houfe top, and to perified. Plutarches in Dione.

A Lexander the third, King of Scots took to Wife Jean Sifter to Henry the third, King of England; which Jean dyed without iflue: after which he married Margaret, daughter of the fame King Henry, who bare to him Alexander, David, and Margaret; All there dyed; yet the King not altogether dispairing of an Heir and Succeflor of his body, married the third time one Iola, daughter of a Knight of Draconum; whileft by night they were celebrating the Wedding Feath, he faw the likenefle of a dead Man follow the Dance. The fame year the King was knockt off his horfe and flain. Hence Hence 2 formerly

Retemp

THe

L lo

there is

hundred like to d

which w

ther at J

very ill,

the woo

another

tepon, 1

y very

peys las

wais the

A

a bald r

carryin

tohim

Fary, in doit then

skipt oc

Barthola

Att

flee

1 low

eld, be

I know

body ki

be, ina

into the ber, v

with g

9.93.

walking

insmort

which Canfull i

prodigi

and cunning delusions of Devils.

3

50

6.

70

8.

Hence arole all that fedition and destruction which blasted that, formerly, flourishing Kingdome. This fell out in the year of our Redemption, MCCL. Cardanus de rerum Varietate, 1. 16. c. 93.

Here is a noble Family, and among the chiefeft of Parma, called by the name of the Tortells, which have a Cafile, wherein there is a Hall; In it about the chimney, an old woman for this hundred years uses to appear when any of the Family dyeth, or is like to dye. On a time a gallant Matron, by name Paula of Barbia, which was one of the fame family, when we were at Supper together at Belzois, told me, that one of the Maids of the house was very ill, and that the old woman appeared, all were of opinion that fhe would dye : But it fell out otherwife, for fhe recovered ; but another of the family which was well, dyed fuddenly. They report, that this old woman, whole Ghoft is now feen, was formerly very rich, and was by her own Nephews murthered for her moneys fake, and hackt in pieces, and thrown into the Privy, Cardanus, ibidem, Ntonius Urceus Codrus, a Grammatian of Brixia, the very fame night he dyed, thought he faw one of a huge magnitude, a bald pate, his beard hanging down to the ground, fiery eyes, carrying Torches in both hands, and terrible all over, and he fpake to him thus; Who art thou, which walkeft up and down alone thus like a Fury, in that time of the night, when men are fastest asleep ? Speak out, what doft thou look for ? or whither goeft thou? ... When he had thus faid, he skipt out of his bed to avoid him, rushing in violently upon him. Bartholomæus Bononiensis in ejus vita.

Acobus Donatus, Patricius of Venice, and alforich, when on a night fleeping with his Wife he had a taper light, and two Nurles alto were afleep in a truckle-bed with a young child, not a year old, he faw the chamber door open by little and little, and a man, I know not who, put in his head; the Nurfes also faw him, but no body knew him; The young man being affrighted, as well he might be, inatcht his Sword and Buckler, each of the Nurfes great Tapers, into the Hall they come, which was near adjoyning to the Chamber, where all things were close. The young man comes back with great admiration, the fmall Infant, which was well in health, dycd the next day. Cardanus de Rerum Varietate, lib. 16. cap. 93.

THen Curfius Ruffus, in his family notable for nothing of worth, did act as Quaftor at Adrumetum, a City of Africa, walking up and down at noon in the porch, he faw the fhape of a woman of a more comely hue, far beyond any mortal creature, which spake unto him, Thou art Raffus, which that forthy come Vice-Confull into this Province. He being hopefully advanc'd with this prodigie, not long after enjoyed the Proconfulfhip of Africa by Tiberiss B 2 ft again. is Phan. the prer he had the fame caking a s, afin of id of the ities, he gly hue, hanging wcrcd frighted his leta dreife d when d himhim; andle frem U, Was 1.6.7.

la linte o in his ca boile; nic Moy,fweepalled his them to inder his magan. ng almot le crolle, d himkli

Sifter to Without f the jame Heir and aughter of trating the follow the e and flain. Hence

BLB

Baden-Württemberg

4

9.

10.

berius Cafar, whereby the event of the Vision was fulfilled. Fulgofus lib. 1. cap. 6.

Davinus being banished by Ethelfred King of the Northumbrians, fled to Redovaldus King of the East - Angles. Not long after, when Ethelfred by fome in authority fought to kill him, he began to take great care to fecure himfelf. In the night, when all was still, one of an unknown face and habit, having met with him, ask't him whathe would give him, if he told him that which would free 'his mind from all manner of fadnefle. Edwinu made him this anfwer, whatfoever was his, that he might lawfully requeft, and was in his power, that he will freely give him. Then he prognofficated to him, that fo foon as he could make an eleape out of his Enemies hands, he fhould then recover the Kingdome of his Anceftors, and when he had conquer'd his Enemies, he fhould enlarge it, both far and wide; immediately laying his hand upon the top of his head, he faith ; When any one Edminus fhall come to you, after you enjoy your own, and thall in this manner lay his hand upon your head; be you then mindfull to keep thy promife. When he had done speaking thus, he on a fudden vanished. The young man being in a wonderfully manner transported with this Oracle, a long time ruminating within himfelf of this matter, durft not open it to any. But when Erbelfred was flain, he being broughthome into his own kingdome by Redovaldus, being advised by Ethelberg his Wife, the fifter of Edbaldus King of Kent, to embrace the Christian Religion ; when he on purpose delayed the businesse, and could by no perfwation be made pliable, Paulinus a devout man, which by long intreating could do no good, in the interim being taught by an Oracle from Heaven, (as we must believe) came to him, who made stay at York, and putting his most facted hand on his head, requefted him, that he would call to mind what that meant. Eduinus being amazed at the Oracle's fudden iffue, inftantly fell down at the Prelates feet, and was with his fellow Chriftians walhed in that holy Fountain. Anno 627. Polydor. Lib. 4. Hift. Angl.

Macchabem Cofen German to Ducanus King ef Scotland and Banguho Stuart a valiant man travailing through a forreft towards the Court, met three Women of an unwonted and firange habit and appearance, One of them faid, Hail Macchabeus, Thanus Glammis, which was a Title of Honout he had lately received. The fecond faid to him, Hail Caldarius Thanus, another and higher title of bonour : and the third, Hail Macchabeus, Thou fhalt hereafter become King. Then faid Banguho, Me-thinks you are fomething unkind whofoever you are to prefer this man not onely above all the promotion at all. To this the first answered. Yea we declare unto the far greater things than these ; for this man, indeed, shall reign, but his dominion shall have an unhappy end with him for none of his posterity shall ever enjoy his Kingsthip after him: where-

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK dering w woold be apparitie

as/alth

a very l their w

firlt the

ellexp

Night

Bangub

made the Sou

Mittes

tir mir

cellour;

day in 1

1. 16.4.

П

oiNy

Jocitzia

milag

Dian, a

Having

10795(1

Viets 2

to with

when it

R.R. O

they be

Wahi

fingale

体量的

tain for So he d

2.stcht

wide is 建位25

quent

[weet]

gindler

the Ene

tedioser

Olass M

ns,

d. Fulgofus

bunbrians. tter, which anto take ttril, ore ask't him i free his anfwer, vas in his cated to Enemies ors, and ioth far s head, ou chioy head; d done ing in time o any. ITWO 21 Wife, Religid ty no n by long an Oraho made , reque-Eauthin wn at the land and

d in that orrelt tod firange eut, Thanas ived. The hereafter cthing unve all the ive me no leclare unleclare unleclare unlector, fhall th him for m: whereas

and cunning delusions of Devils.

as (although thou fhalt not become King thy felf) thy pofferity for a very long fuccession shall obtain and hold the Throne. When theie words were ended, they all vanished out of their fight. At first these things passed as a vain phansie : but when Macchabaus first afcended to the dignity of Caldarius, and afterwards beyond all expectation was made King, King Ducanus being flain ; and having two Sons, he began to call to mind the Vision ; and inviting Banquhones, and his onely Son Fleanches to a Supper, by that means projected both their deaths ; but when they had flain the Father, the Son, by the darkneffe of the night, made an eleape. At length Macchabaus was flain by Malcalmus the third Son of Bucanus and after many Generations the Kingdome fell into the hands of the Succoffours and Gran-children of Banquhones Siuart, and remains to this day in the possession of a daughter and heir of his Family, Cardan; 1. 16.0.93.ex Hestore Bietho.

Otherus King of the Swedes and Danes, as he was a hunting ha-I ving loft his company, as he wandred alone efpied a company of Nymphs in a certain Den or covert, who promifed him all good forrune, but withall advited him, that he fhould by no means wage war against Balderus King of the Danes who was a superlatively wite man, and one generated by a fecret feed and production of the Gods. Having spoken these things, they suddenly vanished, and left Hotheres (who thought he had been in a Cave) in the open field. Some years after, (having commenced a war against Balderus, but hitherto with very ill fucceffe) he chanced to light upon the fame Vision ; when he fadly bewailed to them his adverse fortune, and the fadneffe of his condition; nor would he ceafe his complaints untill they had made him a promife of better fucceffe. The Nymphs told him (though he should feldome come off victor yet) that he thould lote no more men then his enemy; and that he thould obtain the victory if he could but find by what means to intercept certain food prepared for the Enemy to augment his force and courage. So he departed and rallied his forces. And whilft he diligently watched the Camp of the Enemy, he faw three Virgins go out who fecretly used to carry them provision, whom he followed as fast as he could run, till at last they came to a house which they frequented; where, by the help of his Harp; (on which he plaid most iweerly) he got from them a most glorious Belt, and the powerfull girdle of Victory, and having returned the fame way he went, met the Enemy, and overthrew him, fo that the day after he was wafted over to Proferpina, who was seen to stand by him as he slept. Olaus Magnus, lib. 3. c. 10. and interies d in

C. Julius Cafar, in his civill war, when he had gone as far as the Bank of Rubicon, is faid to have flood at a paufe, and confidering with himfelf what a defiruction the paffing of that River would be to Mankind : whilf he flayed upon the back he had an apparition; A man of an extraordinary bulk fitting upon the oppofite

12.

5

TT:

posite bank playing upon a Pipe made of Reeds: And when, befides thepheards, many Souldiers, and amongst them fome Trumpeters flock't to the Bankfide to hear him, one of their trumpets leap't from him into the River, and with a very shrill voice began to found an alarum, and so passed to the other fide. Then Cafar faid, Let us go, fince the wonderfull figns of the Gods and the wickedness of our Enemies thus invite us: The lot is now past, Sabellicus 1. 7. Enead. 6.

13.

14.

15.

6

Pelopidas, General of the Theban Army, (whileft he encamped about the Leutirian field, where the daughters of Sceda fus were entombed) faw Scedaffus and his daughters; they lamenting about their Tombs, and curfing the Lacedemonians : and their father (who long before for that he had not revenged fo horrid a crime, curfing the Lacedemonians, killed himfelf upon the tombs of his daughters) told him, If he would conquer the Lacedemonians, he must facrifice a red Virgin to his daughters. But when this feemed fomething too barbarous a facrifice, to appeale the gods with a humane offering, not fatisfied in his mind about it, at last a young Mare which had never taken horfe, came from the herd and flood in that very place where he had confulted with the Ghoft. And when Theacriis the Prophet faw the Mare was of a yellow thining colour, and proudly reining-in her neck, the pranced and neigh'd, he called Pelopidas with a loud voice, and faid, that this was his offering, and that he could expect no other Virgin. Then they brought the Mare adorned with garlands to the Sepulchre, and there facrificed her : Soon after, the Battle began, wherein the Lacedemonians received that memorable overthrow of Leustria by Bæotarchus and Pelopidas. Plutarchus in Pelopida.

WWHen Gennadius the Chief of Confiantinople, under Leo the Great Emperour, was by night flanding at the Altar, and praying to God for the world, a certain evil spirit appeared to him, which being by him forc't away by his making a crosse anfwered him thus in the voyce of a man; That as long as he liv'd indeed, he wold avoid, and be at quiet, but afterward, he would leave no way unattempted to trouble the Church of God. Nicephorus lib. 15. cap.23. Sutdas, Cedrenus

A Littlebefore that Henrythe feventh Emperour dyed, and the flaughter of the chief Rulers of the Nation, as Mafatus Patavinus, and Francifcus Petrareba do hiftory it, the Inhabitants of Mediolanum, in the houfe floor of Mattheus the chief Governour, who also merited the name af Mattheus the Great, when Sun was fet, an armed horfeman appear'd to him far bigger then the fhape of mans when many for an hours space had beheld it, it then vanish'd away, with great terrour to the beholders. Likewise three dayes after at the third hour, in the very same place, two horfemen in the like shellicus libro 1, cap. 4. Two TIN

L near

pary fize

Spick ton

W. T

plyed,

from the

thence to ters to th

fiffint

wtack, a

them,

delibera

what to letter w

fattened

were th

tians a

st jun n

high for phile it,

W25; 7

Rithed a

VICE, and in a faor

King of

billorie.

1

日

1 the

appeare

tonac L

herieba

tim) a otabul

becable

treacher

which a faid, he nim will

moneth,

no longe

the Ghiol

very fam

his Soul

a.

s, n,befides impeters p't frem icund an et us go, e of our cus 1. 7.

camped Sas were ig about er (who curing ghters) crifice ething offerwhich very eccys-, and called g, and e Mare ed her: received clopidas.

t Leo the ne Altar, peared 10 offe, anhe liv'd te would od, Nice-

, and the atus Pataus of Meour, who was let, an pe of many (b'daway) es after at in the like ifhed alfo. TWO

and cunning delusions of Devils.

had made a Covenant, and there

7

16.

17.

Wo famous Merchants, going into France through the groves near the Alpes in Italy, they met a man bigger then the ordinary fize of men, he calling them fuddenly, charged them thus; Speak tomy Brother Ludovicus Sfortia, and give him thefe Letters from me. They being amazed, and enquiring, Who he was? he replyed, That he was Galeacian Sfortia; and straightway he vanished from their fight. They returned in all hafte to Mediolanum, from thence to Figlevanus, where Maurus lived. They prefent their Ictters to the Prince, the Courtiers fcoff at them; but they flanding ftiff in their errand, were caft into prifon, and being put upon the wrack, they shewed by their constancy, that there was no fraud in them. In the mean while with great tear and offonithment they deliberated about opening the Letters. All the reft making doubt what to do, one Galeacius, a Commander in chief feared not. The letter was folded up like a Bifhops Writ (as they term it) very long, fastened with small instruments of braffe. The words whereof were these; 0, 0, 0 Ludovicus, take heed to thy felf, For the Venetians and the French have confpired to raine the e and thy off-fpring. But if you will give me a thousand nobles, I will endeavour to reconcile their high spirits, and to turn away your ill fortune, and I doubt not to accomplifb it, if you do not stubbornly refuse me. Farewell. The subscription was; The spirit of Galeacius thy Brother. Here some being altonifhed at the ftrangenefie of the thing, others laughing at the device, and most averring, he must put money into his hands : yet left he thould make himfelt a laughing-flock, the Prince refrain'd this superstitious prodigality, and sent home the Merchants again. But in a fhort while after he was unthron'd by Ludovicus the Twelfth King of the French, and carried away priloner. Artunus Section 1. bistoriæ Medionens. oculatus testis.

He Father of Ludovicus Alodifius, who was posseffour of all I the wealth of the City Imola, a little after he went from hence, appeared in a private place to the man in his journey, whom his sonne Ludovicus sent to a City in Italy called Ferraria, fitting on herleback with a hawk, (as 'twas his manner in hawking to hold him) and fpake to him, although in great fear, to bid his fonne to come that very next day into the fame place; for he would tell him of a bufinelle of great confequence. Hearing that ; Ludovicm, both becaufe he was incredulous thereof, and was also afraid of fome treachery, fent another in his flead. - That fame ghoft meeting him, which appeared before, was very fad that his fon came not; for he faid, he would tell him many more things : But at that time he bad him tell him onely this, That twelve years being expired, and one moneth, the day likewife being particularly fet down, he fhould be no longer Governour of that City which he had. The time which the Ghoft had forecold of was come ; with great diligence in that very fame night, which his Fathers evil Angels fulpected, Philippus his Souldiers, Captain of the City Mediolanum, (with whom he had had made a Covenant, and therefore fear'd him not) the trenches being hard frozen, fcaled the Walls, and with ladders took the City and its Governour. Sabeb. lib. 1. cap. 4. Exempl.

Hen Constantinople was belieged by the favage Turks both by Land and Sea, There was feen at Come a City near adjoyning to France, a great company of doggs whirried up and down in the Ayr, and after them flocks of divers kinds of beafts, and as it were many footmen, first of a slender harnesse, then pikemen and other weapon'd men followed after, and horfemen followed them, divided into Troops, with a great Army fet in battle array; They feemed for the fpace almost of three hours to be an Army at hand. At length a huge and formidable Man of a high flature, fuch as cannot be expressed, as General of the Army, fitting upon a dreadfull horfe, advanced, and fome other vain Apparitions, the forerunners of great milchiefs, till night drawing on, whatfoever they faw vanished away. Which Wonders every body thought did foretell ruise, defiruction, and mifery to follow after, which the fates had neceffitated ; and fo it came to paffe. Alexander lib. 3. cap. 15.

AS Sigebertus reports in his Chronicle, Antiochus by a Divine hand of Judgment was overturned and cast down in the second year of Mauritius; A certain Citizen of the place, a man of fingular piety, and full of charity, and liberall in his Alms, faw an old man all in white, with two more with him, flanding in the midft of the City with a handkerchief in his hand, with which firiking the middle part of the City, it fuddenly was overturned, houfes, men and all. And his two companions had much ado to perfwade him to spare the reft of the City that flood; fo when he had used many comfortable speeches to this good man, they appeared no more.

8

18.

19.

20

IN the year of our Lord, 1536. a certain Factor of Sicilia jour-nying from Catana to Messana upon the 21 day of March took up his lodging at Taurominium; thence next morning travelling on his way not far from the Town, he met 10 Pargettors, as they feemed to be carrying with them their tools, he asking whither they were bound ? They answered, To Etna, (commonly called, the Mountain Gibellus). And foon after ten more of them, who being asked whither they all went ? returned the fame answer, That their Mafter workman had fent them to build a certain Edifice at Ætna; and being asked, who their Master was ? they faid, He came a little after them. And fuddenly he met a man exceedingly taller then any ordinary man, with a very long beard and hair, and blacker then any Crow, fo that he might feem to be Vulcan himfelf, had he been lame; He without any more complement, askt the Factor, Whether he mer his Workmen? Heanfwered, That indeed he faw certain Men, who faid they were going to build at Atna; but whether they were his Workmen or no, he knew not; but if they were, he would be of whole

Dop

coming the field

buried rable pr

terretha Mather (

be was igain j

15世代 0

Greek

and cunning delusions of Devils.

be glad to know what moved him to undertake fo firange a piece of Work, as to build in a Mountain fo high, and fo deep in Snow, Then faid that it is hard for the ablest Traveller to passe there. this unknown Architect, Although you little credit my words, you shall sbortly know, and your eyes sball bear you with effe, that I am able to perform this and much more, if I pleafe. And with these words he vanished out of his fight. At this the man became fo terrified, that he had like to have dyed in the place; but with much ado he got back to the Town full of horrour, and according to the cuftome procured a Prieft, was confeft, declared his vision, and the same evening departed this life. The beginning of the night following, the 23. of March, there was a great Earthquake, and exceeding great flames of fire burft out of the top of the Mountain Atna on the East fide, and were violently carried toward the Sun-rifing, infomuch, that the Clergy and people of Catana were fo firuck with terrour, that they all ran to the Church of St. Agatha, to implore divine affiftance, from whence the voyce of their prayers, and excellive weeping, with their dolefull ditties, and unanimous cry for mercy, the bells all the while ringing mournfully, came to the Church dedicated to the Purification of the Bleffed Virgin. And (O wonderful event!) before their prayers were ended, the fire began to decrease, and in a fhore time became utterly extinct. Gilbert. Cognat. libro ostavo narrationum.

D Amafcius Syrus Simplicius, and fome other learned men came out of Sicilie together, and went into Perfia to fee King Cofroes; of whofe fame and vertue they had heard great report. In their coming home, as they returned, they found the body of a man in the field unburied. They abhorring the inhumanity of the Perfians buried it. In the night time the shape or Ghost of an old, honourable perfon seem'd to haunt one of the retinue, faying, Do not interre that unburied corps, let the Dogs tear it in pieces. The Earth is the Mother of us all, it admits not of that man, who depraves his Mother. When he was awake, he told his vision to the reft; Wherefore going back again in the morning into the field, they faw the naked corps lay in the open field. Agathius lib. 2. seems to speak of it, among his Greek Epigrams, > Mit Oditus & ditastor, έα κυσί κύεμα γενέδα. Τη πάντων μηθής μητρέφθορον & δέχετ αυδρα.

Let this unburied Corps no buriall have, Our Mother Earth to Mother wrongers lends no grave.

E Dward the third King of England, when on a time the Collectors of the Tribute-money which was imposed on the people, had brought before him a huge heap of money given out of that tribute, to make him merry, he fuddenly thought he faw the Devill sporting and playing about the money, and therefore, abhorring money C of

uenches ook the

3

both by djoyning id down , and as nen and d them, ; They it hand. fuch as i dreadhe foreer they ht did ch the 10.3.

Divine lecond of finguan old midft of king the fes, men vade him fed many a more.

icilia jourb took up ng on, his ey feemed they were the Mouneing asked then Mafter and being e after them. ny ordinary n any Crow, n lame; He ther he met certain Meny bether they re, he would

BLB

2 I.

to, al

22.

9

of this nature, as a deteftable thing, they fay he prefently commanded it to be taken out of his fight, and to be reftored to the people. Polydor, lib. 8.

W Hen Thyana, a City of Afia, (which had rebelled) was taken, Aurelianus the Emperour being in his Pavilion all alone, very angry, thinking how to deftroy it, he faw with great terror Apollonius Thyaneas the Philosopher appearing to him, which was dead long fince, and advising him; Aurelianus, if thou defireft to be a Conquerour, think not to flay my Citizens. Aurelianus, if thou wilt be a Ruler, fixed no innocent blood. Aurelianus, be mild, and gentle, if thou will be a Victor. Calius lib. 17, cap. 13, ex Fl. Vopifto.

ST. Martin the Bishop of Tours in France, was greatly tempted by the Devil. On a time the Devil appeared to him all in purple, and with a Diadem, in the perfon of Chrift. Martin feeing this, was amaz'd; the Devil faith unto him; Know Martin, whom thou adorest: I am Chrift, I am going to the Earth, I would first make my felf known to thee. Here when Martin replyed not, he faith again, Martin, why dorft thou doubt to believe in me, feeing thou feest me 3 I am Chrift. Then he being taught in Gods Word by the Holy Ghost, faith; My Christ was crucified and wounded, but I fee you in no fuch habit, neither put I my belief in you. At this word he vanished. Marulus ex Severo Sulpitio.

WWE read in the Life of S. German, a Bifhop, that on a night when the cloth was laid in an Inne after Supper, he much wondring at it, was inquifitive, for whom that Supper was provided ? and anfwer was made, For good Men and women which firaggle up and down in the night. Whereupon the holy man intended to watch them. And lo, a great company of men and women came to the Table, whom he charging not to go away, the whole houfhold lookt if they knew any of them. They faying they were all neighbours, every bodies houfe being featcht, he found them all in their beds. Whereupon he prefently put them all to their oaths, who acknowledged, that they were evil fpirits, or Devils.

MEnippus, the Scholer of the Philosopher Demetrius, a very handsome young man, when he went to Cenchrea by Coriath, he not the shape of a strange Maid, beaunfull and rich, which faid, that she was in love with him; Thereupon she invited him to go to her house: He being love smitten, oftentimes kept her company there, and did think to marry her. She had a house furnished like a Princes. Apollonius Thyaneus confidering all things in that house, ery'd out, that she was one of the Fairles, whom some call Hagges, others walking-Ghoss. Philostratus in vita Apollonii.

Jamblicus

Jamblica neurofal wonder a was then

WE nite him ards, and defigues, faction in And havi boganto they are anus, be Crofle, victory Thes a Falstas. chard I confider of the C 34.3.800

A hi Spirit for howhar Jalt thr could in roll'd in way, an up the ( ration, h nia, and taken by was told tune bef Laertias

10

25.

26.

24 ..

10

23.

and cunning delusions of Devils.

JAmblicus that famous Magician, when a certain Egyptian whilft he was making his challenge, had an apparition to the great terrour of all the franders by; bad them be of good cheer, and not wonder at it, for he knew it to be the Ghoft of a certain Fencer, who was then lately flain in a fingle Combat. Eunapius in Adefio.

Hen Constantine the Great, made Gallus Governour of the V East; Julianus being in great hope of compassing the Empire himfelf, fought throughout all Greece for Southfayers and Wifards, and confulted all he could meet with, about the fucceffe of his designes. At last he met with one who promised him great fatiffaction in the foretelling of what future events he fhould propofe. And having led him into a room befet with Images, the Magician began to call upon his Devills, and they prefently appeared, but (as they are wont) in an ugly black hue and thape ; infomuch that Julianus, being fore afraid, figned his forchead with the fign of the Croffe, whereat the Devils fuddenly vanished, as minded of the victory of our Lord Jefus, and their utter rout and ruine thereby, Then the Conjurer reproved Julianus for being to timorous : But Julianus, highly admiring the power and vertue of the Croffe, clear'd his mind of the conceit of running after wilards, by this confideration; That the Devils would never have fled at the fign of the Croffe, did they not perfectly hate that action. Theodoretus, lib. 3.c.3. Sozomenus, lib.5.cap.2.

A Certain Mediolanenfian Boor, as he returned homewards from his labour, about three hours within night, faw a Goblin or Spirit follow him, and when he endeavoured to out-run it, make he what use he could of his heels, the spectral fetch't him up, and at last threw him to the ground, when he endeavoured to cry out, but could not. At length when he had lain long on the Earth, all roll'd in mud and dirt, he was found by some who passed by that way, and carried home half dead, and at the end of eight dayes gave up the Ghost. Cardanus de Subtilitate.

A Certain Lacedemonian having brought the Philosopher Plata out of Sicily, fold him off to Ægina by the command of the Tyrant Dionysius. But in regard it was a capital crime for an Abenian to come to Ægina, he was called in question for his life by one Comandrus: but the necessity of the matter being taken into confideration, he was fold away for twenty pounds to one Aniceris of Cyrenia, and by him afterwards made free. Afterwards the City was taken by Cabria, and this Comandrus drowned in the Hellespont, who was told, before his death, by an apparition that this hard fortune betel him, for the hard measure the Philosopher had received. Laertius, lib. 3.

C 2

Sozomenus

H

27.

28.

29.

30.

δ,

tly com.

d to the

ed) was

Pavilion

th great

, which

iefrefi to kon wilt

entle, if moted

n pur-

leeing

, uhom

ukt my

again,

I AM

holt,

1 /12-

atolas

a night

emuch

as pro-

chitrag-

endedto

came to opinold

l neight

it caths,

, a very

Cortath,

, which

d him to her com-

turnified is in that otte call

Faillin

BLB

Sozomenus in the 28th chap. of his 6th Book, tells us that one Apelles, a Monk, about Achoris in fome of the Monasteries of Egypt, did many strange things, and whilst upon a certain time he was busic at fome Smithy-work he had in hand, there appeared to him a most beautiful and adorned lady tempting him to lust, whereat he fnatch't a hot Iron from the fire, and ran it into the face of the lustfull Succubus, who vanished with a hideous cry at the hurt behad given her.

32.1

33.

12

31.

D Atius Bilhop of Mediolana, when for the profession of his Fairh he was put from his place, as he went towards Constantinople, he put in at Corintb, and there for want of better accommodation he was forc't to take up with lodgings haunted with evill spirits, and at midnight when the Devils began to bray, bleat, houl, and roar about the house like Lions, and other beasts, the Good Bishop rose, and thus expossible with those fiends, or their head. Most wicked Pluto, thou who faids, I will establish my seat in the North and will become like unto the most High, behold for thy pride thou art become like unto Swine and Asse, because thou denieds to be inceto thy Maker. The Devils at his speech were so consounded, they left haunting that house for the future. Gregor. Turonen fis lib. 3. Dialog. cap.4.

D Hlegon Trallianus a Manumiffe of the Emperour Adrian, in his Book de Mirabilibus et Longævis, (i. e.) of Wonders and Antiquities; relates a Hiftory, which if you will take his private authority, he avers he was well-acquainted with it, being in a certain City where he was : The Story is this, Philinnium the daughter of Damostrates the Inn-keeper and Charitus, fell in Love with one. Machates, one of her Fathers lodgers, which her Parents very much mifliking, the broak her heart with grief, and was buried with publick folemnity. Six Moneths after, when Machates was come thither again, Philinnium came to him and lay with him, received a gilded Cup, and an Iron Ring which he gave her, and likewife beflowed a Gold Ring, and a Breaft-cloth upon Machates, and fo departed. The Nurfe faw the Spectral and declared the bufinefle to her Parents, who the next day came and found their daughter with their Gueft, whom they embraced with most paffionate acclamations, whillt the fpake to them in this manner. O Father and Mother, how unjuftly do you envy me the happineffe of being two or three dayes in your house with this your Gueft, without doing any evill at all; ah you will again bewail your curiofity in your choice for me, when I am gone from him to my appointed flation; for alas, I am here but by permiffion, and the special licence of the Gods. When the had thus uttered her mind, the was inftantly a dead corps again, and when they had carried her publickly to be feen, they declared the whole flory to all that came flocking into the Theater. The grave was found open and nothing therein, but the

TIO

Him villin ti gate their seemed he ender ugly ho num circ (wretch flegin D Tist Linkte coutag Moto. wina othis f (paldin cloak, a Lime on Planta Life ato by her, 5000 WT Jeek: to title, then flos thé Ch Crittin nim aw

Lions wicker Carden verity of not when her by n fanall en truth, w to this lee having to having to inginto t

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

the Iron Ring, and the gilded Cup. The Corps by the advice of Hillss the South-fayer, was buried beyond the lines of the City. Machates through grief, became the actor of his own Trajedy.

Heronymus in his lives of the Fathers, tells of a certain Monk, who was enticed to most foul and lustfull embraces by a Devill in the shape of a most amiable Woman, who, when to propagate their lust, she bended forward her members towards him; seemed like a Mare or Mule, or some bruit creature. And when he endeavoured to accomplish carnall copulation, she making an ugly howling noife, like a spirit as the was, and a Phantasm, vanish't from between his hands as he embraced her, and left him (wretched man !) miserably deluded. Vierus 1. 2. c. 46. De Prestigits Damonum.

IT is floried by Vincentius in the third Book of his Hiftories, that there was in Sicily under the King Rogerius, a young man of good coutage, and very skilfull in fwimming, who about twilight in a Moon-thine evening was wathing himfelf in the Sea, and a woman fwimming after him caught him by the hair, as if it had been fome of his fellowes that intended to drown him. He fpake to her, but couldnot get a word from her; whereupon he took her under his closk, and brought her home, and afterward married her. On a time one of his fellows upbraiding him, told him he had hugg'd a phantaim; he being horribly affrighted, drew his fword, and threatned his Wife, that he would murther his fon which he had by her, if the would not (peak, and make her originall known. Alas poor wretch, faith the, thou undoest a commodious wife, in forcing me to Speak ; I should have continued with thee, and should have been beneficiall to thee, if thou badit let me alone with my commanded filence . But now thou balt never see me more. And immediately she vanish'd. But the Childgrew up, and much frequented the Sea. In fine, on a certain day, this phantafm meeting him in those waters, carried him away in the prefence of many people.

IN a Country called Marra, there was a very gallant and handfome young Lady, that had refused many in marriage, and most wickedly kept company with an evil spirit, by the Greeks termed Cacodamon, who being with child by him, and by her Parents feverity constrained to tell the father of it; answered, that the knew not where the was, that a very fair young man did oftentimes meet her by night, and sometimes by day. Her parents, though giving small credence to their daughter, yet earness the defiring to know the truth, who it was that had perfwaded and enticed their daughter to this lewdnesse, within three dayes after, the damosel having given them notice thereos, that he which ravish'd her, was with her; having therefore unlock'd the doors, and fet up a great light, coming into the Chamber, they faw an ugly foul Monster, of fuch a fearfull 35 ..

13

34-

36

ns,

that one

afteries of

a time he peared to ult, where-

ace of the

it he had

his Fairh

intenople,

odation

ipirits,

ul, and Bifhop

d.Moft

North

le thou

obcdi-

inded,

110.3.

, in his

d Anti-vate au-

acertain

ughter of

with one

ery much

ed with ceived a wife bed fo de-

finefle to hter with acciama.

g two or

joing any

tion; for nce of the nitantiy a

kly to be king into erein, but

14

37.

full hue, as no man can believe, in their daughters arms. Very many that were fent for, came in all hafte to this unfeemly object; Among whom, a Prieft of an approved life, and well difciplin'd, all the reft being feared away, and amaz'd, when repeating the beginning of St. John's Golpel, he came to that place, The Word was madeFlefb, the evil Genius with an horrible outery goes away, carrying the roof of the houfe away with him, and fer all the furniture on fire. The woman being preferved from peril, was 3. dayes after brought to bed of a most deformed Monster, such as no man (as they fay) ever faw; which the Midwives, to prevent the infamy and difgrace of that family, heaping up a great pile of wood, did isstantly burn to afhes. Hestor Boetbas libr. 8. bift, Scotorum.

THe fame Boethow relates another ftory in the fame place. In the year of our Lord God, 1536. as they were failing from an arm of the Sea, called Phortea, to traffique into Flanders, there arole fuch a violent wind, that the fayls, mail, tacklings, and all were broken, and the thip also was tofs'd up and down the fwelling waves, that every body concluded, they must certainly perish. The master of the thip admiring at that featon to huge and unaccuftomed churlithneffe of the Heavens, (for it was about the Summer-Solftice) when with loud cryes they did not attribute it to the Stars, but to the wiles of fome evil Devils, they heard a voyce from the lower part of the thip, of a woman miterably complaining of her felf, that fome hee-Devil in the form of a man, with whom fhe had many years accompanied with, was at that time with her, and forc'd her, the would therefore yield her to the mercy of the Sea, that, if the perithed, who was the caufe of to great and imminent danger : all the reft by the goodneffe of God might escape fafe. A Prieft coming to the woman bewailing her felf, to counfel her for her own falvation, and them that were with her, did pioufly exhort her, now openly confeffing and acknowledging her fault, carneftly detelling that abominable wickedneffe, and repenting the fact from the bottom of her heart, with fighs exprefing the fame, that nothing thould be wanting on her part, and he knewGod would be propitious to her, &c. In the midft of the Priefts exhortation, when the perplexed woman with many fighs and groans was deploring that. hainous crime she had committed, all that were by, faw a black Cloud come forth out from the pump of the Ship, and with a great noile, fire, fmoak, and ill favour defeended into the Sea. Then was it fair weather, and the Sea calm, and the Merchants went to their defired haven with their Ship, and nothing loft.

38. F Rancifeus Mirandula makes mention in his writings, that he had lain above 40. years with a familiar fpirit for his Bed-fellow, in the thape of a woman; it came into the market with him, he converfed with it, infomuch that all the ftanders by, feeing nothing took him for a Fool. He called her Hermelina, as if the were a woman. I k mis abow 40 years, call'd he rap, 80, 1

Active conception fervant her repense which the thought of then camp hair, wood

A Ce his mer another Paramon foruce gat pie fittin words ; vanished

BEAR the ice of Chatch he in his horfe, n damed below t ground;

The Berger Harrison Marinan Marina M

man,

and cunning delusions of Devils.

man. I knew alfo, faith he, another, whofe name was Pinnetus, who was above 80 years old, he did use the sports of Venus more then 40 years, with another spirit, which appear'd like a woman, and call'd her name Florina. Urramq; historiam Cardanus recitat. lib. 15. cap. 80. de varietate rerum.

Acobus Ruffus writes in the fifth Book, the fixth Chapter of the conception of men, that in our time Magdalena,a Citizens Maidfervant was ravished by a foul spirit, and then took her leave on her repenting, by the order of the Ministers of the Church ; after which the felt fuch cruel torments and pangs in her belly, that the thought every hour almost that she should be delivered of a child; then came forth out of her womb iron nails, wood, pieces of glaffe, hair, wooll, flones, bones, iron, and many fuch like.

Certain Merchants Wife about 6 or 7. miles from withemberg, in the way to Silefia, when her husband was away, by realon of his merchandizing abroad, was wont to entertain one Concubine or another. It fo fell out, that her husband going forth, one of her Paramours came in the night time, and when he had made himfelt fpruce, and fatisfied his luft, as it feemed in the morning like a Magpie fitting on the buttery, he bade his Concubine farewell, in thete words; This was your Lover : and before he had done speaking, he vanished out of fight, and never came more.

Enediatus the Sth, by his Country a Thuscane, by the Magick of Theophylast his Nephew, who had been the Scholer of Sylvefter the fecond, long fince Pope, came to be Pope; He was head of the Church 11. years. After his death, he appear'd to a Bishop which he in his life-time commonly made use of, fitting upon a black horfe, much lamenting and complaining of the torments of the damned, and charging me to warn his Brother John the 11th, to beltow that gold on the poor, which he had formerly buried under ground; whereby he was in hopes to be freed.

Heophylact, Nephew by his Brother Aldericus of the two Popes, Benedist and John, came to that dignity, by his Magick, wherein he was alway accounted famous. He call'd himfelt Benedict the 9th. He continued fo by times ten years. He was at last strangled in a Wood by one of those spirits, with whose familiar he was wont to converfe. Benno, Hiftorians report, among whom are Martinus Polonus, and Petrus Damianus, that Benedict was by a Hermite teen near the Mill, of a terrible shape; for in his body he was like a Bear, in his head and tayl like an Afle : And when he was asked, How he came to be fo metamorphofed ?'tis reported he made this answer, I wander up and down in this bape now, becaufe when I was Pope, I lived as void of reason and confirence, without law, and without God, and have defiled the chair of Rome with all manner of vileneffe.

S. Marting

15

39.

40.

41,

42.

6

. Very

object ;

aphin'd,

the be-

Ford was

y,carryaronure

. dayes

10 man

infamy

od, did

In the

anarm fe fuch

proken,

s, that fter of chut-litice)

but to lowce

t felly

many f forc'd

that, it

danger;

A Pricit

her own

host her,

effly de-

act from that no-

ld be prowhen the ring that

w a black

ith a great

Then was it to their

s, that he sold, who

Bed-fellow,

in him, he ing nothing

WETE & WO

man,

43.

16

ST. Martin, Bifhop of Tours in France, when hard by his Monadery an unknown Martyr's bones were by the vulgar fuperflitionfly worfhipped, that he might not by his authority corroborate their fuperflition, took one day with him fome of his brethren, and to the place he goes, where calling upon God, he fupplicates him, to manifelt and clear the truth thereof unto him. On his left hand flands an ugly ghoft, he makes his name known, and confeffes the ruth of the crime, faying. That he was a common thief, and was put to death for his villanies, and by the common peoples ignorance was honour'd for a Martyr. Then Martin makes an Edict, That the Altar fhould out of hand be taken away, and by this means delivered the people from their fuperflition. Severus Sulpitim in ejm vita.

When Simonides Com fupp'd at Scopas his houfein The Saly, and had fung that fong which he had made on him, wherein many things for ornament lake, (as the Poets use to do) were written on Castor and Pollax; Scopas told him, he would give him half according to their agreement for that fong, but the other half he must demand of Callor and Pollax, whom he had equally commended with him. A little while after comes in a Messer to Simonides, and tells him, there were two Men at the gate calling for him very earnestly. Up he arose, and went forth, but saw no body. In this very interim of time, down falls that very room where Scopas was feasting, and crusht to death him and all his company. Cicera in lib, de Oratore.

45.

46.

44.

IN the year of our Lord, 654. In the eleventh year of the reign of Conflans, it rained afhes, fo that Conflantinople was in great fear, fire fell from Heaven, and a moft grievous plague mightily increas'd for the 3 hot moneths, A good and bad Angel were feen by every body to go in the night time about the City, and as often as by the good Angels command, the bad Angel did finite any ones door, with a javelin which he had in his hand, fo many dyed out of that houfe the next day. Sigebertus in Chronicis, et Paulus Diaconus, lib. 19. rerum Romanaram.

IN the fixth year of Conftantinus Copronymus, in the month of January, about 4 of the clock there was an earthquake round about Paleftine, and all Syria, which defiroyed many Churches and Monafieries. And a Plague beginning in Sicily and Calabria, goes quite through Monobafia and Hellades, and through the neighbouring Illes, and at laft it comes to Conftantinople. Many perplext in mind throught they faw fome ftrange men of a ftern look following them, and Ipcaking unto them, and to enter their houfes, and either to wound them there, or caft them forth out of dores; and fo it was indeed in the event. For that infection made houles which were full empty, and there was fuch a multitude that died, that all the Sepulchres in the City and Suburbs being fill'd, Vaults, Lakes, Vine4

T was Theodor he had fla fet before chuchis he ashe himi reprefenta bed, te w zed him.

THEC intel the Falle bours, th through ONE WAY City in place cal 10 confirt things co ftens appe he was lo at this tis were mai In Italy, 40, year ed, and 4.4.

NS,

his Monafuperfliintoborate chren, and cates him, s left hand ofeffes the , and was gnorance of that peans de*line wata*.

Galy, and wherein te writnim half t half he nimendsimanifor him body. In te Scopas ty. Cicero the reign as in great the mightily were feen as often ite any ones dyed out of fus Diaconus, and of Januaand Monaas goes quite neighbouring plext in mind lowing them, and either to and foir was s which were d, that all the laults, Lakes, Vine-

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

Vineyards and Gardens were made places to bury in. Anno Dom. 748. juxta Sigebertum.

T was a strange, and almost prodigious kind of death that Theodorics King of the Ostrogoths died : For in a while after that he had flain Symmaches and Boethius, when a great fish's head was fet before him on the table at supper, he imagined he faw Symmachus his head in it, biting his nether lip in, as if he threatned him, as he himsfelf afterwards told his Physitian Elpidim: With which representation he was so affrighted, that at that time going to bed, he was alway faying as long as he lived, That image amazed him.

He Caftrobians report that Aristeus Proconnesius, the Poet, going into a Fullers thop in the Ifle called Marmora, died there, and the Fuller thutting up his thop, went away to acquaint his neighbours, that fuch an one was dead : this rumour being fprcad quite through the City, that Ariftem was dead; fuddenly there came one whole name was Cyzycenus, a Philosopher of Athens, from the City Artace, who faid, that he was in Company with Ariftens at a place called Cyzicm, and spake with him. Whilft he endeavoured to confirm it, all the neighbours were in a readineffe, having all things convenient to carry men forth. The house being open'd, Aristeus appeared, neither living, nor yet quite dead, and 7. years after he wassicen in Proconnesus, when he composed those Verles which at this time are called by the Greeks Arimafpei : which when they were made, he again vanished. The inhabitants of Metapontis in Italy, fay that Aristem was feen in those quarters 300, and 40. years after, and charged that Apolloes Altar thould be creeted, and called by the name of Aristeus Proconnessus, Sec. Herodotus 116.4.

Ne Leonard at Basill about the year of Christ, 1520, one of no ingenuity, and who flammer'd in his fpeech, he was commonly called Lienimannus. He, I know not by what skill entring that vault which opens to the City Bafill, and going further then ever any yet could, tells of strange and wonderfull fights. One going down into the Cave with a lighted Taper in his hand, faid that he must first passe by an Iron gate, then out of one Vault into another, and then into fair and flourishing Gardens. In the middle was a Hall to be feen most richly beautified, and a very handlome Virgin to the middle, with a Golden Diadem round about her head, downwards the was like an ugly Serpent, the would lead me by the hand to the Iron cheft. Upon that lay two black Mastiffe Dogs, who with their horrible barking fcar'd away all that came near them. But the maid reftrained them. Then untying the bundle of keyes about her, the opend the cheft, and took out all kind of moneys, Gold, Silver, and Braffe, whereof by the Virgins bounty he faid he brought much out of the Vault with him. He faid moreover D

BADISCHE

1

49.

17

47.

48.

over, that the Virgin used to fay, that the was by direfull imprecations long fince devoted hither, and transformed into fuch a Monfter; but the was forung from a royall ftem, and thought there was no other way to recover her fafety, then if the received 3. kiffes from a pure and undefiled young man. For then her own form would return to her, and the would give her whole treafure, otherwife called her Dower, which was hid in that place, to him that freed her. He averred alfo, that he kiffed twice, and twice took notice of her deportment, to terrible for over-much joy of her hopedfor liberry, that he was afraid, that fhe would tear him in pieces alive. In this intervall of time it fo fell out that his Nephews bringing him to a baudy-houfe, he accompanied with an Harlor. With which foul crime being contaminated, he could never after find the way to the vault, nor enter it. Whereof, poor Soul, he often with weeping tears made complaint. Who fees not that this was a Diabolicall phantafm? but yet verily that antient Romane coin, which he brought out of the Cave, and made fale of, to many of our City, do plainly thew, that fome treafure was hid in that hollow place, which fome covetous Devill hath in cuflody, justas the evill spirits, to their own great perill, do in Golden mines, Left any fhould think these things fabulous, there are some witneffes yet alive, that heard Lienimannus make relation of all things. After him a Citizen of Bafill, in a very great dearth and fearcity, that he might the better cherifh his Family, went down into the fame cave, hoping to find fome Money. But he going on a little way, and finding nothing but Mens bones there, in great amazement inftantly came back again, quite frustrated of his hope. Tefte Johanne Stumpffio, in Chron. Helvetia.

T Incentius reports this out of Helinandus, lib. 3. cap. 27. that, In the Dioceffe of Colony there is a famous and great Palace, which looks over into the River Rhene, 'tis called Juvamen, where many Princes in former times being mer, fuddenly there came to them a small Bark, which being fastned to her neck, a Swan hall'd along with a filver chain. From thence a young Souldier not known to any of them skip't forth, and the Swan brought home the thip. Afterwards this Souldier married, and had children: At laft remaining in the fame Palace, and beholding the Swan comming with the fame Bark and chain, he prefently went into the Ship, and was never feen more, but his children abide there till this very day. From him in the Caftle Clivenf. (where you may fee alfo a very high and antient Tower, named Cygnea, on the top whereof the picture of a Swan is whurried to and fro) most bravely wrought, do they derive the antient pedigree of the Clivenf. Dukes, Vierius lib. 2.cap.46.de præstigins Damon.

51.

50.

18

VV Hen the Perfians (Megara being invaded) betook themfelves to the City Thebes to Mardonius their General, by Diana's pleasure 'twas dark on a fudden, they mistaking their way, went went on the Spirites, we next rock that grow fhooring day, thou no weap my. Ar extheir

In the matter rous peop niang ma iy, Hun made of Thefeus ver that

W fametin ftones at prevento THELE TTAKS fle Temaint huge at them th and Ag Lacus his Temple The flor time w brough WH T that the a great r Tells COD littleab

on the S hands fr

they belo

implored

ions,

ull impreca. fucha Mon. ht there was ed 3. kiffes r own form liure, otherto him that twice took ther hopedin pieces Nephews an Harlot, never after Soul, he of. that this ntient Rofalc of, to vas hid in cullody, ca mines, me wit-| things, icarenys into the n a little at amaze-10pe, Tejte

27. that, In eat Palace, men, where re came to Swan hall'd ouldier nor hit home the dren: Atlait an comming the Ship, and his very day, alfo a very whereof the wrought, do Vierius lik.

r General, by ag their ways weat

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

went on the hilly fide of the Country. There, by the delufions of Spirits, were armies fhooting datts; at the flroaks of them the next rocks did as 'twere groan again, they thinking they were men, that groaned by reafon of their wounds and hurts, never gave over fhooring, till they had fpent all their arrows. And when 'twas day, those of Megara being well-armed, fell upon them that had no weapons very violently, and flew a great number of their army. And for this fucceffefull event they erected an Image to Diana their Protectreffe. Paufantas in Atticis.

In the Battel of Marathon against the Persians, a certain rude, and rustick fellow, both by shape and habit, help't the Athenians, who when with his plough he had killed very many of those barbarous people, on a sudden he vanished away. And when the Athemians made enquiry, who he was, the Oracle made this answer onely, Honour noble Ethelaus. In that very place they set up a trophy made of white stone. Pausanias in Atticis. In the same fight These his Ghost was seen by many to invade the Medes. After that, the Athenians adored him as a God. Plutarchus, in ejus vita.

Hen the Persians under the command of Xerxes, went to Minervaes Chappel, which is before Apolloes Temple, at the fame time lightning fell down from Heaven upon them, and two ftones at the top of Parnafsus, making an huge noife, fell down, and prevented many of them. Whereupon they which were in Minervaes Chappel gave a great fhout, rejoycing much. The Barbavians fled, those of Beotia made known their ruine. And they which remained fled straightway to Beotia reporting that they faw two huge armed men following after them. The people of Baotia told them they were two noble Heroes of their own Country, Phylacus and Autonous, whofe Temples are to be feen. That which was Phylacus his Temple, was the fame way beyond Minervaes, but the Temple of Autonous was hard by Castalia under the top Hyampeus. The frones which fell down from Parna fus were in Herodotus his time whole fixt in Minervaes Temple porch, to which the Barbarians brought them. Herodotus lib. 2.

W Hil'st the Greeks were fighting against Xerxes at Salamin 'tis rumour'd, that a great light those from the City Eleuss, and that there was such a great noise in the fields of Thria, as 'twere of a great many men, that they heard them even to the Sea side, from tids company which made the noise, was seen a cloud arising, a little above the Earth, and to go from that continent, and to fall upon the Ships. Others faw as 'twere armed men reaching forth their hands from Aegina to help the Græcian ships: they did suppose that they belong'd to Aeacides, whom before the battel they had humbly implored. Plutarchus, in Themssele.

When

19

52.

53.

54.

W/Hen the Arcadians in a hostile manner came on the coasts of the City Elis, and the Inhabitants thereof had fet themfelves in battle array against them, 'tis reported that a woman which gave fuck to a man-child came to the chief officers of the Eleans and that the faid when the told them 'twas her child, that the was warn'd in a dream that he fhould be put to the Eleans as a Souldier to fight on their fide, the Generals took order that the naked Infant thould be rank't before the Colours, becaufe they were of opinion that the woman was to be credited. The Arcadians making the first onfer, the child in the open view of them all was Metamorphofed into a Snake : the Enemies being affrighted with this ftrange and prodigious fight, prefently ran away. This notable victory being obtained, he was named Sofipolis from the City which was preferved; this Snake was feen to hide himfelf. The battell being over, they raifed up a Temple, and dedicated it to its proper genius, Sofipolie. Honours were ordained for Lucina, becaufe by her means this child was born into the World. Paufanias libr.6.

56.

20

55.

W Hen the people of Locris skirmished with the Crotoni, in the Locrensians army were seen two young men on milk-white Horses; they were the foremost in the fight, who when they had conquer'd and subdued their enemics, never appeared more. The Victory in the same instant it was obtain'd, was publish'd at Athens, Lacedemon and Corinth, though places far remote from Locris and Croton, three hundred thousand of the people of Sybaris were flain by a small number, and the city it felf utterly destroyed. Fulgofus lib. 1. cap. 6.

57.

38.

The Eretrians on a time going from their own City Eulea by thip, and invading the Country Tanagrus, they fay that Mercuryled forth fome young firiplings, and himfelf alfo, who was but a youth, armed onely in a wreftlers habit, in comparison of the reft, forc'd the Euleans to take their heels, and for this very caufe they erected a Temple to Mercurim Promachus. Paufaniss in Basticis.

N the fight which the Romans had against Tarquinius, going to Rome, as the report goes, that Castor and Pallax were seen in the battel, and immediately after the fight was done, the horses being very hot, and trickling down with sweat; messengers also of the victory were seen in the Market place, where in stead of their well, they have a house. From whence they confectated a day to Castor and Pollux in the Ides of July. In the Romane war, Castor and Pollux were seen to wipe off the sweat of their horses at the lake Juturna, when their house, which was near the fountain was wide open. Valerim Maximus lib. 1. cap. 6. When A. Postbumius the Distatour, and Manilius Ostavus General of the Thuseulan forces, did with all might at the lake called Regillus encounter one with another, and neither for and Falm butthees the Roman ture at hr faint-heat awaybe my, and f 助政部法 and drew. (and and counter. uptoth twenty General lows, j lead ame madenfa be lound pelicyeq things of piece po covered. Estrition that his

E Mp. inapes, i inapes, i wah]a

IN that all in 2 in she a times flic facures

ns,

e coaffs of themfelves nan which the Eleans at the was a Souldier naked Inere of opiis making vas Metawith this s notable ity which ie battell ts proper becauie Panfassian

h in the k-white hey had ore. The at Athens, Locris and were flain h. Fulgojur

y Eulea by that Mercuto was but nof the reft, caufe they Benicis.

ins, going to feen in the he horfes bers alfo of the of their well, day to Caffin or and Polloc lake Jutarna, ide open. Fa-Diffatour, and with all might by and pether

and cunning delusions of Devils.

for a long time was worked, Caltor and Pollax, Champions for the Romane party appearing, utterly routed all their men of War. Idem. lib. 1. cap. 8.

T Hen the Brutii and Lucani with inveterate hatred, and main firength, endeavoured to deftroy the City Thurina, and Fabritius Lucinus, Cof. chiefly by his care would preferve it fafe, but the event was doubtfull, both armies being met in one place, the Romans not daring to enter the fight, a young man of good ftature at first began to exhort them to take courage, then finding them faint-hearted, and very backward, up he takes the ladder, and away he went to the enemies tents, through the midft of their army, and scales their bulwark. Then crying out with a loud voice that he had made the first step to the victory, and thus he enticed and drew on the Romans to take the Enemies Garrison, and the Lucani and Brutii to defend their own, thus they flood doubtfull to encounter. But he again by the inftigation of his harneffe, delivered up to the Romans their proftrate enemies to be flain and taken. For ewenty thousand were killed, five thousand with Statius Statilius General of their Country, were taken, with three and twenty Colours. The day after when Cof. had told him that he referved a garland amongst the renowned, for him, of whole industry he had made ule by whom their quarters were suppress, and he could not be found that could ask fuch a reward. 'Tis likewife known and believed, that Mars was propitious to the Romans. Among other things of this nature, thefe are manifest and clear tokens, his headpiece pointed with two fpires, wherewith his heavenly pare was covered, was allo one Argument. Therefore by the command of Fabritius, supplication was made to Mars, and testimonial given that his helping hand was forgotten by all the Souldiers, crown'd with lawrells with great jollity. Valerius lib. 1. cap. 8.

E Mpufa or Omerale, an evil ghoft, fent by Hecate to them that are in diffrefle, becaufe the can transform her felf into divers thapes, thence called to, becaufe it goes with one foot, the other is made of braffe, or is an Affes foot. Some thought it appeared at noon; when factifices were offered to the dead. Ariftophanes, in Ranis. Dialog. But, I fee a great beaft; What manner of one? An ugly one, and of many thapes. For now 'tis an Oxe, now a Mule, another while a very handfome woman. Where is it? I'le go near to it. But now 'tis no woman, 'tis now a dog; then 'tis Empufa; all his face is as 'twere on fire, and he hath a foot of Braffe. Suidas.

I N that Lybia which enclose the Systes, fometimes and most of all in a calm feason, do appear thapes of feverall living creatures in the Ayre, fome of which are still, fome fir : and these fometimes flie from one, fometimes follow after one, but all of a large flature; they terrifie and affright the ignorant. But they that follow

61.

60.

21

59.

low after, environ him they catch, laying cold paws upon him. Diodorus lib.3.cap.4.

The Orthomeii commonly report of Alleon, that there is a field haunted by that Ghoft, which refted on that flone; (which is between the Plateans and Megarans). Wherefore confulting Apolloes Oracle, they were charged to bury the reliques or remainders, if they found any, and moreover that they flould fasten that reprefentation of a Goblin, which was made of Brafle, unto a stone. Paufanias in Basticis.

63.

64.

65.

60.

22

62.

N Parnassus a hill of Baotia dedicated to Apollo, Bacchus his feasis are every other year folemnized, and there do meet and are to be feen a numerous company of Satyrs, which may be heard for the most part to speak in their own language; there is Musick likewife to be heard. Macrobius lib. 1. Saturnal. cap. 18.

They fay, Gellus had a maid that died young, and 'tis generally believed her ghost walks to and fro at Lesbos, haunting children; whereupon they impute to this Gellus the death of any children, that die in their minority. Hence comes the Proverb, Puerorum amans Gello, Erasmus, in Adagiis.

Trabo in the fixth book of his Geography relates it. That Temefe Was the chiefest City of Brutia from Laus, called from him afterward Templa, which being built by the Aufonians, the Atolians Theas his companions did then enjoy, and when they were expelled thence, the Brutii: at laft Hannibal and the Romans utterly defiroyed it. Nere it, was a chappel befer with Olive trees dedicated to one Polites, Hlyßes his affociate. This man, because he was affronted by the Barbarians, was very irefull against them; fo that it was turned into a Proverb, and they would usually fay, Take beed Temeffaus his Ghost is a coming. Then when the Locri and Epizephyrii poffest it, there was one Euthymus, as faith Alian, that came thither out of Italy, a famous champion, and mighty ftrong, who also carried about with him a ftone of an huge magnitude, which he used to thew the Locri. He encountered with Polites, and return's from the duel victor, and fo his neighbours by his means were freed from paying tribute Money, which he was wont to force from them. He also made him to return with interest, what soever he had taken away from them. And from hence he thinks arole this Proverb To them that make wicked and unlawfull gain, that Temeffæus bis genias would come to them, whereby they fignified, that fome time or other they must with usury pay back again those things which they had wrongfully, and by fraud or force, taken from them. Paufanias in Eliacis, tells the ftory fomewhat otherwife, to wit, that a comrade of uly es, was for ravishing a Virgin kill'd, and for that very fact his Goblins, (unleffe they were yearly appealed by offering a Virgin) used to be very fierce and angry, and they spared no Sex, nor Age.

T Her inse rake calie, but lis, 30, cap

Before faid in the untill the NErri ly alwaic the Sou hamted Magicia treat the peat at of them, the Cry and gr. affright to his cl to pacifi was too a great mumb

Zingert, aipert, s Boar, brightne bis horfe boar into natiery,

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

Age. And him indeed the common people do believe to be the genius of that place which Euthymus (that noble Champion) returning from Teme fa suppress, by setting at liberty, and marrying that Virgin, which they had promifed. Erafmus, in Chiliadibus.

Here is an Ille of Aga, from whence the Agaan Sea took its name, confectated to Neptune, wherein fcarce any one could take any reft. Nicocrates told this ex phantafmatum Dei occur aculis, but now and then they are disturbed and cannot fleep. Celius lib. 30. cap. 9. A. L.

BEfore that C. Cefar Caligula his body was interred, the Gar-diners were haunted and difquiered with fpirits. And they faid in that house where he died they were every night affrighted untill the house was burnt to the ground. Suetonius.

Ero murthered his Mother Agrippina, finding out, and fevere-Nly chaltening him for what he had faid and done. But he was alwaics after troubled in Confcience for that wicked act, although the Souldiers, Senate, and people encouraged him in it, and gave him many thanks for to doing : he often confessed that he was haunted with his Mother's ghoft, and beaten with furies. The Magicians preparing a facrifice, heattempted to call upon and inareat the Gods. In the pilgrimage to Greece he did not dare to appear at the folemnities of the Eleusinians, because at the beginning of them, the wicked and prophane were fummoned by the call of the Cryer. Suctonius.

Tho the Emperour (when Galba was flain) beginning his reign with tortures and terrours, the first night was so troublesome and grievous to him, that not fleeping, on a fudden being horribly affrighted, he groaned heavily, and was found by them which went to his chamber, lying on the floor. Whereupon he endeavoured to pacific and allwage Galba his ghofts, by whom he thought he was troubled and diffurbed. The next day deviling what to do a great tempest arose, he falling down ever and anon, mutter'd and mumbled : riyap pos sas paspois dorois, Suctonius.

Onaras relateth out of Thracefius, Ifaacius Comnenus the Empecour hunting about Neapolis law a wild boar of a fearfull atpect, which (loofening his horfes reins) he follow'd, as fast as he could, plunging into the Sea it vanished, some judged it not to be a Boar, but some Diabolical spirit : In this interim, a sudden brightneffelike lightning, fo dazled the Emperour that striking. his horfe for fear, and foaming at the mouth, he was laid all along on the ground in an amaze, and from thence was carried in a filhers boat into the Kings Palace; he afterwards betook himfelf to a Monaftery. Zonaras.

68.

69.

700

It

67.

23

66.

375 2

upon him.

te is a field

st; (which Diritig Apol-

remainden,

that repretoge, Pas-

his feafis

nd are to

heard for

s Mulick

generally

children;

children,

Patrorum

nat Tenteje

n him at-

e VEtolians

e expelled y defitoyed

ted to one

fronted by

t was tur-

red Temel-

septyrn pol-

me thisher

hoalfo car-

ich he uter

erurn' J from e freed from n them. He had taken his Proverb

rus bis gemin

me of other

ch they had

Paulana it

at a comrade

ut very fact

fering a Virt no Sex, per 1 no Sex, per

BLB

T is reported by Augustinus, that the Tribune Hesperius had a plat of ground in the territory Fusalensis, which was forely haunted by evill spirits, so that the fervants and brute beasts were grievously tormented : being therefore necessitated by this Domestick milery, he went to the Elders of the Church, and requested that fome of them would vouchsafe to read prayers there. One of them went his way thither, and prayed fervently, and zealously, he also administred the Lords Supper there, and immediately that vexatious crew of hobgoblins gave over coming. Libro de civitate Dei wigesimo, 2. capite 8.

72.

73.

* 2.4

24

71.

Severus Sulpitius writes in the life of Martin his first book, and likewife in Clemens his life, That a certain Monk an hermit, whofe father lived hard by him, who not loving his fon carryed a hatchet with him, wherewith he cut down trees, to carry home as he returned; Upon which the Devill in the shape of an Angell appeared to this Monk, then in the form of his Father he was coming to him, with a hatchet to kill him, telling him, and averring he came to that end and purpose, an Hermit advising him to prevent his intent and resolution, and rather first to kill him, then be killed by him. Thinking therefore his father comming towards him, and faluting him, to be the Devill, presently killed him, and on the other fide, the Devill instantly throtles the Monk.

Nder the Emperour Ludovicus the 3d, the City Moguntia was miferably haunted with a dæmoniall spirit. There is in Germany, and in the third part of Gallia, a little from the town Bingu, where the River Navas and Rhene meet, a country town commonly called by the name of Camonis, quafi caput montium, the highest mountain. There in the year 858. a stragling fugitive spirit did many strange miracles, and plaid many jugling tricks, fo that he was a great vexation and trouble to the Inhabitants. First he was a deadly dangerous ghoft, which none could fee, throwing fiones at men, and knocking at their dores. Anon in the thape of a most pefilent and wicked genius, lying lurking in corners, and Prophecying, discovering robberies, most infamously branding all manner of delicts, and ftirring up strife and contention among them. By degrees he burnt down their barns, and fmall cottages ; to one he was more vexatious, haunting him wherefoever he went, and at laft fet his house on fire : And that he might incense all the neighbour+: hood against this innocent man to put him to death, this abominable forger of lies bragg'd up and down, 'Twas for his impicues, that this place was fo infamous and exectable. He was made to fland all night in the cold, for their night hobgoblin by force kept this good man from his house. He to satisfie his neighbours, carried a hot Iron in his hand, and receiving no hurt thereby, he approved himfelf guiltleffe, yet nevertheleffe his corn being cock't up in the fields; This wicked and forlorn creature burnt down his 51 dwelling close

Nibe

charge

Inhabi

Elig-d

Baden-Württemberg

ions,

had a plat ly haunted were grie. Domethick wefted that the of them ly, he allo that vexa-

ivitate Dei

book, and hermit, carryed a home as Angell vas comaverring to prethen be towards him, and untra was is in Ger-NI Bingu, commonly the highest fpirir did fo that he irft he was ng ftones at a most pe-Prophecymanner of icm. By deone he was and at lait neighbourthis abomis impieuces was made to y force kept hbours, carreby, he aping cock's up nt down his dwelling

and cunning delusions of Devils.

dwelling houfe; And when he perfifted daily more and more fpightfull, the Townefmen bring the caufe before their Governour, or Bithop. The Priefts were to purifie and expiate their fields, and Town with holy and devout prayers, and holy water. This wicked and difturbed fpirit at first was opposite and flubborn, wounding fome with stones, but being inchanted with divine hymnes, and by prevalent prayers conjured, was at last hush't, and was never after feen. When these were gone, came another turbulent Ghost, and faith, While those bald Priests mumbled over and over, I know not what, I hid my self under one of their furpliss, and heard him by name to take notice of him, who the night before through my perfwasion lay with his hosts daughter. When this relation was done, making a great howling, the Ghost departed from those quarters, and vanished up into the Ayre. Sigerbertus Chron. Hirfaug. Antoniaus, A centinus lib.4.

IN the Northern parts, there were night-walkers, that used to enclose and firangely to diffurb the field-keepers, looking to their charge, with prodigious and wonderfull fights of divers kinds, the inhabitants thereabouts cal'd this nightly sports of Monsters, The Elves-daunce: of whom this is their opinion, that their Souls, who were inclin'd to carnall pleasures and delights, being once parted from the body, rove up and down the world. Amongst the number of which they reckon them to be, which yet in this our age do apply themselves in mans shape to the fervices of men, taking pains by night, and looking to their horfes and flocks; you may see the footsteps verily fometimes in the graffe in a dewy morning, but fometimes they are utterly consumed. Olaus Megnus libro 3.cap.11. Septentrional, gentium.

Here is a Caffle in the coafts of Finlandia, under the fame dominion of Suicia, 'tis called the New-Caffle, becaule built with admirable and rare workmanship, infomuch, that 'ris doubted, whether by Nature or Art : For 'tis feituated on a round mountain, having onely one ingreffe, and another cgreffe on the Weft. This by a great piece of Timber, fastned with great Iron chains which by strong labour every day, by the help of some pulleys, by reason of the impetuous waters, is in the night time attracted by the keepers to one fide of the river. By this caftle runs an immenfe and vaft River, of an unknown profundity, coming out from a white pool, which is cauled by a piece of ground, of a black colour, especially in the mote about this Tower, that hach and engenders fishes all black, and yet of a good and favoury rellifh. But at last passing by Viburgus it makes the Lake to be black. At this River firange fights are now and then to be feen, and when the governours of the Caffle or any Souldiers are near death, there appears one in the night-time playing upon an Harp, in the midft of the waters, you may allo hear him. Olaus lib. 20. cap. 19, 6 20.

74.

25

75.

In

BADISCHE

BLB

N Ilandia an Ifland under the Artick Pole, there is a Promontory, which like the hill Ætna is continually burning, and there is thought to be the place either to punifh and torture, or difcharge all wretched Souls. For there the Visions of all, which fuffer a violent death do appear, so manifest and apparent to any they meet of their own acquaintance, as if they were alive, they take them by their right hand, not knowing they are dead; neither do they apprehend themselves to be in an errour, till their spirits vanish away. The inhabitants of the place do much prognosticate the destiny of their Rulers and Governours, and whatsoever is done in the farthest part of the World, by the revelations of these appearances. Idem lib, 2.cap.2.

Ladiflaus the first, King of the Polonians, belieged Naclus the Atrong Caftle of the Pomerans. There in a Moon-fhiny night, the watches often faw troops as 'twere of armed men, riding up out of their open camps, and rushing upon the camps of the Polonians. When they often did thus, the Polonians were angry, and feem'd to be disquiered, but dare not at all come forth into open battell. On a night when news were brought them that the enemies were come again, they came forth on a heap out of their camp all in a rage, and running to and tro affaulted them a great way to no purpole, They which were belieged I earing of the Polonian riot and having prepared a way for their excursion, fuddenly brake out upon them, and threw wild fire among their works and Cottages, which were covered with firaw and reed, which quickly difperfing it felf in many places, and few remaining in the Caffle to defend it, cafily burnt their works with a great part of the Caftle. They affirm that the night-Ghofts, representing an Army in a hoftile manner, were they, which by Gods permiffion vext and perplext the Polonians. Being thus worfted, the Polonians, becaule Winter was very tharp in those Regions, and now at hand, and their houses were loft and gone, without which they were not able to endure the violence and injury of the winter weather, by these affrights likewife, and fudden alterations they were made religious, but the Nath went from thence, not being able to compasse their defign. Cromerus lib.3. Hiftor. Polon.

78.

26

76.

2 9

77.

2

IN the Countrey named Cracovienfis, at a very fpacious Lake, by reafon of the diffurbance of fome evill fpirits, neither fit for fifhing, nor any other ufe of Man, being very hard frozen in the Winter; they fay that in the year 1278, the neighbours and Priefls came together, bringing with them their Colours, Crucifixes, and fome other holy and confectated things wherewith to force and expell them thence, that they might more freely and fecurely recreate themfelves in fifhing, but throwing in their Net, at the fift draught, the fifthermen being at fitife one with another, they drew forth but three fmall fifthes onely, the one of them an ill-fhap'd terAfar P brain o fome I his acqua ther be w hitm.

All credit, t be was (drawin being as yet liktselle tery pal from his tear that But he a icems) i I be wo thebod tic wast andtak them of Thisgo death's tkewife bare for

rible

1075,

s a Promonto. g, and there mute, or difof all, which warent to any alive, they ead; neither their fpirits rognofficate ever is done f thele ap-

Naclus the ny night, nding up he Poloniogry, and into open the coecit camp at way to onian rior brake out Cottages, dilperling to detend file, They n a hoffile perplext the Winter was their houses to endure ife affrights ous, but the their defign.

us Lake, by er fit for fifain the Wins and Prießs Crucifixes, a to knoe and t fecurely ret, at the first s, at the first s, they drew II-fhap'd ret-

and cunning delusions of Devils.

rible Monfter with a Goats head, and eyes flaming like fire. At which all being in an amaze, and running away; That fpectrall plunged himfelf under the Ice, and running to and fro in the Lake, made a terrible noife and outery, and breathing on fome of the company, they were miferably ulcerated. Cromerus lib. 9.

Jafon Pratenfis in his 29th Chapter tells us a flory of a diffemper'd brain of a Prieft, which was troubled with the difeafe called by fome Incubus, or the Mare, and imagined he faw a Woman of his acquaintance coming to him, which laying upon him whether he would or no, did most grievously afflict and torment him.

Lexander in his fecond book of his Merry dayes, writes of Alexander, that he had an intimate friend of an undoubted credit, that took upon him the care of his friends funerall, and as he was going from thence to Rome from whence he came, night drawing on, he turn'd into the next Inne in the road, and there being very weary, he went to bed. And being all alone, and not as yet fetled to fleep, he faid he faw on a fudden the fimilitude or likenefle of his friend which lately died, comming towards him very pale and lean, just like him] in the mouth, as he last parted from him when he lay fick, whom looking withly upon for very fear that he was in, he was not himfelf, he asked him who he was? But he answering nothing, pull'd off his clothes, and went (as it feems) into the fame bed where he lay, and came close to him, as if he would hug him. The other almost half dead for fear, went to the bed fide, and would not let him come nigh him, he feeing that he was rejected, looks upon him with a ftern and unufuall afpect, and taking up his clothes, prefently role out of bed, and putting them on, and his shooes, went away, and was never seen again. This good man being thus affrighted was deadly fick, and even at death's dore. To that which hath been already spoken, he faid likewife, that when he was ftrugling with him in bed, he felt his bare foot fo cold, as no Ice could be colder.

Gordian my friend, faith the fame Alexander, a man of an approved truft, related to me, when with his comrade he went to the City Arezzo, in his journey, as it fell out, they wandred far out of the way, by reafon of many turnings and by places, fo that they faw no plough'd or Arable ground, but onely Woods, Groves, and ina cceffible places were in their fight, and folitude it felf was enough to terrifie them, the Sun therefore approaching the Weftern circuit, being weary by their hard travell they fate down together, and within a while they thought they heard a mans tongue, which going after, on the next hill they efpy'd three men of a huge wild and terrible form, not of the faihion of men, in black long Cloaks, in a fad and mourning habit, their beard and hair hanging down to the ground, who calling and manking the term of a base of the ground and terrible form.

81.

Lighter

27

Cal 1

79.

king fignes to them, had almost perfwaded and enticed them to them, but in that interim greater then these appeared of an immense bulk and stature of body, far exceeding mans, and another also appeared of the same shape, stark naked, leaping and skipping up and down most strangely, with other unseemly deportments at which sight they being clearly discouraged, fled away and pasfing that rugged and perilous way, could scarce find again that homely Inne where they lodg'd.

82.

28

THe fame Alexander mentions ftories of the fame nature in his 4th book, and 9th chapter, in these words. A very good friend of mine lately, of a good disposition, and excellent repute, told me what a ftrange thing, and wonderfull to be related befell him, averring and confirming the truth thercof by many fufficient testimonials, (viz) that when he lodg'd at Neapolis with his kinfman and acquaintance : at mid-night I heard one crying, and calling for help, when I had lighted a candle, I ran to him to know what the matter was, and there I beheld the Devill and one of his Furies, laying violent hands upon a youth in the road-way crying out, and firugling with them; he poor man run to him, when he came neer him and gat good hold on his doublet and hand, and along time pulling and tugging with them to no purpole, at last he calld upon God for help, & with much ado he fet him at liberty. When he had entertained this young man at his home which was much troubled in mind, he had not power to go from him. For he was for imerous and horribly affrighted, that he knew not what he did, believing alwaies he faw that ipeetral before him. In fine when he came to himfelf, he told the whole ftory from the begining how it was. He was one of a perverse and wicked conversation, a despiser of God, and disobedient to his Parents, whom he had at that time reviled, railed against, and contumclioufly reproached. When they bleffed him, he went from them most direfully cutfing.

83.

T Homas Monachus, a good man, of whole honefty and fidelity I have large experience: told me ferioufly, when he was in a Monaftery, and Cloyfters in the Mountain of Lucania, he difcourfed with many, and after many hard fpeeches, and brablings being troubled in mind he went alone by himfelf through the woods, where he met one in the fhape of a man, of a grim look, an ugly and cruel afpect, a black beard, a long coat. Who being asked why he firagled alone out of the way? anfwered, that he had loft his horfe, which he ufed to ride upon, and he thought he was firayed into the next fields: and when through many windings and turnings they went together to look this horfe, they came to a River in the Channell whereof were many obfeure and dangerous gulphs. Whereupon Monachus, that he might the better paffe over, pul'd off his fhooes, the other was very earneft with him to get upon his fhoulders, and he would carry him over. He yield-

Baden-Württemberg

109

dinghist

Fordy al

ment

101(2)1

prelently

noile, a

from th fuch and croca Soc

this devi

of this R

Billio

amongft

bred, and his tath

he calls

thinks

Inhis,

ofarm

steping

and troi

he had aniwerd

cord to a City,

they la

Frayers

the cha

down

young

Pented with at

Wasag

V

Was a

which thing,

he pure

Ver this

autwer

him, h

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

ding his affent, gat faft about the others neck, that went into the Foord, and efpying his feet not to be like other mens, but of a foul and ugly thape. Taking notice thereof he was terribly affrighted and cal'd upon Providence for help, which when he heard, he faid, prefently that ugly vition vanifht quite away, with a querulous noife, and fo firong a whirl-wind, that it blew up an Oak not far from thence by the roots, not breaking the boughs; but he was in fuch an amaze, that he lay all along, a long time, as 'twere without a Soul, and unleffe he had forefeen it, he was perfwaded that this devill would have caft him headlong into the deepeft gulphs of this River.

Ht of all that ever I heard or faw, that was the most remark-Dable, which of late most certainly happened at Rome, when amongst the Gabii a certain desperate youth of mean descent, illbred, and of a wicked life, had upbraided, taunted, and defamed his father, and being therefore toft and troubled with these furies, he calls on the Devill, to whom he had devoted himfelf, and thinks to go to Rome, to plot fome wicked defign against his father. In his journey he meets the Devill like fome fowre lookt fellow, of an uncompt beard and locks; and an old decayed vefture, who keeping him company, demands of him the caufe of his fadneffe and trouble, he replyed that his father and he had fome words, but he had refolved a wicked defign on him. To whom the Devill answered, that he should have the fame fortune, and he would proceed to vindicatchis quarrels. Night approaching, they come to a City, they turn into the first Inne they come at, and together they lay, the one being fast asleep, the other awake was faying his prayers. Whereupon that most ugly Diabolicall fury brake forth the chamber with fuch might, noife, and violence, that he pul'd down the rafters, top of the house, and brake all the Tyles. This young man being affrighted, and almost kill'd at this fight, repented him of his forepast life and vitious courfe, endewed now with another fpirit, leading the remainder of his life afar off, and was a good example. Hec ille.

W Hen Alexander the Lawyer of the City Naples lay fick in his bed at Rome, he faw plainly before him as he was awake the fpecies of a woman of an excellent beauty: which when he looked upon, a long while musing, faying nothing, and bethinking himfelf he might be deceived. But when he perceived his fenfes to be fresh and lively, and that the shape never flirred from him, askt her who she was, the smilling a little, and answering what he had said, as though the intended to mock him, having a long time beheld him, went away. Alexander, lib. 2. cap. 9.

The

29

84.

85.

ced them to d of an imand another and skipping deportments ay and pafagain that ture in his very good ent repute, ited befell y lufficient his kiniand calto know ne of his ay crying when he land, and e, at lait at liberty. which was him, for N DOT What n. In nne the beginonveriation, om he had y reproachift direfully and fidelity he was in ania, he difnd brablings through the grim look, Who being red, that he thought he he thought he he and dangehe better pake with him to tr. He yielding 86.

87 ...

30

THe fpirits which go to and fro in houfes, are either harmleffe, or fierce and cruel ones, the harmleffe may be termed Lares which at midnight chiefly haunt houses, and seem by some kind of noife to do fomething, when as indeed they do nothing. wierus writes, that when he was a child, those which are called Lares, were often heard in the dwellings of his progenitors, which the day before they came to them, the Merchants buying Hops, ufed to imitate the found and noife of bags roll'd down the flairs, (by which trick his father gain'd much) it being alwaies a fortunate and trucomen. To these were like those which the Germans call Guteli from the good they do, especially to them that watch and look to cattle, feldome appearing to any other. And not differing from those, they call Trullae, who in a counterfeit habit, as well womans as mans in many other nations; but chiefly among the Suione. Now they which are cruell, and tormenting fpirits are called Larve, which every way affright and diffurb the whole Family.

IN the mettal-mines both kinds are to be found, Tefte Georgio Agricola libro de animantibus fubterraneis. And the fierce ones indeed, or they which are terrible to look upon, most commonly moleft and are obnoxious to the mettal-men. Such an one was Annebergius that Hobgoblin, which killed twelve labourers, or more at a blaft in the Cave, that is called Corona Rofacea, left by that name, although it abounded with Silver, this puffe came forth by opening his mouth when he appeared like a horfe, having a long neck, and horrible eyes. Such another was alfo Schneebergius that Ghoft, clad in a black hood, who in the Mine named Georgian, fcimated one of the workmen which he took from the ground, in the top of that concavity, which heretofore was fertile of filver, crushing together his body. Judaus was by one of these spirits fore't from a very commodious Mine among the Turce, which often appeared to them like a Goat, having Golden horns. But fome of the Germans, and likewife the Greeks call the quiet and gentle fpirits, Cobalos, in that they are imitatours of men, for they thew themfelves merry, they laugh, and feem to do many things when they are doing nothing at all. Others call them Small men of the mountains, because they appear as dwarfs, 3. spans long. They feem to be drowfy dotards, habited like the metral-men, Theie are inoffenfive to them, although fometimes perhaps they may provoke the workmen with throwing gravell, but they never hurt them unleffe by jecting or railing they provoke them. They are chiefly feen to. work, or haunt those Caves out of which mettals may be digged or at least-wife they hope fo. Therefore these labourers are not frighted from their work, but hereby promifing themfelves good fucceffe, they are more chearfull, and work more eagerly, withing

Theodofius

He

lare

ues,

notoocly

Sous ma

the Emp

her lest,

took lo ha

D. Elavia

bin bauni

13th day

ticm, 25

Tis r.po

in the Ay

countera

Ayre, b

uled to a

Am

and by h

labletts

Manded,

torment Imail (p)

Maiters

thought

underfu

Counter

10102.0

milerab.

te obliczy

fall, and

coald ac

lon, wa

there a

the new

he was ftrongly

prilon,

thrulting

that he p

lonewh

to be del told him he could perate₂ a

BLB

BADISCHE

LANDESBIBLIOTHEK

toms,

r harmleffe. ermed Lares tome kind of hing. Wierw alled Lares, which the Hops, ufed fiairs, (by a fortunate ermans call watch and differing , as well mong the ng fpirits furb the e Georgio ones inmmonly vas Anor more by that forth by ng a long gius that rgian, Iciind, in the ver, cruinirits forc't often apt lome of gentle ipihew themwhen they the mouncy feem to e are inotrovoke the m unicije fly icen to be digged ers are not felves good y, withing

Threadofias

BLB

ana cunning delutions of Devils.

Heodofius the Emperour, having spent and exhausted his treafure by continual Wars, imposed a new subsidy upon his Cities, onely the city Antioch refused to make paiment of it : and

31

89.

notonely fo, but having made a mutiny, the people in a contumelious manner, drew up and down the City, the Image of Placella the Empresse (though already dead) fitting and faitning a rope to her feet. Which villanous act the Emperour, as well he might, took fo hainously, that (unlesse being personal by the intreaties of D. Flaviasus the Bishop, and the authority of D. Ambrosius, he had bin bound by oath to determine nothing against offenders, till the 13th day was over) he had made there also a great Massacre among them, as he had done at The falonica. Nicepborus lib. 12. cap. 42. ² Tis reported that night before this mutiny, a tall woman was seen in the Ayre, huge and very great, of a most dreadfull and fearfull countenance, which running through the fireers of the City in the Ayre, beat the Ayre with her fan, making such a noise, as they used to do, which in dark places excite beafts to rage. Idem lib. 9. cap. 42.

Mong the Italians there was a Governour of a City, which most proudly and covetoully domineer'd over his Citizens, and by his high words, and fierce deeds was wont to punish his fubjects in a flavish manner, though they did those things he commanded, and performed them well, yet for imall caules did he torment or fine them. By chance a good honeft fellow, though of imall substance, poor, and despicable, did to beat his Lord and Mafters greyhound, whereof he was wonderfully carefull, that he thought for it he fhould be put to death. When the Governour understood it, being very angry, and with a stern and menacing countenance grievoully chiding him, commanded him to be call into a most bale prison, and there being fail bound, was kept in a milerable cuftody. After fome dayes came they who were willing to observe his commands, as they used to do, the prison dore being fast, and as well the dores as every passage made close, that he could not get forth, they could find him no where within the Priion, who learching a long time, and he appeared not, neither was there any ftep or tymptome of his eleapero be feen, they brought the news to their Governour : which feeming to him incredible, he was ftrangely amazed. Within three dayes the fame dores being ftrongly barr'd, that very fame he, which of late was deputed to prifon, every one being ignorant thereof, was again forc't and thrust into the fame Prison, and like to one in an amaze, requested that he might with all speed be admitted to his Lord, for he had fomewhat of confequence totell him in all hafte, which was not to be delayed. And when he was prefently brought to him, he told him he was releafed by fome of the infernall crew, that fince he could not endure the uglinefie of the Prilon, he was grown defperate, and being afraid of his doom, not knowing what to do, he cal'd call'd to an evill ipirit, that he would be helpfull to him, and releafe him out of that ill-favoured dungeon. A little while after the Devill appeared to him in the fame Prifon, of a deformed fhape and terrible countenance, and that he had agreed with him that he should free him from thence and all Iron bolts and locks, and should cast him into the infernall places, great depths, and the lowest part of the Earth, there he might view and behold all things, the torments of the wicked and their ungodly places : their eternal darkneffe and miferies, loathfome and horrible corners, their Kings and chief Rulers, were tortured, covered, as 'twere with thick darkneffe, and tormented with the burning lights of furies: he faw alfo the Bishops with their mitres and robes, richly adorn'd and beautified with gems, and many other wretched effigies of all forts, ages, and ranks, afflicted in feverall habits, lying along in profound and deep gulphs, punish'd in eternall torments, and their damned wickedneffes everlaftingly tormented with grief and wo, amongft whom he had noted many which he knew in their lifetime, and especially an intimate and familiar friend of his, who while he was living was his companion, and he faid to him fpeaking unto him, he knew him very well, and calmly required of him, what bufineffe he had there, and what he expected there. He making answer, that his country was by hard duties and rigid government enthralled, was charged, to tell the Governour, and bid him have a care, that he did fo no more, and that he thould not oppreffe his fubjects by burthenfome taxes, and unjust toll-money, for he foretold him that there was a place, which he faw not far off lefr for him. And that he might not doubt his promise, he faith that he thould call to mind, their private confultation and mutuall agreement, which they made when they were Souldiers together, whereof no body knew; which when he had readily declared and recited not onely what was faid and covenanted, but every word, and their promifes, whereby they were both obliged to each other : the governour hearing these things in order, being more ferious, and attentive, was wonderfully amazed, and great trembling fell upon him, when he confidered how those things, which were difclos'd to him alone, and never to any other, that dull pate, and blockith fellow, as 'were infpired with fome deity, fhould know them, and repeat them with an undaunted look. To this miracle alfo is added, That he asked him, with whom he was talking with in Hell, who appeared in handfome and neat habit and attire, whether they were any wayes punish't, that went in rich apparell, and veftments of Gold; he replyed, with everlafting burning and amongst the greatest torments they were with continuall wo opprefied and tormented, and that which before glittered with Gold and Purple, was now all flame and fire. He willing to make triall thereof, put his hand nearer to the Purple, being warned by him not to touch it, and yet it could not be, but by the blaft of hear, the palm of his hand which he put forth to the Purple, was on fire. For it was almost wasted with blifters and vile Ulcers, as with

32

A Cr. med Ta but in' thather whereo bylinke by thurcos

htm, ar

Distan

BELLEOI

Dand. Leinan Da Kiar En Court Lifted ci an. Or natione a ana cunning delusions of Devils.

33

90.

91.

92.

93.

with some poylon. St. Anthonies fire, or some other mischief, that feemed to spread it felt further and further. Moreover they which went unto him, relate that he, after he was got from Hell, was fore troubled in mind, and his fenses of hearing and feeing were very much stupefied, that he was alway muting, feldome spake a word (though oftentimes ask't). But he came home with so flern an aspect, and so deformed a countenance, that whom his wife and children very well knew; after he came from thence, he was so much altered in his face, and all parts of his body, that they could hardly believe he was the same man, and oftentimes his acquaintance and kindred spake to him, weeping for his ugliness, and the mans Idea so deformedly altered; he had fearce time to dispose of his substance, and to give good counfell to his children before his death. Alexander libro 6. cap. 21. Genial Dier.

A Certain Hetrurian ploughing in the fields belonging to the Tarquinii, his Plough going too deep into the ground, one named Tages, as the flory goes, brake forth in flature like a child, but in Wifedome a grave and diferent Senatour, and fpake to him that held the Plough, he being affrighted, cry'd out. At the noife whereof, at the first there was a great concourse of neighbours, then by little, and little the rumour being farther spread abroad, within few dayes all Hetruria was affembled into that field. All hearing this child, that he spake many things, his words were carefully observed and written down, from which by long experience came all their divination; yet so, that if it spread to any other Nations, the Hetrurians made most and chief account thereof. Francifem Petrarcha.

Defar Augustus, and having with Germany by the name of Cafar Augustus, and having fubdued the greatest part thereof, refolved to go forward, a very great woman met with him, and feemed to fay to him. Whither goest thou infatiable Drafus? Is it not in the power of the fates to fee all these things? but go thy wayes, for now the end both of thy life and works is at hand. Then going home, he fell into a difease, whereof he died. Leonards.

Dunftan an English Abbot, when by the fourtilous gestures of an Hobgoblin leaping and skipping before him, he understood that Edmund King of England was dead, he hastned to the Kings Court, and in the middle of his journey he was better certified concerning the Kings death. Vincentius lib. 24. cap. 71.

A Drianus Patricius being fent from Bafilius the Emperour against the Carthagenians had in Peloponefus fome Ships in their station. On a certain night the shepheards heard those spirits that haunt thereabouts speaking one to another, and faying, That the day before the Sicilians or Syracufe were taken and destroyed. This rumour um, and rewhile after ormed fhape th him that locks, and ths, and the ld all things, heir crernal ters, their twere with s of furies: hly adorn'd figies of all g along in and their and wo, their lifehis, who im speakd of him, Hemadgovernd bid him ot opprelle sey, for he far off lefr faith that nd mutuall rs together, eclared and every word, each other: ore ferious, mbling fell h were dil-Il pare, and hould know o this mirahe was talkat habit and went in rich rlafting burh continual littered with ling to make g warned by the blaft of Purple, was ile Ulcers, as mour went up and down from one to another, and at last it came to Adrian, who calling the shepheards to him, and examining them finds the report which was brought to him, confirmed by their words, that he might also by his own ears approve the truth of the news, the shepheards bring them to the place, where making enquiry of the spirits, and what they were doing, he heard them say that the Syracufa were taken. Cedrenue.

BLB

Ne Polycritus an Atolian, made by the people chief governour of Etolia for three years, married Locrides for her vertue fake, with whom he flept three nights, In the fourth he died. The woman continued a widow at home. And when her time to be brought to bed was at hand, the was delivered of an Hermophrodite, a wonderfull strange monster, The neighbours being affrighted at this chance, brought forth the young child into the marker, and calling an affembly, and gathering together the Priefts and infpectors of Monfters, they confulted about it. Some of them faid it did toretell fome difcord between the Etolians, and the Locrensians. For the young one was divided, part was of the Mother Locrides, and part of the father Atolus : Others were of opinion that the Mother flould with her young one be carried out of Ator lia, and burnt. While they are advising on these things, on a fudden Polycritte which lately died, was among the rabble, clad in a black veftment, he fpake to the Citizens which were amazed at this fpectrall, and at first by intreaties, then by threatnings, demanded the Infant to be reflored to him. Some denying, others not confenting, Polycritss being very angry fnatch't up the Infant, and making many of them run away, as if he was mad he mangled and tore it in pieces. The multitude cryed out, and began to ftone him. But he being infensible of their blows and hitting him , devoured the whole body of the child, laying afide his head, and prefently he vanished. Which fact the Ætolians taking unhandsomely, and being very anxious what to do, they would fend to Apollo his Oracle; the childs head lying on the ground, began to fprak, and in a long discourse forecold the Citizens, that great misery, and deftruction was hanging over their heads. When they heard this Oracle, they exposed their wives, children and old people to thift for themfelves, they flayed at home, expecting what was to come. It happened that in the next year there was a battel between the Æiolians and the Acarnanians, and on either fide a great destruction. Plegon Trallianus de Mirabilibus et longavis, ex Hierane.

95.

34

94.

IN the war by Sicily which was between Offavius Cafar, and Sex. Pompeius, Galienus, the flouteft man of Cafar his Army, being taken by Pompry his forces, lay on the flore with his neck flatht and fcarce hanging together a whole day, and when it began to grow darker and darker, a great company of the vulgar being met together, with groanings and intreaties, he defired them to bid Pomay come from the for man py his ca an argun if he dia 7. cap. 5 with the neath.

TW

1

the ni, whi thought in the m les, whi faun th badhi they fa collegr therefor lin, 卫出 1 cd On hish WIG G icad you thas, t be adv ever. teacher ing Ma ARCH W 如前 00, wh bis Fa the D

2 Chri

prefeor Pricít o

Town,

hafte qu

sprovi

way, ar

kinds of

and they and man

and fple

BLB

pey

ins,

alt is came mining them ed by their trath of the making enheard them

hief goveror her verhhe died. her time I Hermasbeing afothe mare Priests of them d the Loe Mother f opinion of atta na iudad in a dat this emanded not conand magled and fione him. devoured prelently omely, and Apollo his fpcak, and ry, and deheard this ple to thift as to come, erween the great degain's ex

ar, and sex. y, being tafaiht and ian to grow ing met toto bid Pan-M

and cunning delusions of Devils.

pey come to him as foon as he could, for he was lately fet loofe from the infernall places, and had fomewhat to tell him; Pompey fent many of his familiar friends, to whom Gabien faid, that Pompey his caufes pleafed the Gods below, and his devont parties were an argument of Truth, that he would undertake to pacify them if he did what he was commanded, and fo it fell out. Plinim lib. 7. cap. 52. But the event it felf difcovered Satan's mock. Cafar with the Gods above, being victour, fent Pompey to his underneath.

TWo brave and excellent young men, who came new out of the fields, told the news of the victory concerning the Tarquimis, which warred with their aflociates the Romans. They were thought to be Castor and Pollux. L. Domitius, who first called them in the market, when then were rubbing and cherithing their horfes, which were all of muck swear, admired the newes. Suetonius faith that they meeting him as he came home out of the countrey, bad him declare the victory. A while after, 'tis reported, that they smiling on him, handled his beard, and it was, of a black colour, prefently made a red beard, (I speak the truth) and therefore this man was called Ænobarba. Plutarchus in *Æmi*ho.

He Devill having transformed himfelf into an Angell appeared to Rathbodus commander of Frisia, with a Golden Diadem, on his head, and many jewels thereon, and his vefture wrought with Gold, faying, Moft valiant Sir, who hath feduced and miflead you, that you would go from the fervice of God ? Do not do thus, but be constant in those things you have learnt, and you shall be advanced to Golden Palaces, which I shall shortly give you for ever. To morrow therefore receive Vulfrannus, who is the chief teacher of Christians, and enquire of him, what famous everlasting Manfion that is, which he promifeth you; which if he cannot fhew you, fend messengers of both fides, and I will be their leader, and will fhew them that Golden house, and most beautifull Mansion, which I promise : Rathbod. being very carefull, related all to his Fulfrannus, who told him : that these were meer delusions of the Devill. The Commander answered that he would become a Christian if he would shew him that famous Mansion. They prefently fend one of Frifia on the behalf of the Governour, and a Pricht on the behalf of St. Vulfran, who going a little from the Town, they met one of their comrades, who faid to them, Make hafte quickly, and I will let you fee the glorious Manfion, which is provided for Rathbod the General. They going on in a spatious way, and places they knew not, faw a way adorn'd with divers kinds of Marble bravely polifht, and a house afar off, as of Gold; and they came to a ffreet before the house, beftrewed with Gold, and many Gems. They going into the house of admirable beauty, and fplendour, faw in it a Threne of a wonderfull magnitude. Then 1pake F 2 97.

35

96.

fpake their guide to them. This is the Manfion prepared for Rathbod the Commander. To which the Prieft being in an amaze, faid to them. If these things be made by God, let them remain for ever; but if by the Devill, let them perifb instantly. And figning himself with the fign of the holy Croffe, their leader was transformed into a Devill, and the Golden house into mire and dirt. But the meffengers were flaying in a fenny and thorny place, and in three dayes space, finishing their journey, they returned back to the Town, and found their Commander dead, and related what they had seen to S. Vulfran. Anno 718. Vincentins lib. 23. cap. 146. ex Ovone Presbytero Sigetertm, et Erpbordiens cap. 66.

V Alentinus one of the Bishops of the Church of Millain, defender of the Arrians, a man very unconstant, and of small reputation, being buried in the Church of the bleffed Martyr Syrus, there was heard by night fearfull clamours, whereat the two keepers being raised, they ran to see what the matter was, and they espied two evill spirits or Ghosis drawing forth Valentinus out of the Temple, being tast bound by the feet, and crying out. In the morning they saw his corps laid in another place without the Temple. Gregorius Turonen fis lib. 4. Dialog. cap. 53. vixit, sub Justino Imperatore.

Bout the year of our Lord 1096. near a place called wormatia. there appeared a great troop of armed men for many dayes and nights, running to and fro; and fometimes back again into a mountain, from whence they were wont to come. On a certain night a Monk, taking fome affociates with him, and fortyfying himfelf with the fign of the Crofie; to the Mountain he goes, and adjures all that came forth, by vertue of the holy and undivided Trinity, to tell him their names. To whom one of the company faid, We are Phantafines, and no living Souldiers, but onely the spirits of Men, fometimes warring and fighting for the Prince of this World, and in a flort time after killed in this very place; The weapons, Harne fes, and Horfes, which when we were alive, were the inftruments of our fin, are now being dead, the tokens of our torment : whatfoever ye now fee upon us is all on fire, shough ye cannot fre the fire. The Monk furthermore askt them, If they could receive no help by men. Then the fpirits made answer to him : we may by fastings, Prayers, and offectially by the offering of the body and bloud of Christ, and this we befeech you to do. When they had thus faid, the whole company, as 'twere with one voice, cryed out, Orate pro nobis, orate pro nobis, orate promobis. And prefently they all vanished into fire, and the mountain it felf flam'd mightily. Chronicon Hirfaugierfe.

100,

36

98.

99.

It is reported, that a Ghoft prefenting it felf to Cicero his nurfe, did foretell, that the cherifhed great good to all the Romans. These things appearing but dreams and vain phantasms, he in a short time manifested, that it was a true Oracle. For confulting with 10,

UW

having

aight

ingan atarba lome, t Which the land vourab ALS 12m ILIS Prov CODEFIN 编出由 Thefe Cafpin 日出 1 80 Which City tound they t

85, tepared for an amaze, in for ever; ing himfelf dormed int. But the ack to the what they cap. 146.

in, defenfmall reyr Syras, wo kcepand they as out of In the the Temb Jaftino

Hormalia, any dayes ain into a a certain fying himes, and adivided Trinpary laid, its of Meny nd in a port and Horfes, se now being as is all on e askt them, nade anjwet Hering of the When they one voice notie. And it felf flam'd

the Romans, the Romans, first, be in a or confulcing with

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

with Apollo his Oracle, how the might obtain greatest renown, answer was made by the Oracles, that the thould follow her own ingenuity, the ringleader of her life, and not the vulgars estimation. Plutarchus in Cicerone.

A Stubborn obstinate fellow a little before he died (as report goes) faid, that looking into a Pond, he faw a thadow in the water, which with a drawn Sword threatned death to him. Sa. bellic. lib. 1, cap. 4. And when Annius Tacitus was Emperour, thefe were the Prognosticks of his death. His fathers fepulchre opening of its own accord. Likewise his Mothers Ghost which was long fince dead, appeared to him. And his brothers spectrall with great horrour, in various shapes and places. Fulgosus Lib. 1. cap. 4.

Onstantius the Emperour being converted from the Persian war to quiet Julian in France, and in a great quandary, not having to good fucceffe as formerly, was much affrighted, with nightly vilions. And raifing an Army, on a night between fleeping and waking, he thought he faw as 'twere his father, proffering a fair handlome child to him; he took it up, and laid it in his bofome, throwing away the ball which he had in his right hand. Which evidently demonstrated alteration of the times, though the Interpreters according to their apprehension, made a more favourable construction thereof. Afterwards he acknowledged to his familiar friends and acquaintances, that his Genius, who was his Protectour and defence had now left him; he that heretofore had contrived and deviled many things with him most familiarly, at that time feemed ugly and dreadfull, as if he would forfake him. Thele things appeared to him going from Antioch, towards Tarfus. Cuspinianus.

Here was a Temple of Jupiter at Apamea both very spatious, L and also very famous for divers, and most specious Ornaments: which when the Prefett of the East, with the two Tribunes entring the City, would have demolifhed, upon the ferious furvey of it, they, found it to be fo firmly workt, and of fuch huge and folid ftone, that they thought it impossible to ruine to vaft and firm a piece of workmanthip. When Marcellas the Bithop, feeing him afraid of the work, defired him to make for other Cities, and he went to his prayers to God, that he would put fome end to fo difficult a work. And in a very fhort time after, there came one to the Bishop, who having contracted for a certain fum of Money for his pains, promiled he would fire the foundations of the Temple, and by that means utterly demolifhit. But whilft he was applying his fire-works, a black Devill appeared to him, and reftrained the naturall force of that Element. Which when Marcellus underftood, he went into the Temple, and praying most earnestly to Almighty God, repelled the Magick of the Devill, and prefently the foundation took fire 102.

103.

37

IOI.

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK

38

104.

105.

fire, and when the Piles were confumed, the whole firucture wene to wrack, and fo it was utterly defiroyed. Niceph. lib. 12, cap. 27.

THe Pilappii inhabit a part of the Peninfula of Scandinavia. Amongst them there is an innumerable company of spectrals, which converse feast and discourse with them commonly, nor can they by any means be laid or driven away. They, when they are most terrified and huspil'd by these Ghosts, bury their dead friends under their fire-places, or hearths, and give them in charge to take care they be not molefted in that nature : by this fpell alone do they defend and fave themfelves from the vexations and terrour of the Devils. For if they punctually observe this, no Apparition ever after molesteth them, but if they neglect it, they are continually terrified and incumbred with the Visions of their dead friends. At this time they are leffe infefted, and have leffe incanting amongst them then formerly in regard the King of Suecia hath most strictly prohibited the use of them, and as much as in him lies, takes care that the Chriftian Religion be taught them, and that their Children be brought up thetein. Casper Peucerus de Stopasteia.

"E have it reported that a Gentleman in Bavaria of a most noble extract, was fo grieved for the death of his wife, that abandoning all comforts whatloever, he betook himfelf to a folitary life. At length when he mourned without measure or date, his wife appeared to him in the night, being rifen from the dead, and told him that indeed the had once finished her naturall courfe in this life, but yet by his importunity the was now reftored to life, and commanded by God to use his fociety yet longer, but upon this condition that they should again be married by a Prieft: and furthermore that he should abstain all railing and blafphemous words which he had formerly accustomed to ufe, for indeed, this was the principall or onely caufe why he had been deprived of her, and that the thould again prefently depart this life, as foon as he should but utter any word of that nature. These things being thus performed, the took care of his houthold affairs as formerly, and bare him fome children, but was all the while but of a fad and wan countenance. But many years after her hufband coming home in drink, and giving his maid fome hard words, in anger, more then becom'd a fober Man, the went from the bed to the cup-board, where the was to fetch fome fruit for her husband, and there left her clothes flanding at the Cheft where the Apples were kept, without any body in them, and was never feen more. This I have beard spoken by many worthy and authentick perfons, who affirmed that a Captain of Bavaria told it to a Captain of Saxon for a truth. This Sabinus writes in the tenth book of his Metamorphofes.

Nthe 1

Henry

East by which th

and lye

(av) 15 0

which th

of the wa

dangesol

his, Bri

in motic

the Sea. I event teft

theRock

evill An

nothing

Wall

that im

evill (pil

or roof, i day. F

they turn entertain

of Eberfr

which is ted that held w

her Ne

whilf, and Rick

fares, up

Agurati

1H

1 10

feen in

go that courses

he will nam led anow no

makes f

Mank of Marks P

ons,

b. lib. 13.

Scandinavia, t Ipedrals, y, nor can n they are ead friends rge to take one do they our of the ution ever ontinually friends, incanting ecta hath is in him em, and cerus de ofamolt his wite, nfelf to a nealure or from the r naturall low relitoet longer, rried by a and blaic, for inbeen det this life, ire. Theie old affairs the while r her huiard words, m the bed or her husstre the Apr feen more. ns, who at-Saxon for a stamorphyles.

In

and cunning delusions of Devils.

N the 1045. year of Christ, Brunothe Bishop of Herbipolis, with Henry the third of that name, went to Boiarta Orientalis, or in the East by water upon the River Danubius, but not in the fame Ship with him. It is a Town of Auftria which they call Greinon; above which there be craggy Rocks, and great heaps of ftone that arife, and lyc our into the waters, by reason whereof Danubius (as they fay) is carried with a very great violence, and exceeding noife which may be heard far off, and froathing by reafon of the violence of the water. The Teutonick hold this for an ominous and most dangerous and destructive place to Navigators, and call it Strudelon. Bruno (as I faid before) accompanied the King his kinfman in another Ship, and when they dathed upon a very great Rock in the Sea, the Ihape of a black Athiop appeared, a Vision (as the event testified) fufficiently apparent and ominous, and flood upon the Rock Haleing to Bruno; Ho ho, Bifhop (fayes he) I am thy evill Angell and whitherfoever thou goeft, thou art mine; I have nothing to fay to thee at prefent, but thou shalt shortly see me again. Whilft they all abhorred that prodigy, the Bifhop having ufed that immortal fign of the Croffe, and holy Charms, and Verfes, the evill fpirit left all there deceived. And this Rock is yet noted for it, on which there was a Tower built of Stone, without any beam or roof, and from thence being fitly named, retains it to this very day. From whence having failed on for about ten thouland paces, they turned in at the Town of Bosenburg, where the widow Richts entertained and feasted them very nobly (whole Husband Adalbero of Ebersperg had the Dynastry of the Castle of the chief Boiaria, which is now a Temple, and had died the laft before) and defired that Bosenburg and the farms which in those parts her husband held upon currefy, might be conferred upon welpho the third her Nephew by her brother. The. Cafar came up to supper, and whilft, before Bishop Bruno, and Alemannus President of Ebersperg, and Riclita ftretching out his right hand he confented to all her defires, upon a ludden, the rafters of the house fell and flew Brune, Adventinus lib. 5. Annal. Boiorum.

They fay that in the Mountains of Bohemia oftimes a Monk ufeth to appear, whom they call Rubezl, and that many times he is feen in the baths, and doth frequently joyn himfelf to travailers that go that way when they are in the woods, and bid them be of good courage, telling them, that in regard they are ignorant of the way, he will lead them firait thorow the woods : whom as foon as he hath led into the most path-leffe places of the wood, that they know not which way to turn themfelves, he leaps into a Tree and makes fuch a laughter as caufes the woods to ting again. This Monk or Rubezal is the Devill, who having taken to him the fhape of a Monk, playes thefe pranks.

107.

39

108.

40

O Na certain time there was a Monfter taken in the Sea, in O all things like unto a woman of a flupendious beauty, and amiableneffe, whom one of the fifther-men, or Sailers took for his wife, when fhe had been kept in the fhip a while, and had one child by her, three years after when they came to the fame place where the Monfter was taken, the leapt out of the Ship into the waters, and took the child with her. The child perifhed in the Sea, and the vanithed out of their fight, and was never feen more by any of them. It is an eafy matter (faith Lather) for Satan to a fume the floape of a Man or Woman. ex colloquiis Lutheri.

109.

One defeended of a most illustrious progeny, invited Martin Chather and fome other learned men to his Countrey-house at wattenberg, and when for his pleasure, he rode forth to hust the hare, a Hare of an incredible bignesse, and Forces, running very swittly over the fields, objected themselves to his view. The noble man being excellently well-mounted, followed them with a great shout, and pretently he horse fell down dead under him, and the Hare vanished into the Ayre. This was a truly Satanicall Phantasm.

IIO,

III.

IN the 1546.year after Chrift, Martin Luther telated at a Supper, at Islebia, That at Thuringia, about the mountain which they call Harfelberg, certain noble youths, very intent in the night time in catching of Hares, took in their Nets about eight, which when they returned home, and hung up, they found to be in the morning onely fo many horfe-heads, fuch as are to be found flinking in fome loathfome ditch. Ex colloquin Lutheri.

T Rotenberg a certain man most gloriously attired, and one that A bragged of great Nobility and Riches, did frequent the house of a very honeft Man: and had two companions no leffe gorgeous in their apparel then himfelf. He brought a Fidler, and a Piper, made Banquets, called Dances, and all under pretence of marrying the daughter of this good Man, a very vertuous Maid. He affirmed, he was born to Noble Parents, had immense Riches, Castles, Farms, Towns, and many of them in Forrain Countries. Nor did he want any thing this world could afford, but a Wife to his likening, qualified, and educated. This importunity of his gueft, and his companions, pleafed not the Mafter of the houfe, which caufed him to call in the Minister of the place against they came, that fo whilft they were at Supper, he might intermeddle fome holy difcourse out of holy Writ. These Colloquies very much offended his guest, and his friends. Wherefore they defired fome other fubject, and argued that many witty conceits and neat jefts were more fuitable to feafting, and did more exhilarate the hearts of men then the exposition of holy writ, therefore they would intreat them to be no more troublefome to them, with difcourfe of that nature. By which the Master of the house found what diabolicall spirits

they

nil, hefs

you iball

and Reda

sagain

willish I leaving

three ma

A

1 tream au

the Deta

agreat :

cameto

tain the

forth 1

though

with I Cradie

the For Fintelin

m0

Dike

thedify

a prett ate sav

uthon a Trea

werea

ter (pi

the Na

That

place,

ing ;

Mel

there.

withit

A

faying had po

and can belief,

What

oms,

the Sea, in beauty, and took for his and had one fame place hip into the d in the Sea, ore by any mue the [bape

ed Martin py-houle at it the hare, ry fwiitly noble man great fhour, i the Hare (m.

a Supper, they call t time in when they ning onely ome loathand one that t the houle le gorgeous nd a Piper, f marrying He affiries, Caftles, s. Nor did e to his likeis gueft, and which caufed ame, that fo me holy diluch offended d fome other at jefts were hearts of men d intreat them f that nature. olicall ipirits

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

they had, and being now well armed against the snares of the Devill, he faid to his guests Avaunt, or depart, O ye wicked Caitifs, you shall have nothing to do with me nor mine, we are Baptized and Redeemed by the pretious Bloud of Christ, and he will defend us against your Diabolicall machinations. At these words, this devillish Impostor, together with his hellish companions vanished, leaving behind them a most noisome stink, and the dead bodies of three men who had been hanged. Manlius, in collestanew.

A Certain Man who abounded with wealth, living about thirty Miles from Gorluz, inviting fome friends to a Supper moff exquifitely cooked, and they refufing to come, he grew fo extream angry, that in a rage he faid. If they will not come, I wife all the Devils in Hell would. This wife was not fraftrate : for immediately a great company of them which he had called for in his wrath, came to him, which he not knowing at the first fight, went to entertain them courtcoufly. But when instead of hands they stretched forth their claws to him, being exceedingly affrighted he well thought what kind of guests he had in his bouse. Thus trembling with his Wife he fled out of his Castle, and left an Infant in the Cradle, and a Fool fitting on a Stove by it, to see to it. But the Fool brought the Child fate from amongst those fiends. Jobus Fincelius, de Miraculis.

COme florid and learned Men in the Bafil Council, for recreation Dfake, went forth into a small Wood, friendly to confer about the disputes of those times. As they were going along, they heard a pretty little Bird finging most sweetly like a Nightingale, they are ravished at her pleasant Musick, not knowing what Birds note it should be. Entring the Wood, they elpy a small Bird fitting on a Tree, and finging most pleafantly, without giving over; they were all very attentive : At last one having more courage, and better spirited then the rest, speaks thus to the Bird : I adjure thee in the Name of Christ, to tell us who thou art. The Bird made answer, That the was one of the damned Souls, and was defigned to that place, till the last day, and then she must undergo everlasting torment. When the had faid this, the flew away from the Tree, crying; O how immense, and of long continuance is Eternity. Philippus MelanBhon faith, I am of opinion that this was the Devil inhabiting there. All that were prefent at this adjuration fell very fick, and within a little after dyed. In collestaneis Manlii.

A Certain powerful Man, and very ancient, had devoted himfelf A co conjurc the Devil, maintaining his stuly herein by that faying; The feed of the woman shall break the Serpents bead: as if man had power given him over the Devil, that he might call him forth, and cass him out, when he pleased. I am not (saith Luther) of that belief, to dare to use the commerce of Devils. And added moreover, what happened to Nicolaus Ambsdorffius Bishop of Ciz. who as G himself.

113-

II4

41

himfelf related it, and truly acknowledged on a time in the City Maidenburg, when he was Prieft there, fleeping by night in an Inne, he was awakened by two Noblemen long fince dead, before whom went two young men carrying Torches in their hands, and not being afraid, when there was no danger, being commanded to arife, he did fo. There thefe Noble-men dictated Letters to him, which he wrote, and charged him to prefent them to a certain Prince : When they had done thefe things, they vanifhed. He delivered the Letters to whom he was commanded.

115.

42

IN the year 1545. an evil spirit firaggled up and down the City Rotwil, having the shape fometime of an Hare, fometimes of a Goofe, and fometimes of a Weazel, threatning with a loud voice, that he would burn the City. Which did not a little terrifie the Inhabitants thereof. Fincelium, lib. 1.

116. IN the year 1534. On Christmas Eve in a City of Saxonia, Satan taking upon him the form of a Man, came confidently to Laurentius Donerus, Prieft of that place, when he should hear them that were the next day to come to the holy Supper of the Lord, to make confession of their fins, earneftly defiring him to hear his confession. Being admirted, he belched out most horrible blasphemies against Christ the Son of God. But being convicted by the Minister, with the power of Gods Word, he departed, leaving an unfufferable icent behind him. Idem.

AT Frihurga, a famous City in Mifnia, was there a Man renowned for his Religion and Age, who being very dangcroufly fick, and almoft at the point of death, The Devil, clad in a prelaticall garb, came unto him, left by chance all alone, and perplexing and troubling the old Man in that agony, demanded of him, to tell him in order all the faults which he had committed in his life; and he having in a readineffe paper and ink, would fet them all down. But when the old Man by Gods Word; mightily oppofed the Devil's demands, and yet he would not defift from his importunity, at laft faith the old Man, Since you preffe it fo apon me, that I fbould particularly declare to you my faults; Write then, Firft of all beginning thus; The feed of the woman [ball break the Serpents bead. Which he hearing, threw down his paper and ink upon the ground, and leaving behind him an ill favour, vanithed away. The good old Man not long after departed in peace. Dottor Willerus et Manlim, in colleftancis.

118.

There was at Heidelberg a Doctor of Divinity, a favourer of the Golpel, whole fervant was born in Lower Germany, when having vifited his Father, and was returning to Heidelberg, not far from the City, he met an horfeman fitting npon a great horfe, by whom he was violently caught up upon the horfe; when he perceived himfelf to be on horfeback, that he might take heed of fal-

Baden-Württemberg

lingthe

of the ha

gridt 的T

centrad

ladreen

to the C

a year, t

IN the l

that wer

epón wł

called it

coming t falvation

N

or Ges

takes |

was, a

WIS VE

which was to thungs,

er, the aloud,

mbis

earchd

ftraint

from i nobler

bis Ma

Msbar

after,

Imph

hew

Mafte vour h berry, and m

taxen

the A

am I a

a Moon

go hely with F

ions,

in the City night in an dead, before thands, and immanded to ters to him, to a certain uifhed. He n the City times of a loud voice, terrific the idently to hear them Lord, to r his conblatphed by the eaving an an renowoufly fick, prelaticall lexing and to tell him fe; and he all down, d the Deportunicy, par 1 [bould l beginning Which he d, and leaold Man not clim, in sol-

when haerg, not farto horfe, by hen he perherd of falling,

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

ling, the other horicman firaightway vanished; but he was inatch'd off the horic into the ayraloit, and from thence thrown down with great force near the City, hard by the Bridge, where for some time deprived of histenses, he lay as if he were dead; at last when he had recovered some strength, he apprehended, that he was nigh to the City, he role up, and going into his Inne, he lay there half a year, before he could be restored to his former health.

IN the lower Germany (they fay) walks a Monfter, in the bigneffe of a Man, but in the form of a dogg, that breathed upon them, that were to dye, as if he fmelt on them. And 'twas feen by many, upon whom it breathed not, and they did not dye that year. They called it the Index of a Funeral; Tney which feared death was coming upon them, haftened by Idolatrous Mafle to get relief and falvation. Thus Satan brought Man to Idolatry.

Ot far from Torga, one born of a noble linage, walking over the Fields to refresh himfelf, met one in the habit of a Knight or Gentleman (but it was the Devill) complementing with him, he rakes him to wait upon him, not knowing at that time what he was, and commits the care of his horfes to him. This noble man was very impious and lived chiefly by robbery and pillage, for which purpole he had got him a fit lervant. On a time when he was to go a journey, he commended his Horle to him above all things. His fervant conveighs the Horfe up into a very high Tower, the Horfe out of the Tower knows his Master coming home, and putting forth his head out of the Turret-window, he neighs aloud, his Mafter greatly wondring, asks who it was that carried up his horfe thither : that good fervant answers, 'twas he that to carefully performed his Mafters commands. Then were they conftrained to let down the Horfe again, (being fastned with Ropes) from the Tower. It happened moreover, that they whom this nobleman had plundered, purfued him, then faith the fervant to his Mafter; Mafter, fly, and prefently he pulls forth a device out of his budget, whereby to prevent the Horfes of them that followed after, and to ftop their courfe. At length being caft into Prifon, he implores his fervants affistance. The fervant makes answer, that he was fast bound with fetters, and he could not fet him free. The Mafter is very urgent, till he perfwades his fervant to do his endea-vour herein for him. Then faith the fervant : I will fer you at liberry, but upon this condition, that you fiir not with your hands, and make no figns for your defence. He carries him away being taken from hence, with his chains and fetters, a great height into the Ayre. He being amazed, cryes out, O Eternall God, whither am I agoing ; and immediately the Devill cafts him down into a Moorish place. Then making haste home to his Wife, bids her go help her Husband that fluck fast in the Fennes, and was bound with Fetters.

G 2

Certain

43

119.

44

121.

122.

123.

YErtain Monks travailing with their Governour or Father, as , they call him, inned with an Hoft, that had one of his Chambers haunted with an evill (pirit. The Hoft being glad of the Holy fathers coming to his house, entertained them courteoufly, in hopes they could by their enchantments eafily caft forth that Ghoft, and therefore makes a bed for them in that room. At night when these Holy men were fast asleep, this foul spirit often twitched and pulled them by the hair, till they made them bald. At length Guardian conjures the spirit, and charges him to go from thence into the Monastery. This evill fpirit does as he is bidden, and having changed his Colony, was there before the Monks returned home; he falutes and welcomes them coming in into the Monastery, and proffers them his fervice. The Monks entertain him, and point him out his place in the kitchin, and give him a hood and a bell hanging by him, whereby to know him, and they often employed him to carry drink, and many other things which they wanted. When he went for Beer, he would not be cheased of his measure ; relling them; See, I give you good Money, do you likewife give me good Measure. Finally, he hanged the Cooks fervant, that often vext and troubled him, croffe over a beam; throwing fometimes hot water, sometimes dirty water upon him. But as to his life, he did not prejudice it. The Monks fearing a fad event hereof made refignation of their office to this their fervant. Ex colloquis Lutheri.

Refcentime, the Popes Nuncio in the Councell of Trent, in the year 1552, the 25, day of March, was very bufy in writing Letters to the Pope, and continued his employment till night. Then arifing to refresh himfelf, lo, he faw a black Dog, of fuch a bigneffe as was not ufuall, fiery eyes, and his ears hanging down to the ground coming in, and directly towards him he came, and at last he fell down underneath the Table. Being stupefied and amazed hereat, when he came to himfelf, he calls to his fervants, that were in a chamber hard by, he bids them bring a light, and to fearch out the Dog. And when he could in no place be found, he took a fad conceit, and talling into a difease, he died. Dying alfo, they fay he crycd out to his fervant, to beat away the Dog that came up to his bed, Sleidanm lib. 23.

A T Halberfiade was there one that abounded in wealth, every day living in riot, and following his own delight and pleafure that he became to careleffe of Religion, Chriftian piety, and eternall falvation, that he did not flick to fay, if he might alwaies live to here upon Earth, he would never envy God in the fruition of Heaven. Shortly after (before he was aware) he died. After his death, every day in the Evening fuch ftrange Apparitions were feen in his flately houfes, that every body left them, and no body durft inhabit them. That Rich Epicure appeared with his guefts Nak happen. fields, at 111200 thele h nonic o cut. 1 Court, 动力的自 ing nea Countr reply,b did dan quicking ptated. linitri eminer mist the of Nt then Not labou Whe

which

6

> Fifhe Fifhe

Came

the St

ingfor

back into th

At la

had la

ther ni

to trat

toms,

or Father, as of his Coam. d of the Holy ully, in hopes r Ghelin and (when these d and polngth Ggarnce in to the and having ned home; altery, and and point and a bell employed wanted. s meailtre ; ive me good hen vext mes hot life, he of made colloquiss

t, in the n writing till night, of fuen a ging down came, and pefied and s fervants, light, and the found, the Dog that ealchy every and plealure y, and ereralwaies live fruition of d. After his tritions were and no booy th his guelts

and cunning delusions of Devils.

in the dining room, which he had divided for his delicacies, and dainties; that fervants flood by giving attendance, with lights in their hands, fetting on Golden cups and Veffels upon the Table and filling it with moft gallant difhes: the Fidlers moreover, and Muficians were flanding by, and no gallantry was wanting, that this rich man ufually enjoyed, when he was alive. By God's permiflion, and the operation of the Devill, thefe ipe&trals were obvious to the eyes of men, that others might be terrified from that horrid impiety and ungodlinefie of the Epicureans. Finceling lib, 2.

it ocksy will have a should a Should be

TN the year 1559. In Marchia fell out a very strange thing, I which many of great account and credit did affirm truly to to happen. In harvest time, on a fudden appeared some men in the fields, at first fifteen, at last twelve, all of an unwonted magnitude and an odious thape, both first and last were without heads. All these having ficcles did on a cluster reap down the Oats, that the noile of the Iron was eafily heard, yet all this while no Oats were. cut. Immediately the report of this marvellous fight came to the Court, and many, both of the Courtiers and Citizens went forth, and were eye-witneffes of this miraculous Vision. Many also going nearer to them, aske of them who they were, and of what Countrey, and what they would have? To which they made no reply, but fel ftoutly to their work which they had begun. Some alfo did dare to lay hands upon them, and to hold them, but they quickly escaped out of their hands. Whereuponit evidently appeared to all that were then prefent, that they were Spirits. That Illustrious Prince of Marchia having convocated many of his most eminent Divines, defired to know of them what they thought of this ftrange prodigy : Most of them were of opinion, that it was the omen of an enfuing Plague. Fincelim lib. 3.

N the year 1530. on the 18, 19, and 20th of July, near Spirs, there was a Vision on this manner: Three fifthermen, when endeavouring to catch fome Salmon in the River Reine, they loft their labour, they walhed their Nets, and laid them down to fleep. When they had to done, a Monk coming to them, raifed one of the Fishermen, and bid him go on the further bank of Reine. The Fitherman was obfequious to the Monks commands, and inftantly came fix more, in look and habit like to Monks, who going into the Ship, failed along with them over the River Reine. These coming forth, the Ship was with a most violent and fwift course brought back again through Reine, and prefently fome other Monks entering into the fame Ship, paffed over the River as the former had done. At last, the Fisherman being returned to the place, where he had laid himfelf down to take reft, fhortly after fell fick. On another night, another Fisherman was awakened in the same manner, to transport some Monks over the River Reine, who coming to the thip, Saith one of the Monks, this Ship will not hold all that are to go 124.

45

125.

3

46

124.

20

goover, you must get a bigger. And passing over the second time, came 12. Monks, clad partly in white, and fome in black, with . ugly hook-nofes, and they going into the Ship, were also carried over, who when they went out, others prefently flepped in, and failed over. But whither the Monks went, and whither the Ship, or how he came back to the place of his reft, the Sailer knew not. And he alfo within a small time was very ill. On the third night the like chanced to the third man, who being awakened, was likewife charged to make ufe of a new Ship, to transport more Monks, who not knowing where to acquire one, feethed to go through rough places, and rugged Rocks, till he found a Ship that was new made, into which many Monks, (lome of Imall, others of a great stature, having on black, white, and fewerall kinds of hoods) were Shipped, paffing firaitwaies through the fame River, not speaking one word, and when they were come to an uneven place befet with Trees, they refused to go out, bidding them to Sail on. When the Monks went forth, the Ship of it felf came against the Tide, near the City Spira, The fisherman not knowing himfelt; was returned home, and the Ship reftored again into his own place. The Monks, when at first they questioned them whither they went, answered rowards the City Bafill to the Councill. There is one that describes these passages in an Episite, that calls himself Suredabus Cancrinus, who also displayes and unfolds this Apparition to the life.

Of the fame Spectacle, out of an Elegy of GEORGE SABINE.

Here is an ancient City feated on, The River Reine, not far from Vangion. People, cal'd Nemetes, enjoy'd it; there Four Roman Generals intombed were. Cælarean cob'rts made it their feat of old, whence the name Spira at this day't doth hold. Here liv'd one who no noble birth could vaunt, Of a small filbing ship, an occupant; In which when Titan had withdrawn his beams, He us'd i'deceive the Tenants of the Streams. whilst he bis Nets and Hooks did fit and trim, Of gliding Reine almost upon the brim. Behold a Shape presented to his fight, Of one be knew not in the edg of night: His vesture was (as Eriars use to wear,) Such a black coul, his crown was fbaven bares The Filber greets him at his wonted rate, And asks him, what makes him abroad fo late ? of ora raisellable for fliver

HP Sarehone of

He

Def

Tha

肠

No

HA

Beb

肠

10

物

On

201

Wei

Th

I

1

Τ

网

01

版, cond time. lack, with llo cattied ed in, and the Ship, KREW BOL hurd night was like. e Monks, through Was new t a great ds) were Ipeaking let with Vhen the near the returned Monks, wetid at de-Sureda-

Elegy

ion to

and cunning delusions of Devils.

He answer'd he was sent from far by's Lord, Defir'd him he would wait him o're that Foord ; That he might th'fooner gain the other fide, which curtefy be granted, nee'r deny'd. Now the night's near half spent, Bootes wain Had turn'd its course, when, in the virid plain, Behold five more in Hoods towards bim came, whom he faluted in good Fortunes name; And ask's them, whither they fo late were bound, When night had finish't half ber constant round. One of the five reply'd : Dangers confirain Us thus by night, our fafety to obtain. we are infested by a wicked rout, That feek to kill us, "caufe we are devout. If in thee any love of good abide, Then waft suin thy Boat to th'other fide ; That we may paffe the waters by thy means; And be not bindred by the swelling fireams; So shall thy labour prosper at thy will, And fo thy Nets the Fifth Shall crouding fill: He gave confent, and them his Boat affoarded, whereby his Ship they foon and fafely boarded; But then (fayes he) who shall the fraught defray, One of them an [wer'd, we've no coin to pay, (Thou knowst) to th' people since we are so batefull, They feldome give us ought, but wee'l be gratefull, If once our fortune shall establish's be, wee'l well reward thee for thy curtefy. He looft from (bore, now's Ship did gently glide, Almost i'th middle of the pleasant Tide : when fpifsy clouds ore weild the Stars, the Sails, were over-fill'd with storming Southern gales. The waters roar, with rouling waves; now rain, Adds to the florm, and joyns the Stars to th' main. The Marriner, with horrour being ftruck, Cries out, what caufes this unthought ill-luck ? I faw no prefage of a coming hower, when Sol departed to his western bower: No Swallow Lover'd o're the waves, my eyes Did see no Heron: when the Moon did rife, Shewas not black, nor pale, nor Phæbus light, Abated of its lustre near the night. These words diffurbed were, by th' florming rain, And by the raging waves oth' foamy main : The Ship was neer o're-turned by the blast, The waves had almost covered the Mast. The Marriner with ftretcht-out hands to Heaven, Implored thence the divine aid. What even

These

47

HI

48 midi

Thou wicked wretch, dost pray? (Jayes one Oth' five) ceafe Sirrah, and let God alone : And then took up an heavy Row, which th' poor Unhappy Man had us'd to wield before ; with which his shoulders he so basted o're, That even unto death be beat him fore. At last the Devils wiles appear'd; "was plain, 1. Ischer w There did no part oth' fraud unseen remain. Their bodies vanisht into the whirling wind, Nothing was left but flinking smells behind. Then foon the Clouds were drawn, and day appear'd, The Winds allayed and the weather clear'd. Frighted herewith, e'n senselese he doth hie, with's Ship toth' flore, and there onth' Graffe doth lye ; 'Till Sol appear'd, when by a neighbour swain, Unto his home he is convey'd again. when telling all to those his friends were by, Clos'd up his eyes, and fo is faid to dye. when bright Aurora did next Morn appear, And with her Crocean Chariot th' sky did clear. A passage like to this, the time except, And better iffue to the thing, expect. when first bright Sol onth' top oth' Mountain (hone, A traveller 'gan t'journy all alone. whilf he was on the coafts of Vangion, Just where they placed had the first Mile-Stone. Behold a Coach, all of a fable hier, Filled with Manks, which seven horses drew, roked in order; but one of the four wheels, with the axetree, from the Coach were tore, The Coachman that did rule the reins therein, Had a most rufull nose, and visage grim. The frighted traveller (tood whilft it past By him fo found they Spettrals were at last The Coach onth' fudden, mounted into th' wind, when fire and fmoak did follow it behind. And the fad Omens of enfuing wary A noise as arms ithe Ayre did class and jar : He made return toth' City, toldit, and i' me It was made known by good authority. Therefore to you, wh' in other regions dwell, I thought my meter bound these things to tell, And had they wanted an Interpretation, I would have made it. Now the German Nation, By their King's difcords, heard of nought but jars; And now their Monks inflamed had the Wars. This was the Tempeft, this the disjoynted wheels This was the fmoak and flame, This joyntly wee'l

Commend

Tb

or Devoti

Numery

endowed frated by

uling man

Cer Years:

hum, but y

be made t

ul almo

petted in her fup

which th

life did

防衛 analist

movied a hadhada

gurl perfy

of her boa

her, Tin

Dower, a

andupa

the mol

Ipirit, in detcive a acpubies

Petania

icname?

allothe

Cy with went tig told her a

ing taken

the Know

by diving

noble Me

all the orl

entertaini

vedgreat

iractours

and cunning delusions of Devils.

49

127.

Commend unto our God; defire him lay Thefe Tempests, hee'l be good to them that pray.

Agdalena Crucia Hispana, in the chief City of all Corduba Barica, in her tender years, was (whether by realon of Poverty, or Devotion it is uncertain) by her poor Parents, placed in the Nunnery of St. Clara. (which the afterwards re-built all anew, and endowed with a fair revenue). This Magdalena, I fay, being infnared by a Devill that appeared to her in the form of an Athiop using many fugred and pleasureable enticements with which tender years are most taken; began to converse very familiarly with him, but with most fevere interminations, that no mortall thould be made privy to their familiarity. She converfing with the Devill almost every day, grew more in knowledg then could be expected from her youth, and was admired of all that knew her for her flupendious knowledg, and ingenuity, and fingular piety, which the imoothneffe of her behaviour, and the aufterity of her life did feem to manifelt; the had fcarce attained the age of twelve years when this evill fpirit, taking the opportunity of bringing her into his full and abfolute pofferfion, with glorious and gilded words moved a marriage betwixt them, and eafily for the experience the had had of her improvement, by his means, was this ambitious girl perswaded to it. They joyn hands, are married, and at slaft lye together. Magdalena in lieu of a Dower, promises him the use of her body, to difcourfe with her, converfe with her, and lye with her. The Ethiop on the other fide, promifed to make her a large Dower, and that the fhould by reason of her illustrious fanctity and wifedome, bear great fway throughout all Spain for thirty years and upwards, infomuch that the thould excell, or at least equall the most famous that ever went before her. Nor would this lying fpirit, in this particular, feem false that so by this his bride, he might deceive all Spain. And when soever they enjoyed their ftolen delights, his fervant (for this Athiop for the honour of the businesse, kept his man) taking her coule, to the life imitated (like fome fuppolititious Sofia) in the Cloifter abroad, or in the Temple, her countenance, behaviour in walking, finging, praying, cating, and all other the like. And if perchance, when he had wearied his Lady with pleafures, he went (in pretence of looking that things went right in his Mannour) about the World, at his return he told her all that hapned in his travell worth the telling. So the being taken priloner of Franciscus King of the Gauls; fo comming to the Knowledg of Romes being fack't, and telling the was told it by divine Revelation, the grew in great effects with the chief and noble Men of the Kingdome, and obtained the dignity of Abbelle, all the other Nuns willingly yielding to fuch eminent fanchity : and entertaining the bufi leffe with exceeding joy in that they conceivedgreat part of the glory, redounded to them who were her inftructours. She was famous for many miracles, but those onely lulory

Comment

MS.

fory, and vain fancies. In a folemn pomp upon a feast day, the was taken up into the Ayre three or four cubits high, and often holding the Image of the bleffed child Jefus in her arms, making her eyes the Sluces from whence Rivers of tears iffued, the did fuddenly extend the excrefcency of her hair unto her heels, and by degrees did vanish away. And as often as the Monks at fet times and feafons, did take the Sacrament in the Eucharifi-basket, there alwaies wanred one of the round pieces of the myficall bread (being first of all diligently reckoned): which Magdalene did openly thew that the had it in her mouth, and that the received it by the administration of Angels. Hence to much was the fame of her fanctity foread abroad that High-Priefts, Emperours, Kings by their letters commended themfelves to her prayers, and therefore did Charls the fifth's Queen take great care that her Son Phillip should be wrapped in those iwathing clothes, which Magdalene had fanctifyed by her prayers. Thirty years at the leaft being fpent in this diabolicall marriage, at length in the year of our Lord, 1546. by Gods bleffing and favour, and not by reafon of her Merit, Magdalene returned to her felf, and began to deteft the Devill, but the Æthiop taking grievoully her apoflacy, and after diverse manners tormenting her, the, beyond all expectation freely discovered her wickedneffe, to them whom they call the vifitors of that Order, and to them the confeffed her fin, implored help, and was by them imprifoned. Neither did the Devill, notwithflanding all this, leave the place, but at morning prayers to the great wonder and amazement of the Monks, was prefent in the fhape and vesture of Magdalene, and oft did perform other her offices. The Monk now abhorring their Abattefic, whom for twelve years they had entertained, at the last they were very importunate that the whole manner being found our, Magdalene might be expelled the Cloifter, that to those enchantments might ceafe. Neither was there any great punifhment inflicted on her, becaufe of her ferious repentance and ingenuous confession; and that, As by her feigned and damoniacal fanctity, fhe had encreafed the superfition of many, So by her true and Chriftian penitency, the fnewed by this memorable example, that the fountains and floudgates of Gods mercy are not dam'd up, or thut to any repentant finner.

128.

50

In the year 1532, a Noble man out of his tyrannicall malice commanded one of the country men which he had power over, that he fhould carry home a great Oak out of the wood at once by his horfe Cart, and threatned him fore if he did not execute his command; the clown eafily underftanding that it was utterly unpoffible for him to obey his Mafters precept, entred the Wood with great fighs, and fad complaints: there came to him a Devill, haveing taken upon him a humane (hape, and enquired of him the caufe of his grief, to whom the ruftick revealed the thing in order. The Devill bad him be of good cheer, and return to his houle, he would bring the Oak to his Mafters houfe without delay; the Clown Fintein,

1

There won her Hubs panion a l all the fug consister u have com with her that Ma away, b to him, and heri after, Fi

Nine

AtBrai

Are the ownes an wood, for Winnat agitati and the Went for men) wer ed them t hemiely orden ci Hinch or compan accutate Marles av fet against whole ca uotili aig

of any w

that it w

Finteling,

and cunning delusions of Devils.

FI

129.

130.

Clown was fearce got home ere the Devill threw the huge Oak loadned with thick boughs, athwart before the houle of the Noble man, and thut up the paffage by reafon of the thickneffe of the Tree boughs; and, when the Oak had contracted an adamant-like hardneffe, neither could it by any firength or Art be cut, the Noble man was glad to break a wall on the other fide of the houfe, and to make a new gate in his other houles, not without great trouble and coft. Fincelum, book 2.

There appeared to a certain honeft Matron, a widow, a kinfwoman to Phillip Melancihon, fitting alone in her Parlour, her Husband being dead a day or two before, having for his companion a Monk of tall flature. The husband fpoke to his wife with all the fugred and loving expressions he could, faying, Be of good comfort my VVife, for I am thy Husband, and weighty bufineffes have compelled me to conte to thee; when he had almost talked with her a whole hour; he exhorted her that the would take care that Mass thould be celebrated for him being dead; and going away, he importun'd her that the thould reach forth her right hand to him, which being reached out, he coloured it as black as a coal and her hand was marked and blotted with that colour all her life after. Fincelim, Book 2.

TN the year 1555 there was a spectrum appeard after this manner. At Branfviga in the Village of Gehera, two miles diffant from Blomenaw there was a certain country man, being imployed with his horfes and Cartigoing into the wood, faw before the entrance of the wood, fome troops of horfemen, harnefied all with black armour, wherear being terrified, he ran back to his house and reported that a great troop of Souldiers appeared abroad; the Elders therefore and the Minister of the Word there, accompanying them, hastily went forth, and almost a hundred perfons (fome men and fome women) went with them, and did fee thefe horfemen, and they reckoned them to be about fourteen troops, which immediately divided themselves into two companies, and they being Marshalled into order, one company flood opposite to the other. At the last there iffued out a tall man of a black hue very formidable, out of each company, and both of them lighting from their horfes, did view accurately each company. Which being done, they mounted their horles again, the Army being fet in rank and file, and the troops fet against one another, the horsemen went forward, and filled the whole camp; the country men were spectatours of their march untill night cameon. But when they heard no further at that time of any war or marching of the foot or horfemen, they all agreed that it was a prodigy from the Devill, or a fign of Gods anger. Fincelius, firlt Book of Miracles.

and i way to an internet and a comment of the second and the second seco

let swinged back and a chronic H is back the sector a data and In

THE PARTY PARTY PARTY PARTY PARTY PARTY

ns,

y, the was

B holding her eyes

ddenly ex-

egrees did

nd feations,

vaies wan-

firft of all iat fhe had tration of

ad abroad

mmended

h's Quéen

hofe iwa-

ers. Thir-

mage, at

d favour,

felf, and

oully her

, beyond

n whom

fied ber did the

mothing

was pre-

perform

He, whom

eete very

Magdalene

ents might

on her, be-

; and that, reafed the

and floud.

e tepentant

icall malire

jower over,

at once by exective his utterly un-

Wood with Devilly havenim the capile

order. The

his house, he

t delay; the Clowa

Baden-Württemberg

131.

132.

133.

52

N the year 1567. in Trawtenaw, a City of Buhemia, there was one Stephen Hubener, that gathered fuch great Riches, built fuch flately houfes, and was to fucceffefull that all admired. And at laft falling fick, dyed, and was very honourably inter'd. But a fhore while after his death and buriall, his body (or that which is more likely, the Devill by his Diabolicall power, carried about his body) did pinch many men with fuch ftrait embracements, that many of them died, yet diverse recovered again, who all with one confent confeffed that they were thus clafped or beclipped by this rich man, in that very habit in which they had feen him alive, therefore the Magiltrate of that place, that he might void or lay this Satanical fight, commanded the body of that man to be digged out of the grave, after he had lain in the Earth twenty weeks, yet was not corrupted or rotten, but fat, as young and well fed bodies use to be; the body was delivered to the Hangman, to be carried away to the place of execution, where he cut off his head with his Axe, and anatomizing him, took out his heart, and did cleave it : there iffued out of his body bloud, as if he had been alive (witch-like) to fustain punifhment, therefore the Hangman threw the body into the fire, a great company flanding by, his head being bound to his feet, and fo he tyed neck and heels.

A Bout two hundred years fince, in Hammel, a Town in Germany, the Devill in the likeneffe of a man walked about the ffreets of the City, playing many youthfull pranks, inticed many boyes and girls to him, and drawing them without the City gates unto a bordering mountain, he together with them vanifhed away: which when it was told to the Citizens, by a wench which was afar off, and fecure, they with great care fought their children in the Rivers, woods, and all about the Country, but none ever knew why or how they were thus deprived of them. Which Hiftory is recorded in the Annals of that forementioned City, and is read by many Famous and illuftrious men. Finceling, firft book.

ON a time the Devill made a great moan and complaint as though he was afflicted by fome terrible pain, faying, he was the Soul of this and the other man, that he might delude men, there are very many Hiftories of this kind, and we have reckoned fome before. Peter Mamorine faith, there was a thing happened about the River at Vienna in France, in fome houfes of Capland, in the year 1458, that the Devil did give out, he was the Soul of one deceased, filling all places with his fighs, clamours and lamentations, withing he had fome prayers made for him, and that pilgrimages might be undergone, and declaring very many other things, But, faid one to him, If thou nouldeft have us to believe thee; fay, Have mercy on me O God according to thy great mercy in Chrift: He made answer, he could not do fo; then they that flood by mocked him, and he being fretted went away.

D. Bar-

155 out of the man, and delivered

Maile, and then unco

procured a

from their he confelle

about all F

new flory y

ted, which

Surren of St.

Acertain

tras an Orp

tives Gerual

et blacks

加加加

incold forma

Quen and Paradife, 1

lwer, Tna

airaid; the bee take a s

inco a long

Rately to D

tion art ;

me, which

free her fi

would giv

asked one o

gle her fell

ked if the

detendher

above 15.

and to offe

fobraten v

divers plac

cretary of

that the be to his word

but after a

it to create

fwer him,

and threw

him after.

Deman, Bor

toms,

here was one it iuch frate-And at laft But a thorr hich is more bout his bo 's, that ma-I with one ed by this him alive, nd or lay to be diginty weeks, ell fed bonan, to be ff his head r, and did been alive an threw ead being

Germanys the fireets any boyes tes unto a ray: which is afar off, in the Rit knew why ory is recorad by many omplaint as by faying, he delude men, ave reckoned ing happened if Capland, in he Soul of one and lamentahe that pilgtiy other things, in Chrift : He od by mocked D, Bar-

and cunning delusions of Devils.

D. Bartbolomew Fayus writes, when Nicolas Alberia Vervine jis, had prayers made at his Grand-fatners grave, there can out of the ground a man wrapped with a fheet, who fpoke to a w man, and told her, he was her Grandfather; and, that he might h delivered from Purgatory, it was needfull that they thould fin Maffe, and have a Progression into the house of the Virgin Mary; then uncovering himfelf, the faw he was her Grandfather; then the procured a great company of Maffesto be faid; but when the ceafed from their celebration, the was grievoully tormetted, and at laft he confeffed that he was Beelzebub. But this flory being blazed about all France, I thall fay no more of it. But now fee another new flory which is well-known to the Citizens of Paris, alfo printed, which happened at Lutetia, at the fign of the Red Horfe in the Street of St. Honoratus.

A certain man called Metaxarius, when he faw a Neece of his who was an Orphan, he took her home. Whilft the prayed at her father Geruafe's grave, the Devill met her in the shape of a tall man of black colour, and taking her by the hand, faid; Friend, do not fear, thy father and thy Mother are in a good place. But yet there fhould fome Maffes be faid, and the fhould go a pilgrimage to our Queen and Lady of vertues, and to ftraightway they fhould go to Paradife, to the Virgin : She asking who he was ; he gave this anfwer, That he was Satan, and admonished her least the should be afraid: the maid did what he commanded, which done, Satan bad her take a pilgrimage to St. James. To whom the faid, I cannot take fuch a long journey: from that time Satan gave not over importunately to urge her, and familiarly calling her, faid, How cruell thou art; faying, the will not put her thears into her bolome for me, which when the had done to to fatisfy him, that the might free her felf from his importunity, he furthermore asked that the would give him fomething; at the last proceeding, fo far that he asked one of her hairs; fhe gave him one : fometimes he aflayed to periwade her to drown her felf, and at another time to firangle her felf, and he putting a rope about her neck, had been choaked if the had not cryed out, and fometimes her Uncle defirous to defend her, was fo beaten, he knew not by whom, that he lay fick above 15. dayes, and once the Evill spirit offered to lye with her and to offer violence to her chaftiny, but the ftrongly refifting, was fo beaten with his ftripes that the bloud gushed out of her body in divers places. Amongst those that faw her, there was a certain Secretary of the Bifhop of Valentice named Choinim, who told the maid that the best way to drive the Divell away, was, not to give answer to his words, although he bad her pray to God, which he never did, but after a blasphemous manner, or mocking that devotion, using it to created beings; the Devill feeing that the maid would not anfwer him, and that he could do no good of her in that cafe, took her and threw her upon the ground, and from that time the never faw him after. Bodin relates thele things in his Treatile of Magicall Demon. Book 3. chap. 6. Michael Ichael Curopalates Rancabes Imp. had a certain maid that was his bond-lervant, which at an Ecliple, or conjunction of the toon with the Sun, was ftruck with Madneffe, and cryed to the mperour, Defcend, defcend, and give place to others : this being fren done, made the Emperour afraid, therefore taking counfell of his fervant Theodatus Michael E. asked the wench that was mad, to what house of the Palatinate that might belong or concern, and by what fignes and tokens he might know, When the maid was in her frantick fits and asked, the did intimate and fignily the Armenian Lion namely, and deferibed its marks and its fathion. But when the commanded Theodatus to come down from his Tower, the did. Prophecy of two men which (hould meet him, whereof one of them fitting on a Mule fhould be he that fhould poffeffe and enjoy the Kingdome. Theodatus went to that appointed place, to fearch about the thing, and there knew the man by his token which the girl had before taught them, and fo they perceived that the did not prophecy falle, by reafon that the was infpired by the Devill, by whom the was poffeffed. Cedrenue and Zonaras, tome 3:

400

70

E Rafmus Roterdamus in an Oration which he writ in the praife of Phyfick, faith, that he faw a Man, one Phliarius Poletanus by name, who being an Italian, and not at all skilled in the Datch, yet perfectly did fpeak that language, as though he had been poffeffed by the Devill. Wherefore he was taken in hand by a famous Panacean Phyfitian, and giving him Phyfick, brought out of him a great fort of Worms, and fo freed the man of his difeafe, and alfo deprived him of his Germain language. Cardan de Rer. var. Book 8, chap. 43.

Norbertus at Nigella using exorcisms to disposses a certain maid that was posses with the Devill, was derided by him, who did repeat the Canticles from one end to the other, in the mouth of the girl, and after did Interpret it in the Latine and Germain rongue; but at last a Bishop sharply withstanding him, he was expelled out of her in the year 1122. As the continuator of Sigebert hath it.

138.

137.

136.

TN Italy there was a certain Virgin possessed by the Devill, and utterly ignorant of the Latine Tongue, and being asked by Lazarus Bonamious, a Bononian Professour, which was the best Verse in Virgill, the answered, or rather the Devill out of her. Difeite justitiam moniti, & non temmere dives.

Be warn d to learn right, and obey the gods. Manlius, first Book by the relation of Phil. Melanch.

139.

Tha Wilderneffe of the Countrey of Tingut the voices of Devils and fpirits are heard, who call those by their own names who are walking alone, or elfe wandring afide from their company, and feigns

BLB

feigns chi al their w a conform actific of 1

TH

get of forrow Crea, who all experlively we ald, and out of the

Ien

Hipi

threes, 8

betose

Ettildes.

Nthe

Grow.

Capitol

things fl

EOWB A

A

faith,

yearso

ofaNo

W FILLE

buffetter

would hisfathe

he profes

Was port

which H

which a

modiaca

ions,

id that was ittion of the crycd to the this being g countell of ras mad, to em, and by d was in her Armentan But when ir, the did to see tos and enjoy to fearch which the he did not Devill, by praile of letaom by puth, yet pollefied nous Paof him a and alfo var. Book a certain ed by him, the mouth d Germain m, he was t of Sigebert

Devill, and ed by Lazabeft Verle

s of Devils nes who are npany, and feigns

and cunning delusions of Devils.

feigns the voices of their companions, and fo milleading them out of their way, he harries them into defiructions gulph, fometimes a confort of muficall inftruments are heard, but more oftner the noife of Drums. Atunfters Cofmograph, Book 5:

There was a certain Citizen of Erphord that for fome years together kept a Crow in his house, and when he faw any filent or forrowfull, he used these words after a jefting manner; O my Crow, what makes thee fosad, what thinkest thou of ? To which, beyond all expectation, the Crow, or the Devill in it, clearly, and with a lively voice, recited a Verse out of the 77. Pfalm, I have thought of old, and I have had eternity in my mind, and thus the Devill spoke out of the Crow, Caspar Goldm. in his Book of Miracles.

H leronimus Cardanus told his Father that there appeared feven lipitits which did difpute with him about divers wonderfull things, and did enucleate and unmask hidden myfteries that were before unknown out of the Manufcript writings of Averroes, of Phyfitians principles.

IN the raign of Trajan, a Crow, but rather the Devill out of the Grow, began to fpeak with humane voice, and-cryed out of the Capitol in Greek, isau mávra razão, omnia belie fe habebunt, i.e. All things shall be well; from whence came that distick of an unknown Authour.

> Tarpeio quondam confedit culmine cornin, Est bene non potuit dicere, dixit Erit.

> > Englished thus,

A Chough did from Tarpeia's top foretell; Though things now are not, yet they shall be well.

Moft certain argument to prove that those men are possefied, is, they fpeak those tongues which they never learnt : Bodin faith, there was one whole name was Samuel, being but twelve years of age in the Village of Wantelet ad Laod, he was the Son of a Noble man, Lord of the Land, who was policiled of the Devill a Month after his Mothers death, and grievoully vexed and buffetted, also the Devill had power over his body, and if any one would withdraw the boy, he did retract him again by violence, his father would not have him exorcifed (for Religion's fake which he protefied). And whether or no he was freed from it, the twelfth or thirteenth year he was paft, in which the woman of Vervinens was poffeffed by an evill ipirit, but the had an exorcifm I know not; which Hiftory I paffe over, becaufe it was related in diverse books, which are now printed. Italy and Spain abounds with fuch demoniacal perfons which had need be bound up in chains , these can ipeak 141.

142.

143.

242

55

fpeak Greek and Latine, and other tongues which they never learnt (or which is more likely, the Devill fpeaks in them): for if at any time that Woman of Vervinensis had put out her tongue a great length, the fpirit then fpoke most Eloquently. Melansihon reports that he faw a woman in Saxony that was possibled, who could neither read nor write, yet did speak Greek and Latine, and Prophefie of that cruell war in Saxony, faying; Great misery shall come upon this Country, and Famine upon this people. Fernelius, in his book of the fecret causes of things, tells, that he faw a possible Boy speaking Greek, for all that he knew no letters. Hippocrates, in his Book De Sacro morbo, thought it to be the falling fickness, but some afterwards in Greek did accurately note the difference; For those who were possible focke divers languages, and prophesied, which could not be observed in those who had the falling ficknesse.

IN the reign of Argyropolis Emperour of Rome in the Thrasian Province at the bottome of the Fountain of Curena, there was a miferable dolefull noife heard, mixed with howlings and lamentations not onely for once or twice, but continually dayes and nights from March to July. And when fome came to fee the place from whence the voice was heard, there was another howling thwarted them. I fuppofe this miracle did foretell the flaughter of the Romans in Coelofyria. Cedrenus.

C Alligraphus, a reverend man of Alexandria, going out of his houle in the night time, at midnight he faw brazen flames fpeaking with a loud voice, that Mauritius the Emperour of Constantinople was flain, together with his children at B) zantium: going forth in the morning, he related it to Augustulus, who warned him not to tell it to any, and preferibing a day, in the ninth day, there came a Meffenger declaring the death of Mauritius. Then Augustulus did publish to the people the Devills Prophecy. Paul. Diacon. Book 17. of Romane History; and Nicephorus, Book 18, Chap. 41.

History of Antioch by histors, which he by and by going forth publister by history of Antioch by histors, which he by and by going forth publister by history of Antioch by histors, which he by and by going forth publister of the people, and a while after his Oracle came certainly to paffe. Josephus Book 13, chap. 18.

VV Hen the Romans in a great battell with the Tarquinians fent away L. Junius Brutus Confull, but in the following night, fuch an affrightment feized upon the Enemies, The Tarquinians and the Vejentes in filent troops returned home as conquer'd quer'd mei anotthe s was a Hol of a Faano more ther the enem Book 7. I

4

In that, and the second second init fight the built of the angury the the took the is on again Living are came with augurs that, ci fighting Book of this your

tiaton

diltan

Emile

the prop

tameofr

whileaf

14.

56

144.

145.

·花茶(

146.

147.

BLB

ms,

never learnt, or if at any ue a great hon reports could neind Prophetall come upnis book of Boy fpeakin his Book t forne af-For those d, which c.

aciae Proas a milementations ghes from n whence d them. temans in n of his n ftatues it of Canum: going arned him day, there n Augustupanl, Dia-Book 18.

eft, when goom to the p of Autoy in which orieft being new gotten g forth pubse certainly

Talking

the follow-

ene as conouer's

and cunning delusions of Devils.

quer'd men. The report is, that in the next night after the battell out of the next wood (which Livy calls Arpa, and Dyonifius faid it was a Holy wood) a loud voice was heard whether it was the voice of a Faune or Silvaine it could not be tefolved, which happened more then once in the Hetrafian war, which prodigy did fo affright the enemies that they yielded themfelves as conquer'd. Sabellicus Book 7. Ennead 2. Valerius Book 1. chap. 8.

IN that day which Cafar fought with Pompey at Pharfalia, C. Cornelius of Patavia, being Augur, when he had taken augury, at the first fight fuddenly turning to those that were by him; faid, now the business is done, now the men begin their work, and trying his angury the fecond time, he with a loud voice cryed out; O Cæfar, Thou overcomess, they that stood about him, admiring at the thing he took the Crown from off his head, and swore he would not put it on again untill the businesse made his art believed or credited. Livius and Plutarch in Cæfar and Pliny, faith, there such a noise came when two armies were fighting one against the other to the augurs fitting on the Patavian Mountains, being bold to affirm by that, either the world would be diffolved quickly, or Cæfar was fighting with Pompey. Sabelliem Book 7. Ennead. 6. out of the 15th Book of Gellim chap. 18.

Hen Antonius fell from Domitius, and a great war was expected in Germany, the City being affrighted, and the people of themselves without any other author, dispersed the fame of the victory, and a report going throughout Rome that Antonius was killed, and that no part of his army was left alive, it was fo really believed that a great part of the Magistrates sacrificed. But when the Authour of the rumour was fought our, but none appeared, but the news was put off from one to another, every one clearing themselves of it, and being as it were labrynthed, and plunged in a vaft Ocean, they could not make it appear from what original or Fountain it proceeded, the fame of which quickly overfpread the City. But a Meffenger and letters meeting Domitian in his journey, leading out the Legions to war, intimating victory, fo that one day was the day of Trophyes and of Fame too, in places distant more then two thousand five hundred Miles. Plutarchus in Emilio.

Solipatra a woman of Alexandrina, at a certain time being amongst her acquaintance, and a disputation arising about the Soul, she was wrapt by a certain fury suddenly, she seemed as though her voice was taken away, and was for a while dumb, by and by the began to cry out, My Cozen Philometor being transported in a Charciot, is now ore-turn'd in a thorny place, and hath hurt his elbow and his hands are wounded, and a certain man complaining, the thing was a while after known which confirmed the truth. Eunapius in Ade-

Thamus

57

148.

149.

150.

f10 .

58

ISI.

152.

153.

Hamus an Egyptian Pilot, fayling to Rome late at night near the Echinad Iflands, night being far fpent, heard the voice of an unknown Author, which cal'd him by his own name: they that were in the fhip were all amazed, and when it called the third time he answered; then faith the voice, When thou comest into the next Island, the voice being heard as if it were on the foredeck. Thamus being aftonished, and religiously given, obeyed its commands, and immediately after it had given its precepts, fuch howling, mourning, and lamentations was heard in the Ayre, that all thereabouts was almost dead with fear. The news quickly arrived at Rome, and Tiberius Cafar commanded Thamus to be brought before him, and examined, that he might know the truth of it; the Augures and High Priefts confulting about it, they answered, Pana perhaps was born of Mercury and Penelope. Plutarch relates this in his book of Oracles, which Oracles then were made dumb, in which place although we may acknowledge the fubrily of Satan, and the Devill being bufied about bringing the death of Chrift into queftion, and to mock it by fuch a fiction, except he would by Pans death inter that mens Souls after death should be destroyed, or annihilated.

Onobazus the King of the Adiabenians, his firname was Barles, Mbeing in love with Helens fifter, married her, and of her had Monubazm, and other children of other wives. At the last lying with his wife big with child, and laying his hand upon his wives belly, he thought he heard a certain voice bidding him to take off his hand from her belly, left he fhould oppreffe her young ; which as it was begun with divine providence, foit was likely to have a prosperous end. He was affrighted with this voice, and shewed the thing inftantly to his wife, and he called the Son Izatch that was born at that birth ; And by reason of this prediction he made him Heyre to the Kingdome. But he together with his mother embracing the Jewish Religion, reflored Artabanus the King, again to the Parthian Kingdome, and fortunately fought against the Arabians and Parthians in the 55. year of his age and 24. of his reign, he died and left the Kingdome to his Brother Monobazus. Ex Joseph. Book 20. chap: 2.

N Conflantinopolitan Tower, in which it was forecold him that he thould dye. At what time the walls of the Palace was builded, in the night feason a certain man failing on the Sea, crycd out after this manner : O Emperour, thou makes up thy walls, and although thou raises them up to Heaven, whils that which is within is evill, the City may be easily taken : He that spoke those things, was a long time and very upuch fought after, but never could be found out, the wall was finished, he perished that fame day that he had the keyes delivered by him that had the businessie committed to him. Cedrenm.

When

irated for

terwards he answe

wards co

· fented to forewith

fick, and

DEfor

Diaugi

was intal

and both

Celars, by their ow

calling

M

this fort,

long, th not in a

Wille,

terus Va

TH

1 :11

ceficur.

which thewed thould b

manded

in any

made ti alter A brothe

a priva

Bela

out of h

mans, 1

Tribunit

Nilein a ations. Valion O ons, ght near the voice of an y that were rd time he o the hext k, Thamas commands, howling, tall therearrived at ght before ; the Au-Pana perthis in his in which , and the to questi-Pansdeath r annihi-

as Barles, fher had aft lying his wives o take off og; which to have a hd fhewed ab that was made him other emg, again to the Arafhis reign, Ex Joleph.

ace of the him that he as builded, red out after schough thou the Ciy may ime and very wall was fies delivered ense, When and cunning delusions of Devils.

W Hen Opicinus Cacia Novaria, being very thoughtfull or Melancholly, walked alone in his houle at noon-tide, he heard fomething call him by his name, but faw no Man, and afterwards faid, would thou be willing that thy Son fhould dye? To whom he anfwered, (having no time to confider of it) be would, but afterwards coming to himfelf, quickly denyed that which be had affented to, and was very forry for the cruelty of the prodigy; therefore within three dayes his fon John Baptift having no more, fell fick, and two dayes after dyed. Falgojus, Book 1. chap. 4.

Before Neroes death, there was a confused murmure mixed with laughter, and a tumult in the Theater with great mourning was heard when no man was there. In Albania it rained bloud, and both the dores of Mauseolus (in which were the Tombs of the Cesars, he being the last of that stock) and the dores of his bed of their own accord slew open, out of which there was heard a voice calling Nero to him. Xiphilinus ex Dione.

M. Antonius Majoragius reported that in the Moneth of Aprill. M. here was heard, in Eupilus Lake, a found, or voice crying after this tort, Ob, ob, ob, ob; The first part of which had a Musicians fong, the latter part of the voice had their brief, and in those years, nor in any other, were there ever a more plentifull encrease of Wine, Wheat, and other things. Cardane Book 15. chap. 85. de rerum Varietate.

There appeared to Hircanus the Captain of the Jews, and being also High Prieft, a certain fight, which enquired about his succeffour, being carefull of Aristobulus and Antigonus his eldeft, which he loved above all their other brethren. But when Godhad shewed the picture of Alexander, the youngest forrowfull that he should be fucceffefull and prosperous in all his proceedings, commanded that he should be brought out of Galilee, left he should be in any capacity of having the Kingdome after him, but the event made the Oracle be believed, for he was possed of the Kingdome after Aristobulus who before had flain Antigonus, and killed the other brother that with flood him, but the other that was contented with a private life he honoured, Josephw, Book 13. chap. 20.

Before Camillus's banishment M. Cedicitius a vulgar perfon declared, or gave it out, that in the night before he was called out of his way (which they call the new way) by a loud voice and looking back, and feeing no man, he heard a voice greater then a mans, which spoke thus to him : Go to M. Cedicitius, and tell the Tribunitian Souldiers, betimes in the morning, they may exped the French within a few dayes, The Tribunes despised and laughed at those relations. A little after this came Camillus's diftress, and the Invasion of the French. Plutarch. in Camillozet Sabellicus, book 9. Ennead. 3. I 2

158.

59

154.

155.

156.

L reargus hapned to come to Olympia, and was a spectator of the games there : it is reported that this befell him, viz. that there was a voice like the voice of a man behind him rebuking him and wondring at him why he did not ftir up his Citizens to celebrate that folemnity, he turned himself about, and finding no man that spoke to him, then he was perfwaded it was a divine voice, and gathered Iphitus and his companions to himself, and made a great feast by which the folemnity became much more remarkable. Thutarchus in Lycargo.

160.

60

159.

Aßius Cherea, captain of the Guard, with fome others, made a confpiracy against Caligula. And when he was going into the Court, he heard a voice from among the multitude, commanding him to perfect their defignes, the Gods being their affistants. At first he suspected that their plot was betrayed by some of the Confpirators, but afterwards he perceived, that he was incited thereunto, either by some that knew it, or by an Oracle from God. On the 3d day therefore they slew Caius Circensis. Josephus, lib. 19. cap. 1.

161.

162.

163.

PErtharis, King Arithpertus his Son, who being banished by Grimoaldus, and in his banishment failing into Britain, was warn'd by an unknown voice, that Grimoaldus being dead by Phlebotomy, he should seek for his fathers Kingdome. Whereat being moved, though he knew not the Authour, yet returning into Italy, within three Moneths after the death of Grimoaldus, he was made King of the Lombards. Platina in Dono.

C. Hostilius Mancinus the Confull, going into Spain, as he was raking Ship at Hercules his Haven, whither he went on foot, this founded in his ears: Mancinus, stay. He being affrighted herewith, turn'd his journy, and went unto Genoa; and when he had there shipped himself, a huge great Snake appeared to him, and prefently vanisht out of fight. He being conquer'd by the Numantes, yielded basely. Valerius Max. lib. 1. cap. 6.

Henry the third being Emperour, kept the Feaft of Pentecoft at the City Ments in Almaine. Where arofe a differition between the fervants of the Archbishop of Mogun, and the fervants of Abbas Fuld, about their hire. They went from words to blows, and fighting with Swords, they polluted the Temple with mans bloud. The Bithops running to them, brake off this bloudy battle, and again purged the Temple. The rumult being afterwards pacified, when they fang, Thou hast made this day glorious. The Devill was heard to cry aloud through the Temple. I have made this day quarvelfome. The Emperour amazed at this strange noife, endeavoured to force away the Devill by giving many Alms, and he himfelf with his Nobles, distributed to the poor those dainties which were were prov.

0

nine 36.

vears in S

Daphne,

led the El

VF25 HIDE

thelament

Bielle

famous in blowing

ask advi

philh wit

take the

firongly have blo

and cu

pauls, in tall to fo

a living

made, i

years.

A

the Hor

Soulter

tormente.

Balt go :

dayes a

Vinter

H

Aberden

plaint b

molefte

omett

came to bracehr

and tryi

togreat

mands t

oms,

Attor of the z, that there is him and to celebrate to man that voice, and tde a great table, Pla- hers, made going into commanaffiftants, me of the as incited acle from Jolephus, ifhed by tain, was by Phleeat being mto Italy, ras made as he was n on foot, affrighted i when he d to him, r'd by the entecoft at fervants of blows, and ans bloud, eyand again cified, when Devill was is day quarendeavourid he himnties which were

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

were provided for his own Court. Nauclerus, Volumine 2. Generatione 26.

WW Hen (Rome being pillaged and undone by a home bred confpiracy) Conftans the Emperour had remained fix years in Sieily, he died at Sarogafa a City thereof, in a Bath called Daphne. For one Andreas went with him into the Bath, and killed the Emperour by throwing down a Veffel on his head as he was wiping him. Conftans his death was known in the City the fame day he died by a voice coming forth out of the Ayre. Zonaras & Cedrenue.

Bodia faith of Conftantianus, who is accounted among the skill-Bulleft workmen of the Mettal-Art in France, and is the moft famous in all the Kingdome. I have heard his comrades, when blowing a long time, no hope or likelihood of any good appeared, ask advice from the Devill, if they did right, and might accomplifth what they defired: Buthe replyed in one word, Travaillez, take the pains; the blowers being animated with this, blew fo firongly that they brought all to nothing; and they would ftill have blowen if Conftantine had not told them this was the Devills ufual cuftome, to anfwer doubtfully : But that word, Take the pains, imployed that Alchymy thould be laid afide, and he thould iall to fome labour, and honeft Art or fcience commodious to get a living : he is a mad man, that thinks Gold can fo quickly be made, in making whereof nature fpends more then a thoufand years.

A Souldier gave a Horfe to his kinfman, that when he died, he should sell him, and give the Money to the poor. He fold the Horfe and kept the Money to himself. Thirty dayes after, his Soul returning; (It was the Devill) faith, Thirty dayes have I bin tormented in Hell; but thou, who gavest not to the poor what I bad thee, shalt go thither to day, and I shall be translated from thence into Paradife. The very fame day the Devils snatcht him away, and 12. dayes after his carcale was found in an exceeding high Mountain. Vincentim, lib. 24. cap. 8.

Hefter Boethins in his 8th Book of the Hiftories of Scot. relates, that in a fmall Village of Scotland fearce 14. Miles diffant from Aberdene, there was a very beautifull young man made open complaint before the Governour of Aberdene, that he was many Months molefted and troubled with a fhe Devill, (as they call it) the handfomeft that ever he faw, and finally when the dores were thut the came to him by night, and by her fair fpeeches fore't him to embrace her: when 'twas almost day, the went away making no noife, and trying many wayes, he could by no means be freed from that to great and bafe vexation. A prudent and devout Bifhop commands the young man immediately to go to fome other place, and according 164.

167:

166.

61

according to the Christian Religion to conform himself to prayer, and fafting, more zealoufly then he used to do, hereby he thought the Devill would be put to flight from him, when he faw him fo intent upon all good works. Upon this wholefome counfell followed good fuccefle : Which when the youth had religioufly performed, within few dayes after he was clearly delivered from these Hobgoblins. So the He-Devill did no longer trouble the Woman of Navere, after her confession, and holy Communion which accompany prayer and fasting. Legitur in vità Divi Bernhardi. Vie-733 116. 4. cap. 27.

168.

169.

62

Certain Maid in Burgus pofieft with Melancholly, acknowledged that the was haunted with Vergilius his Ghoft, having for a long while conjured against it; which we may the more cafily believe, becaufe the was a plain girl, very fincere, and one who never went abroad ; Conjuration not at all prevailing, a Phyfitian gave her at first some artificiall Medicines, then some others to firengthen her, and fo the was reftored. Vierm, lib. 4. c. 23. de præstigius Dæmonum.

Hilippus wesselich Coloniensis, A Monk of the Abbey called Knechtenstein an upright and pure perfon about the year 1550: was miferably and fundry wayes tortured by a Ghoft, which brought back again the lean Abbot, dead many years before. Sometimes he was carried under the roof of the houfe, fometimes he was thrust between the rafters over the Bell, oftentimes he was on a fudden conveyed through the wall. On a time he was found, his body being laid over a pond, and his head lying upon the land. At the last, out comes the Ghost, relating the cause of his long and manifold trouble : to wit, that this was that Abbot Mathias Durenfis, fo many years buried, who tortured him becaufe he had fo exactly drawn, as 'twere to the life, the Virgin Maries picture, and had not answered the cofts and labours of Novefianus the Limner, who thereby fuffered much damage. This was true. Hereupon he added the manner how he might be abfolved, viz. that this crime could not be expiated, nor he by any means freed, unleffe for Religions fake this Phillip would travail into fome parts of Germany (whom for his integrity the Devill thought to be a fit instrument for his sports) and three Masses were read to procure his liberry, viz. de Trinit. de Domin. and de Temp. The Divines of Colony confulted to fatisfy his request, and the reft of the Monks defired the fame of their Abbot Gerard Strailgen Morfenf. who thought that Phillip was rather to be converted into another opinion by founder doctrine, and tharp reproof, that relying on God the Father of all mercy with a lively Faith, and Chrift our onely Saviour, he might floutly contemn the impoflures of the Devill, and tell that Ghoft returning back, that he was not under his jurifdiction, that he lived under the rule of others, and therefore he could not observe his commands. Which being done, The Ghos replyed :

a

replyed :

pele W

perference,

hans, infl

and not to

if he could

feverelyt

Ghoftlet

CODULARY

againft th never-can 107.29.

And

bale born within a

by an ev

inthem

COMPan

NUMES COL

前期,加加

andmigh

great has

were per

Hussand

indeed (a

WED COL

delivery !

her, and

leemed

her, Si

when the

dea: bu

cring at the tono

tuckich.

was tal

Last, (I

the dote.

Demon.

Am

was fo re

and drea

tog

ons,

If to prayer, he thought faw him fo infell followif y performi from thefe the Woman which acmbardi, V 10-

7, acknow. oft, having e more eae, and one 1g, a Phyome others - c. 23. de

ey called er 1550: t, which rs before, ometimes nimes he e he was ing upon caufe of hat Abbor im becaule gin Maries Novefrann s was true. folved, viz. cans freed, fome parts to be a ht to procure Divises of Monks dewho thought opinion by od the Faonely Savi-Devill, and his jurifeiherefore he The Ghol replyed:

and cunning delusions of Devils. 9. 63

replyed : Tell the Deputy, for he hoped he would confirm his purpole. Whereupon the Abbot, when he perceived the Devill to perfevere, and the Monk not confidently enough to refift his illufions, inflructed him again, carefully admonithing him to repent, and not to be fo prone to hearken to the fleights of the Devill : but if he continued to hear those fpirits, as formerly, he threatned most feverely to whip him, and heavily to beat him. Hereupon the Ghoft feeing his endeavours to be vain, by reafon of the Abbots conftancy, and Pbillips mind more elevated with truft in God against the fraudulent and deitructive policies of the Devill, never came again, but went fome where elfe. Vierm, Lib. 4. cap. 29. Julanual Jurgueha Kunght of the Monof

Ntonius Surquetus Knight, of the moft Noble order of the Garter, and likewife a Gounfellour, left benind him a Son, which was bale born, who afterwards married a wife at Brugus. This woman within a while after the was married, was lamentably tormented by an evill genius, infomuch that whitherfoever the went, though in the midft of good and honeft Matrons, the was inatcht out of their company, and hal'd out of one Chamber into another, and oftentimes conveyed away, fometimes into this hole, fometimes into that, notwithftanding all that were prefent did with all reluctancy and might endeavour to hold her fast : yet all this was without any grear harm, or prejudice to her body. Every body believed, and were perfwaded that this befell to her by a drab, that envied her Husband, with whom formerly the was in love withall, for he was indeed (as I may fo fay) another Narciffus. In this interim the was with child, nevertheleffe was the thus ill-handled. Her time of delivery being at hand, when there was but one onely woman with her, and the fent away the fervant to call the Midwife, this Harlot feemed to come in unto her, and performed the Midwifes office for her. She for very grief and trouble of mind fwounded away : when the came to her felt, the felt that the was delivered of her burden : but the child appeared not ; every body exceedingly wondring at it. But the day after, it happened that when the awaked, fhe found the Babe by her in the Bed, fwadled up, which fhe often luckled. But not long after, when the was afleep, the Infant was taken away from her, and never afterwards found. They faid, (I know not what ? Papers with Magick notes were found in the dore-lock. Historiam recenset Vierus, Lib. 2. cap. 48. de præftig. Dæmon.

A Religious maid whofe name was Judith, was by the Devill most cruelly writhed with Convultion fits, and her jaws clang rogether fo, that the could not eat; her tongue alfo fometimes was fo restrained that the could not fpeak, but made a most hideous and dreadfull noife. Idem, lib. 3. cap. 13.

A cer-

171.

172.

173.

A Certain Country Priest living at Durweis, about Esweiler, did confidently promife, that he would fet at quiet a pretty young maid named Helena, which was haunted with a Devill, in a Village called Loes, fcituated by Aldenhovia, fome of his neighbouring Priefts being convocated to this folemn fight; and firange wonder. At last the Devill told this Exorcift having for fome while taken great pains to little or no purpole in diffurbing him, that he must now defist, for about the glasse which was fet to illustrate. him, were many of his co-partners, which would confirm him. This poor Prieft giving credence to this father of lies, goes about by the glaffe to force them away, but when he perceived that he laboured in vain, being very angry, he brake out into this speech. If thou canft go out of one Christian into another, come forth out of her into me. To whom the Devill prefently replyed; What need I tempt him, whom at the last day I am certain, is my proper right to enjoy. Afterwards being defirous to know what the Devills opinion was concerning the Maffe, Jobannes Sartorius Parochus in Leon, askt him in plain English, Why this little maid instantly at the ringing of the Bell to Maffe- was alwaics by him brought into the Temple. To this question he faid, He could not prefently make his answer, but he would confider on it. Alus bic celebratu, Anno 1559. circiler 17. Augusti. Vierme, lib. 4. cap. 21.de. prestigius Damonum.

"He Nuns of Ventetus thut up close in the Gounty of Horn. were cruelly handled by an evill spirit. A poor woman in Lent time borrowed three Measures of Salt of the Virgins, and reftored almost twice as much about Easter. Here in the bed-chamber were found small white balls, as 'twere feeds pargetted over with Sugar, but being tafted, they were falt. In the same place they took notice of a Ghoft walking there, and groaning, they heard also that many Virgins were called to arife, and to go with her to the fire advertifing them, that the was not well. If at any time they took the Chamberpot to make water, it was by force taken from them, and they watered their bed. Sometimes they were haled by the feet out of their beds, and were tickled at the Soles of their Feet, that with overmuch laughter they were ready to dye. Some had pieces of fleth pul'd off, many had their legs, arms, and Faces writhed the contrary way. Some were fo tormented, though for fifty and odde dayes they cat nothing but Turnep Porrage without bread, yet they ipued up fuch abundance of black stuffe, like Ink it felf fo sharp, that it took off the skin from their Mouth. Some were lifted up above a Mans height, and inftantly thrown down again. When about 13. friends came to vifit and comfort them that were fick, they fell down from the Table, not speaking a word nor fenfible thereof; others lay as if they were dead with their legs and arms Croffe; one was lift up aloft, and although fome ftanding by, ftrugled to fave her with their hands, yet was the inatchz

Nor

resb; to fome year

plexed by

trab ofu

tiat dow

asther

while f

Deling of

One Gent

offer agy paffintess tobe the of Which I fheremb tobe inh tartiv, s little and dreadful ligens ica

lib. 3. ca

Avia

mirry a ly loved

of her rel

her, and

Kanda.

led, Th

amongit

led upon

(mice as)

BLB

時約,

1000万、创 neury young IL, ID a Val S BEIEthoonfitater waslone while m, that he to illelinit ohtm him, 2005 20000 d that he labis ipeech, e forth eet ed; What my proper as the Dein Parkins d inflantly m brought not pre-Alus bic . cap. 2 1, de.

of Horn, woman in os, and rebed-chamgetted over lame place aning, they to go with If at any by force the tes they were at the Soles ready to dye. gs, arms, and ented,though Potrage withk stoffe, like Mouth, Some rown down 2. omfort them aking a word ad with their Ithough fome yer was the

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devids.

fnatcht away above their heads, and thrown down headlong again. Some went upon their toes, as if they had no feet, or at leaft no ufe of them. They climb'd Trees alto like Cats, and came down again from them without any alteration of their body. It happened likewife, that the Governeffe of the Monaftery (which they call the Mother) in her perambulation, as fhe was difficuring with Margaret, Countefs of Burenf. was hurt on her thigh; The wound was black and blue, but was healed again. This cruelty contrinued evidently full three years, which afterwards they concealed. Wide Vierum. lib. 3. cap. 9.

Or unlike thefe, did the religious Virgins undergo at Colonie, When they were cloyfter'd up in the Monaftery called Nazareth; to whom yet this was added, That though they were for fome years before many and fundry wayes troubled, vexed, and perplexed by the devil; yet in the fixty fourth year, befide other Specitrals often appearing in a terrible manner, they oftentimes fell flat downward, the lowest part of their body jogging up and down, as the manner is in the sports of Venus, their eyes being all the while thut, which afterwards they open'd to their thame, where being out of wind by their great pains taking, they took breath. One Gertrud gave a remedy to this dileale, which in the 14th year of her age being included in a Monastery, merrily underwent these paftimes in her bed, though every night almost with a confectated robe the endeavoured to chale away her Lover that lay with her. Which sport, when another Maid that lay in the next bed heard, the trembled all over, and was tortur'd with ftrange kinds of convulfions; fometimes in the fit the was blind, and though the feem'd to be in her wits, yet the uttered divers things lightly, and defperately. So did many more befide her. Thus this fore fpread by little and little like an infection, most of all when they did not first rake good counfel. This faid Paramour wrote to her Sweet-Heart dreadful Letters, afterwards found by Johannes Vierus, making diligent search in the same Colledge. Anno 1562. 25 Maii. Vierus lib. 3. cap. 11. de præstig. Demonum.

A Virgin of a very noble Family, being very much grieved, that the could not obtain the confent of her Parents and Friends to marry a young Man of a mean Extract, whom the most passionately loved; as the was walking in much perplexity, for the avertness of her relations therein, the Devil, in the thape of her Lover, met her, and perfwaded her to go to the Nunnery of St. Bridget near Xantae. And being there, the ran mad, pranced about, bleated, roar'd, and at last was mounted up into the Ayr, and then strangled. This distemper grew as it were Epidemical, and infectious amongst the other Nuns; and at length, from one to another, it feifed upon a Child of the Keeper of the prison, whom he caught twice as he descended, and so faved him. Vierus lib. 3. cap. 9.

К

1750

The

69

He Nunnes in Hestmont of Neognague, for some years were haunted, by a fpirir entring in the night-time into the dormitory or Bed-Chamber, as though he had a great company with him; he did feem to play most sweetly on the Harp, that he might allure the Nuns to dance, and then fomething like a dog leapt into the bed of one of them, whom they fulpected therefore of unchaftity. Vierus ibidem.

177.

178.

66

176.

Have feen another honourable Colledge on the borders of the Coloniensian Province, where for the space of eight years, a Devill in the fhape of a dog, ran all about in the day-time, lurking under the veftures of the religious Nuns, and did feem to fhew by the outward motion of their garmentsy figns of unchast actions, Idem lib. 3. cap. 9.

He Nunnes that were in the Kenterpian Monasterie near old Mark, in the Earldom of Marchland, near Hammon, were grievoufly tormented with firange Convaltion fits, they breathed out a very flinking breath in their fit, or a little after the affault of the fame, which did come upon them fometimes once a day, - fometimes oftner, and at fome times troubled them many hours together; the Maids were very fenfible of the coming of the Convultion fits, and did often affirm afterwards, that they could difcern those that flood by, one from another, and could hear; but because of the convulsion of the tongue, they could not fo well speak ; fome wete tortured lefs then others: But this was almost common amongst them all, That when one of them was toffed, the reft also thould be laid into feveral beds, onely hearing a hurly-burly, that they might be vexed in the like miferable manner. The first that began to be tortured, was Anne Zemgaw, who first complained of a pain of the left fide, or the fpleen, and was therefore thought to be troubled with the Falling-ficknesse, went to Ariola, who made her believe they were hurted by the Witcheraft af Elfa the Kamenfian Woman, which afterwards was burned alive with her Mother. Hence the Devil got some strength, and did not onely begin to torment them with divers kinds of Convultions, but also to provoke them to bite others, and one another, and that they might firike, and be born up, and cast down, without hurr, as feathers were, from whence they were supposed they had no power over themselves: And if they were withheld from beating or fitiking, their hearts aked ; but if they were let alone, although they did hurt, ftrike, or bite themfelves, yet they were fensible of no harm. And they thought it necessary, that each should tyrannize over their own bodies ; And if at any time Anne did speak in her fit, she did it as though another did both breathe it in and out; but in the interim the understood what the fpoke, but the fpeech being done, the utterly forgat all her former words ; neither did the mind ferioufly any thing that was either good or evil, but was as it were in a Lechargy

thargy, w Idigious t

boraf at a nice ipor

WERE CXO

blood ;

equally their frei

although

tion did 1

mitch cu

he appea

Kancels,

ved, that the laft p into the h

and then

tada L

there w

felled }

apicof

CUT 21Y

mangus

Ohn F

when

J very d

awake

tome evi that his

like to }

belet wi

Dogg, a

stored to padged, i and by n ed. T

of a Kn

was jud

to move

cimes on

and the lown, h

laid with

and fpce

height of

carry da

by pain.

is had br

ions.

Pears were othe dormimpany with hat he might og leapt into of unchalti-

dets of the ears, a Deme, lutking to fhew by aft actions, ie near old were gric. cathed out ault of the iy, »fomeours toge= Convultion fern thole aule of the fome wetc ongft them ild be laid y might be organ to be pain of the be troubled her believe enfian Woher. Hence to torment ovoke them trike, and be were, from themfelves: their hears hurt, ftrike, And they heir own bofbedid is as o the interim door, the un and ferioully were in a Lo thang)

and cunning delusions of Devils.

67

179.

11

thargy, without fenfe, diferenion, and judgment, or reason: If any religious man did fpeak to her, the feemed to be tortured by Satan; but if at any time other women did talk to her about their femipine fports, the was wonderfully taken with them; when they were exorcized, there guilhed out of their mouthes a great deal of blood ; All the Virgins were to afflicted by the Spirit, were unequally tormented by him, as he were a Serpent, under the fole of their feet, which burnt them as if it were scalding water : And although they were diverfly tormented, yet the ftomach and nutrition did remain in them all alike. The Devil did speak often and much out of them that were the youngeft, that were mad; to whom he appeared in a black form, in the shape of a black Cat, or Elfa Kamenfis, or of her mother, or brother; and it was fleightly believed, that they were fo cruelly handled by them all; where in the the last place Anne did firmly purpose in her mind, not to return into the Monastery, where the was left by her Parents direction; and then the was not afflicted: But if at any time it chanced, that the had a Letter fent from the Abbateffe of that Monastery or Colledg, there was a great trembling and horrour that invaded her, and poffeffed her whole body, as though the were affaulted with the relaple of her former difeafe : but after fhe married a husband, without any sense of her disease or affliction. Vierus lib. 3. cap. 10. de præstigus Demon.

Ohn Fernelius relates in his fecond Book of occult caufes, That when a certain Man was travelling in Summer time, he was very dry in the night, and rifing out of his dream, and being awakened, and finding no drink, he by chance catched hold on tome evil thing which he met; and commanding it, he perceived that his jawes were fhut together as though by a hand, and was like to have been strangled : and when he was thus befieged and befet with this spirit, he thought he faw in the dark a great black Dogg, and feared to be devoured by it; who afterwards being reflored to his right wits again, did relate it all in order : Many judged, this man, by his pulle, and heat and roughness of his tongues and by reason of too much watching, was meerly mad and distractcd. The fame Author reports, That there was another young man, of a Knights Family, for fome few years by the fhaking of his body, was judged to have the Convulsion fits; for fometimes he would fo move and fling his left arm, only, fometimes his right, fometimes onely one finger, otherwhile a leg, and both at other times, and the trunck of his body with fuch swiftnesse, that being laid down, he could scarce be held in by four servants; But his head laid without being shaken or firr'd at all; and he had his tongue and speech free, and was in his right mind and senies; yea, in the height of his Convultions, he was taken with it at leaft ten times every day, but was well in the intervals, but fomething worn out by pain. It might have been deemed truly the Falling-fickness, if it had brought madnels and flupidity with it; there were the moft K 2 skilfull.

Baden-Württemberg

skilfull Phyficians confulted with about it, and they did think it was a Convultion, near bordering on the Epilepfie, together with a malignant and venomous vapour that did beat against the backbone, out of which the vapour came, which did flow into those nerves, which are fprigg'd from the back-bone into the joynts all about, but not into the brain; this caufe being taken for granted, that it might be removed, they ministred to him divers glysters and firong purgations of all forts, and Cupping-glaffes were faftened to the roots of the nerves, nourifhing things, oyntments, plaifters, which first were for purgation, after for strengthening, to drive away this malignant and poylonous humours; these doing him little good, they procured him fweating in Baths and in wafhes, in the juice of the Ebeene Tree of Guaiaca, which did as little help him, becaufe all of us thrayed far from the knowledg of the truth ; for being first taken with it, in the third moneth a certain devill, being the author of all this mitchief, did betray himfelf with a voice, and in uncouth words and phrafes, and fentences, as well Latin and Greek, although the afflicted party was ignorant of the Greek tongue; he did detect many fecrets of Phyfitians, that he had circumvented them with much danger, and that they had by their fruitlesse Medicines almost choaked his body. And as often as the father came to visit his afflicted fon, he going a great way out of fight, cryed out, Drive away this which is coming to him, or wreft the chainfrom his neck. For by this you may know, that the French Knights wore gold chains, in which the image of St. Michael did hang; the fubtile devil did feign, that he feared the Image of St. Michael, that he might more evidently deceive those that flood by: As though he feared the picture of any Saint, when he feared not Chrift the expresse Image of God, whom he was bold to assault, yea, and to tempt. Furthermore, being asked, Who he was? or by what power he might be removed ? he faid, That he had many receptacles, within which he lay hid, and could quietly go to otiacr.

180.

68

He Town of Schiltach in Germany the 14th of the Ides of April, (which day was the very Thursday before Easter, in the year of our Lord Chrift, 1533.) was burned, being fet on fire by a Witch, as Erafmus Roterdamus relates from the authority of Henricus Glarcanus, as alfo Cardanus in bis 19. book de fubrilitate. The Devil made a noife, and gave a hiffing fign or watch-word from a certain place in one of the houses. The Officer of the Town thinking it to be a thief, went to fearch the place, but found nothing, nor any body ; but prefently in another and higher room, the fame noife was heard, whither also the Officer went to catch the Thief (forfooth:) but when he found no body there neither, but heard the fame voyce upon the chimney top, it prefently flruck into his mind, that it was a Spectrall, and he bid his fervants be of good courage. There were prefently two Priefts fent for, who when they had uled their skill in exorcifons, were thus answered ; That he was a Dei miliale

HO MOIL

A Cour year, of a certi were ma as if he away b they he to wel gined,

N the

being 意開加

Citizen, With the whatiper ocard, | that wa mouth, Which 14 SOE them; (i 和助动 10, 200 Wasite prodig coquin that con hear goo ardent p cousiel, contradi all, by the was any of th

wasfree

and min

BLB

vill

ons,

did think it gether with ut the back. W into those thejoyntsall for granted, plyfters and erc faftened s, plaisters, g, to drive ung him lir. walkes, in little help the truth; a devill, be ith a voice, well Latin the Greek he had cir. d by their tten as the ay out of m, or wrest the French titbael did age of St. r ftood by: feared not to aflault, ne was? of he had maietly go to es of April, in the year er on fire by prity of Henvord from a Town thinkand nothingsand, the fame in the and the yea his mind, ood courage, hey had uled be was a Deuil

and cunning delusions of Devils.

vil indeed. And when they asked him, What he did there? He faid, he would burn the Town. And when the Priefts threatned him, he told them, he valued not their threatnings, for one of them was a Whotemafter, and they were both Thieves. Prefently after he took a girle, with whom he had had familiarity for fourteen years, (when in the interim the came to confession, and received the Eucharift every year once, and who had communicated but that very day) and having carried her in the Ayr, fet her upon the very top of a chimacy, and delivering her a pot, commanded her to turn it; which whileft the did, the Town was burned to the ground in no more than an hours space.

A Courtier of the Kings, in a Speech he made at wittemberg in the year, 1538. concerning good and bad Angels, makes mention of a certain Maid poffeft by the Devil, for whom when prayers were made in the Church, the Devil ceafed his attempts, and made as if he had wholly left her, that by this deceit he might make her away before publique prayers were made for her. For when as they had remitted their care of her, whileft the went to the River to wafh her hands, the was drowned fooner than could be imagined.

N the year, 1536, at Franckford at Ucadra, there was a Maid, being the daughter of Marcus the Fisherman, that was taken with a pain in the head, and by a phrenfie, one Georgius a Kulifch, a Citizen, pitying her condition, took her into his houfe; at length, when the was pollefled of the Devil, the did very wonderful fears, whatfoever the fingred, whether it was a cloath, any bodies breaft, beard, head, the fnatched at it, and afterwards the got the Coyn that was used in that Country, and forthwith throwing it into her mouth, the chewed and did cat it; And the did take away money which was held fast in their hands, at which they admired greatly. Sometimes of her own accord the offered the moneys unto them; the often did Iwallow Needles that the fnatcht up, and fpake in the idiome and dialect of High Germany, which the was not used to, and also contrary to the propriety of her own language; neither was it cafie to comprize in words, or in an enchiridion, what was prodigiously performed and acted by her: Wherefore they did enquire of Dactor Martin Luther, What was to be done to her in that condition ? Who answered, That she was to be brought to hear godly Sermons, and there to be interceded for, with constant ardent prayers poured out to God : And they following Luther's counfel, brought her to Church, where publikely the did often contradict the Minister that was preaching the Word. But at the laft, by the Divine grace, the prayers of the Church being heard, the was freed from Satan, and reftored to health; neither did there any of that madneffe or demonaical difease trouble her after, but was freed from the dominion of Satan, and whole both in body and mind, and after faithfully did ferve the Citizens of Franckford 181.

182.

69

70

183.

ford : The most Prudent Senate of that Common-Wealth did command this Prodigy to be published, Anno 1538.

A Nno 1559. not far from Joachims Valleys, there was a Smith had a daughter excelled in modefly and honefly, being diligently conversant in exercises of Piery, (by Divine permission) the was fet upon by Satan about Lent-time, oftentimes the divel took her, and threw her upon the ground, as if the had been vexed with the Falling-fickness; Which thing troubled her Parents fo, that they fought counfel of them that prophefic of future things, by a Pythonick or divellish spirit. By reason of the wickednesse of her parents, the Devil afterwards boafted, that his power was fo confirmed and encreased: About Easter Satan began to speak in the Virgin with a humane voice, and often appeared in the form of a Cuckow, of a Crow, of Hornets, and other Birds, and did imitate their voice in every respect; he spoke divers wonderfull things in Virgin, which would be too great a work to mention them now ; And there came a great concourse of people to the Maid ; many ftrangers did come out of feverall places to fee this wonder, and heard Satan speaking out of the Virgin; whereupon many out of a holy zcal did provoke him by words, and undauntedly did hear him answering. In the mean time, the young woman patiently did endure the croffe, and joyned her prayers unceffantly with the prayers of the Church : and as often as the did call upon the Name of Chrift, and requested to be freed from that evil one, by whom the was opprefied; by and by the Devil did rage upon her with more outragious fury, her eyes were fwelled, bunching out, her tongue was twined out of her mouth like as a limber twig, and was extended to the longitude of a mans hand ; her head was writhen and fcrewed unto her back, and in a fad and horrible manner Satan did torment her, there was not any intermission of her fits : If any had enquired how fhe did, or how the cafe flood with her? the answered, her affliction, as by her fenses the perceived, feemed as though the even now were flicked in the bottom of a River to be drowned; but by the coming of Religious men, the deemed the was inatched out of the jawes of death. All the Neighbouring Priefts and Preachers of the Gofpel daily came to her, who talking with the Virgin, the Devil with great derifion answered; And as often as there was any mention made of Chrift, he did diverr into fome filthy and frothy fable. And being demanded, how he entred into her ? answered, In a draught of Ale, in the form of a fly; for it was two years that he had vexed her, cre ever the came to a found mind : her Parents going to a Witch, was the caufe why the Devil had the more power over her. A certain Man, one Helias Hirsch, fingular for piety in that Country, did watch with the Virgin almost whole Nights, and by his prayers strive against Satan, upon whom he raged with opprobrious terms, and all the contumelies he could ; and as often as he was about to come forth out of his house, the evil spirit foretold, faying, Behold, this facrilegious ious I

bertepo

nie Nam madneffe

Deville

fore, or

Lot thy

fwered,

beinguti a itore, t

wonderf

played n

; day the b

by white

Golflait

by, but I

that they

of that p

gate this

a: At hinkly

#Allant

if finiters

Godard

into Hel

when Ga

taxia (uh

朝朝前

cillide c

DIA TETS

tete and chings (a

Winarth

Imight

Bouts.

Doff feet

Gratio

beat.

morpho

Where

ne woel

cor the

did pray

asoften

lowing

cize on

When r

roared w

oms,

lth did com-

was a Smith being dill. miffion) the e divel took vexed with its 10, that ings, by a ncfie of her wasio coo.s eak in the form of a did imitate things in them now; aid; many onder, and pon many dauntedly oman painceflantly call upon tevil one, rage upon bunching s a limber ; her head ind horrible iffion of her flood with eived, leemot a River the deemed cighbouring , who talk. vered ; And e did divert led, how he e form of a ver the came he caufe why Man, one He tch with the trive against and all the to come forth ld, this facrilegices

and cunning delusions of Devils.

71

legious Heliss comes again to afflict me. This holy and godly man, by the power of Gods Word, did oppofe him, and frequently using the Name of Jelus Chrift, drove the Devil to new outrages, as the madneffe of a Dæmoniack was heard afar off: Sometimes the Devil speaking to Helias, faid, Ohe, dance with me, either go before, or follow, as thou pleafest. To which things Helias replyed, Let thy Dance lead thee into the bottom of Hell. The Devil anfwered, Go thy waies, now thou thalt fee dances. Thefe words being uttered, he roared and bellowed, and by and by entring into a flove, he appeared in the fhape of a Catt and Dogg; thefe with wonderful leaping did lead the Dance, and at last vanquished : He played many pranks of this kind : Two dayes after Trinity-Sunaday the holy Prieft did fet upon the Devil again, enquiring of him by what means or power he had poffeffed her? by the command of God, faith he, from whom I am fent, that I might torment the boby, but I cannot hurt her foul; that I might give notice to Men, that they should abstain from pride, ulury, gluttony, and other fins of that nature : and although it be fore against my will to promulgate thefe things, yet I am commanded by God, and forced to do it : At the last day I know, that I shall have more fouls then God himfelf will have. To which the Minister of the Word of Schlackwalden(is replyed, Thou lyeft, faith he, O facrilegious Wretch, for if finners shall repent, they shall have falvation; but the cremall God at the day of Judgment, will thrust thee and thy companions into Hell fire. Why didst thou banish thy self out of Heaven, when God had created thee a glorious Angel. My Scat was not fixed fure there, faith he, Thou mayeft as well spare labour, for I am not ignorant, how carefull thou wast for this Margaret, (to he called the Virgin, whole name was Anne) and at whitfontide made prayers publickly to God for her. I have done fo, answered the Minister, and I will not give over to do so yet, untill we precipitate and caft thee headlong hence into hell by our prayers : thefe things faid, he asked him, Was not thou also fent to afflict 3062 What then, faith he? oh that now I had the like power given, that I might scatter the pestilence. And this conflict did last near two hours: Amongst other things, the Minister faid, Behold, thou that bast been the chiefest and beautifullest of creatures, and the vertex of the Creation, veils thy felf under the ugly mask of a hog, or other unclean beaß. O good Priest, answered the Devil, for often I am metamorpholed into a Hare, and am the daintiest dish for great Men, Wherefore going now from hence, the Prieft asked him, whither he would go? Some few daies being past, the Pious Priest brought out the Maid, and there in a great Congregation of people they did pray to God, and praifed him with Hymnes and Pfalms, and as often as Jelus Chrift was named, the Devil did rage with a bellowing and hideous noife, as though a ruine was threatned to feize on all things: These things performed, they went away. When the Maid was brought back from the Temple, the Devil roared with his voice as a warlike Trumper, faying, Little doth it profic

72

184.

profit you to remove me from this place; for truly, eight of my companions shall now depart hence. At length, the Minister of the Word of Schlackenwaldensis, together with ten other Ministers were called : John Matthefius lent two Deacons out of the Valleys, and from morning untill noon, there was great zeal and fludy in the company, of praying, finging, and reading of the Scriptures; this done, they went to dinner: After they had dined, there came the Minister of the Gospel of Schlackenmaldensis, bringing with him the Governour of the Caftle of Prague : there was preient a great company of Men, with one accord linging praifes to, and calling upon Jesus Chrift, and with ardent zeal pouring out their supplications to God, that they might be heard; and then the Devil was cast out, and flew out of the window like a fwarm of flies : But before he went out, he defired of the girle, that he might but remain in one part of her body, in the nail of her finger, and at the laft, to be but in one hair; but every one of these was denyed to him. Furthermore, being about to go out of her, he spoke after this fort; All ye contemners of the Word, Ministry, and Sacraments, all ye that are addicted to Ufury and Gluttony, are mine body and Soul; and namely, he warned and admonished the Priest of Schlackenwaldenfis, that he fhould call the Citizens that belonged to his Church, to repentance; for God thirs after our falvation, and therefore the Devil was compelled even against his will, to warn men to repen-When Saran was caft out, the Maid was carried into her tance. father's house, and in her right mind, being refreshed in her Soul and body by the blood of Jefus Chrift: and having her found judgment and right wits again, the carneftly commended her felf to the Ministers of the Church, to be remembred in their publique prayers. Fincelius, in his third Book of Miracles:

TN the Year 1567, in Trantenan, a City of Bohemia, there was a certain Man, who did fo gather up Riches, and creft famous Buildings, and was fo fortunate in all his enterprifes, that every one admired at him; at length he fell into a fickneffe, and dyed thereof, and was very honourably buried : But a little while after his death and burial, his body (or rather a Devill, who by his diabolical power carried his body all about) did clasp and embrace very many men fo firaitly, that many of them dyed ; yet fome of those recovered again, who all with one confent confessed, that they were thus beelipped and hugg'd by this rich man, being in the fame habit that they had feen him when he was alive : Therefore the Governour of that place, that this Spearum might be laid and repressed, commanded the body of that man to be digged up, and the grave opened; and although he had layn in the ground for the fpace of 20 weeks, yet he was not rotten, but was as fat and plump, as young and well nourifhed bodies use to be; the body was delivered to the hangman then, who carried it away unto the place where malefactors used to receive their punishment; he cut off his head with an ax, and when the body was wrapt up, he took out the heart

heatt and as though fore the h free, and h

Cier mau; he fhould fe means the that about

THere I that a that they c of Amters the Devil was a figh did vomi loch this enchanter by a Bener itapot Pa lefied, ar moaethy. milirable ews that to the lew LED by the Pope was

J poffeffec this answer the Maid I in German brating th fo it cann a fign of done, at white (p)k white (p)k fpirit,

Dha Vie

by an evil i the flable, tail, or with ling of an o

ons,

eight of my Minitero er Miniften the Valleys, and fludy in Scriptures: there came ng with him elent a great and calling heir luppli-Devil was s: But bebut remain the laft, to him, Futis fort; All lye that are Soul; and uckenmalden. Charch, to refore the n to repened into her n her Soul ound judgher felt to ir publique

there was a rect famous , that every e, and dyed e while after o by hisdiaand embrace yet fome of infeffed, that being in the Therefore t be laid and eged up, and round fer the at and plump ly was delive. te place when t off his head rook our riv

and cunning delusions of Devils.

heatt and cut it in pieces, there guilted blood out of his body, just as though one alive had been to fuffer condign punishment; therefore the hangman threw the body into the fire, being tyed head to feet, and burnt it, a great multitude of men standing by.

Afarius Colonienfis writes in his dialogue, of a Priefts daughter that was much tormented by a wicked fpirit, and was mau; her father was counfelled to do after this manner, That he fhould fend his daughter beyond the River Rhene, and by that means the Devil departed from her 5 but he did fo beat her father, that about three dayes after, he dyed.

Here are, faith Bodinus, in Spain, Italy, and efpecially Germany, that are poffeffed with the Devil for ten or twenty years, that they cannot be driven away; fo there were found fome boyes of Amsterdam, in the year 1556, who were possesfeld 30 years, and the Devils could not be driven away by any Exorcifm. That allo was a fign that happened to those that are bewitched, because they did vomit faw-duft, fmall pieces of glaffe, hair, needles, and other fuch things, which ufually happened or befell to fuch that were enchanted or bewitched. It is recorded, That in the year 1554, by a Benediaine Monk of Rome, (whom Cardinal Gondius, the Bithop of Paris had brought thicker) 80 girles and women were poffefled, and had exorcilms, but nothing could be done for fix moneths. To one that asked the Devil, why he did to poffefle those miferable girles, he gave this answer, That he was sent from those lews that took grievoully, that those whose greatest part belonged to the Jewish Nation were baptized, which is believed to be spoken by the Devil, because he supposed or thought Theatinus the Pope was about to die, to whom he was an enemy.

John Vierus in his 5th book, and 14. chap. tells of a girl that was poffeffed, which he faw in Germany, and that the Devil gave this answer to an Exorcift, telling him, That there was need that the Maid should make a religious profession to Marcodurus, a Town in Germany, and at the third time falling upon her knees, and celebrating the Masse upon the Altar of St. Anne, the should be cured; so it came to passe, that the girle was freed, and foretold her of such a fign of her freedom to come toward the end of the Masse; This done, at the end of the Masse, the Maid and the Priest faw a white splendid Image, and then the was treed from the demonaical spirit.

There was a Woman of Menilius Dammatinus, the Lady Roffe by name, who from the eighth year of her age, began to be bound by an evil spirit to a Tree, or to the foot of a bed, or to a manger in the stable, one hand tyed to another by a rope, or a hair of a mares tail, or with flax, and that with such fwistnesse, that in the twinkling of an eye the Devil would have done it, and vanish away. In L

183.

187.

73

185.

186.

the year 1552. the Virgin was brought to Paris, Doctor Picardus and other Divines (pent all their Arts to free her, but nothing took effect. Hollerius Medicus a Phyfitian, laughing at them, faid, the was troubled with the difeafe Melancholly, but afterwards when he faw the wonder in a great multitude with his own eyes, and fecing the maiden flanding between two or three women to cry out, and by and by to fee her hands fo bound as they could not be loofened, and that the bands had need to be cut, he acknowledged that it was the evill fpirit. This appeared to no man, onely the Virgin beheld a white cloud when the fpirit drew near to bind her. Sylvula, of Wonderfull Hiftories, and of Magicall and diabolicall Witchcrafts, and of divers of the Devills delufions.

A Pollonius being in India with the Brachman-Philosophers, reports that he faw very ftrange wonders : he faid that these Philosophers at their pleasure could make it fair and foul weather, ' bring tempest, or make calms, and could prepare feasts with all the Veffels fitting for them (yea, he faith that they did it in his prefence) when there was none to be seen, who make ready the banquet, or waited in setting on, and taking off the distes. And moreover he faid that when they pleased they could make earthquakes the fame he affirms that he saw amongs the Gymnosophists in $\pounds thi$ opia, who made the trees bend themselves to the ground, and speak. Fulgosure Philostrato.

THere are divers Families in Africa which do by their voice I onely, bewitch those who they immoderately praise, Pling 7th Book, cap. 2. ex Ifigono and Nympbrodoro; hence came the cuftome amongft us (which A iftotle, 20. fed. Probl. 34. witneffeth) that being about to praile any thing, we make this Preface, left our words should be to our detriment, as God ball fave it. Gellius 9th Book, 4. chap. Ifigonus adds, that there are things of the fame nature among the Triballians and Illyrians, who by their fight bewitch and kill fome upon whom they look long, efpecially with angry eyes, yea one may perceive mischief in their eyes. And 'tis more remarkable that they have two Apples in each eye. Apollonides reported there were divers women in Scythia of this fort, which were called Bythye. And there are a kind of people in Pontus called Thibians, and many other of the like nature, whole marks he faith are thefe, in one eye they have a double Pupilla, in the other the picture of a Horfe, and moreover that they cannot fink, nor are burthened with any garments. Demon relates a fort of people called Pharnacians in Æthiopia, not much unlike to thefe, whole fweat brings rottenneffe to those bodies which they touch, and there are women which every where infect with their fight, having double eyes, or pupilla's in them; Cicero alfo is the Authour of it, and Pliny in his 7. Book 2. chap. Neuro, tells of a people of Scythia (who are the greateft enchanters) that they Metamorphofe themfelves from men into Wolves. Herodotus, in Book, 4.

Rhodus

189.

190.

74

18.2

n Her

Ktte

water of

to delliton

can capil

proper li

IN the 8

wooder

defined; fo

Delle,25 D

were div

in the fee

pian gam

Ring, ap

fine trad

being tog

in that b

alagues.

jurers, ma

creat valu

the idol o

ny of the

that hift

Dicious, a

firepgth,

the Wor

practicat

the Hand

languag

Det. 1.

THE

L gitia

forme what

Other W

and book.

and

BLB

BADISCHE

LANDESBIBLIOTHEK

MS;

tor Picardae sothing took by faid, the wards when yes, and feeto ery out, not be loofevledged that the Virgin her, Sylcudiabolicall

ophers, rethat thele al weather, is with all tin his prey the ban-And moreparthquakes s in *Æthi*and ipeak.

heir voice aile, Pluny me the cupeffeth) that e, left our Gellius 9th he fame naightbewitch with angry d'tis more pollonides rewhich were us called The he faith an er the picture re burthened led Pharmari. (weat brings re are women uble eyes, a nd Pliny in his (who are the lyes from moi

Rhain

and cunning delusions of Devils.

R Hodus being first named Ophiufa, afterwards Telebinis, in that the Telebines inhabited the Island, fome call them Wizzards, and fay, that they are Inchanters, and that they fprinkle the water of Styx's lake upon living Creatures and plants, on purpole to defiroy them; and as Diodorus faith, 5th book, 12. chap. they can caufe clouds, showers of rain, hail, fnow, and change their proper shapes when they will, &c. Strato 14 book.

TN the Ephefian Letters, there is mention made of those, who with wonderful facility, as by a divine infpiration, attained to what they defired; for they report at Ephefus, there are divers Notes, and magical voices, by the using of which they are victorious in every businelle, as Diogenianus, Eustachim reports by those Letters, That there were divers words like to riddles, having no coherence, written in the feet, girdle, and crown of Diana. Suidas addes, In the Olympian games, there was one Milefius fet in the Ephefian wreftling-Ring, and was able to do nothing in the conflict, becaufe that Ephefim nad some Ephesian characters written on his ankle. Which being together, was marked, the letters being taken away, and Ephelim that had tyred out thirty, now laid down himfelf, vide Erasmus adagies. But that there were many of the Ephefians that were conjurers, may be gathered out of, that many of them were converted by the Apoftles Sermons, and burnt their magical Books, being of great value; for the Devils power was great in that place, becaule the Idol of Diana was set up there, AH. 19.

WW Hen the Goths were travelled out of Scandinavia, they marched to Scythia; Philimer their King did retain many of their magicall Women in prilon, as Jordan Gothm writes in that hiftory; which fort of women, the King accounted most pernitious, and by his proclamation banished them into Wilderness, left they should kill the Souldiers by poysons, or weaken their strength, being driven away for a long while, they wandred about the Woods incessure of their Incubus spirits; from hence they report, that the Wanes, a cruel generation of men came, which used no humane language, but a certain Image of speech. Bonfinim second Book, Dec. 1.

The Northern Bothnici, Zappi, and Finnones, are excellent Magitians; also the Biarmi, who live under the Pole, they affume what shape they will; also they know what is done in the other World by their friends or enemies. Olaus book 1. chap. 1. and book 2. chap. 18.

restrict of Sales (where Lag Cheve) . 21276 Third To Party It

ILU WAS OLD THINK

194.

193.

75

192.

76

195.

196.

T is reported, that Zoroaftres, the King of the Badrians, found out the Art of Magick, and hath written a hundred thousand of verfes upon them (as Pliny witneffeth); Some would have this King to be Mizraim the fon of Cham, others fay he was not fo; he flourished above eight hundred years before the Trojan War, which was in Abraham's time ; But he, as we read in Clements Itinerary, being willing to contemplate God, and much given to Aftronomy, and minding the Stars, did firike out fome sparks out of the Stars, that the rude multitude might be aftonished at the miracle. At the laft, being angry at that fpirit which he often did frequent, amongft a great company of his difciples, as though he were a friend of the gods, was hurried away to Heaven in a chariot of lightning. Wherefore his name after his death, was Zoroastres, as much as to fay, A living Star; he lived in the time of King Ninus, with whom he fought, and foretold when he was dying, that if they thould keep his athes, their Kingdom thould not be deftroyed. Suidas.

He report went, that Perfes and Ata, two brethren, ruled both at one time; this in Pontus, the other in Taurica, both of them being of a truculent and lavage disposition; Hecate forung from Perfes, nothing inferiour in cruelty and immanity to her father; which while the was a Virgin, ufed to thoot darts (as the cuflome was then); But her greater fludy was to make poyfons ; fome attribute the invention of Henbane to her, and was accustomed to experience the nature and firength of poifons upon firangers ; within a fhort fpace fhe attempted to kill her father by her poyfon, and thereby unravell'd the clew of his life, by whole death fne got the Kingdom; at Taurica fhe crected a Temple to Diana, at whole Altar the offered, ftrangers, whitherfoever they came, from Sea or by Land, fhe did enact, that they fhould be facrificed, and by this means the thought her fame would be fpread in all Countries. Afterwards the married her Uncle, unto whom the brought forth Circes, Medea, and Egialeum ; Circes was inftructed in her mothers arts, and the did ufe the herball and poifons; She added other things by her own invention : The Virgin was martied to the King of the Sarmatarians, and by her enchantments kill'd the King, and was poffeffed of the Kingdom; whom becaufe for a time the did tyrannically abufe, and cruelly handle the Nations that were under her, they expelled the Kingdom. After which, the with a fmall company of Women, was reported to keep a deferted Island in the Ocean; but the likelier report is, that the came into Italy, and refted in the Latian Promontory: then that Iland from her inhabiting there, got the name of Circei. Medea dildained not domefticall Arts, yet endeavoured to know the medicinall use of herbs, and to be skill'd in the dialect and number of magical verses, but was of a far milder disposition, then either her Mother or Sifter were, (who were infamous for their truculency and

L Magin tiey prep thing min would of when fac Gramma M Any the

Pajeta

whileperix brought was ma den thig Eagle. Slages bifes h

Difex h wonderfu appeared. lees to for being born fo extreas ns, found out and of verhis King to te floursthwhich was rary, being nomy, and Stars, that . At the , amongit iend of the lightning. nuch as to nus, with , that if e desiroy-ren, ruled , born of ; Hecate sality to darts (as payions ; accustooon Itraner by her by whole femple to loever they ould be 12d be spread into whom as inftruct. nd poilons; Virgin was schantments nom becaule elly handle gdom. Atreported to port is, that y: then that Medes dilthe medicinumber of in either her r traculency 15.

and cunning delusions of Devils.

and cruelty) as well with much art as favour, which the had much with her father ; She freed itrangers definated for flaughter. At length being fulpected by her father, the flew to the Temple of the Sun placed on the Sea-fhore : the Argonautes coming by night from Taurica into Pontus, fnewed the caufe of their coming unto Medea, the did tell them of the imminent danger that was likely to befall them from her father, and told them of his cruelty to firangers, admonifhed them to beware and take heed : Counfel being taken; Medea promifed to get a helper, to bring to perfection the proposed combate : She did engage her felt by oath to Jafon, to be his Wife as long as the lived. Then the Argonautes by night leaving their keepers in the Temple, went with Medea to get the Golden Fleece, and by her Arts make Afon, Jafon's father, being an old man, turn young again, and delivered Pelias, Jafon's Uncle, from being flain by his daughters, and lived ten years with Jafon at Corinth. But when the law Blaucen or Creufa, the daughter of Greon the Corinthians King, to be preferred before her, fhe covering her anger, fent a coat, being poyloned, to the new married Princefle for a Prefent; as foon as the had put it on, the fuddenly burned like fire, and by the like destruction, Creon and his Queen perished: She openly flew the fons which the had by Jafon, Jafon dyed for grief, the flew to the Thebans, there fue cured Hercules of his madnefie, and from thence being heaved into the Ayr by Dragons, the flew to Athens, and married Agen, Scc. Thus faith Diodorne, book 4. chap. 3. Ovid 7. Metamorph. & Sabellic.

PAfetic farthing, is a proverb; Pafes is of a foft nature, and by Magick has overcome all mortals; fo that by inchantments they prepared a fumptuous fupper, and fervitors; the had a farthing minted or made by her, with which the could buy what the would of them that fold any thing, and would give it them, and when the pleafed it would come to her again: Suidas Appian the Grammarian remembers her likewife.

MAny think, that Pythagoras was a Magitian, and skilled in those divellish Arts; for when he had by his magicall whilpering, bewitched an Eagle that flew muttering over him, he brought it to him that he might make it tame, and forthwith it was made gentle. Pythagoras, faith Ammonias, shewed his golden thigh at the Olympick games, and used to talk with an Eagle.

Simon Samaritanus, as Ambrofius in Hexameron, and Clemens Pontifex high Prieft teftific, in his Itinerary, befides his various and wonderfull Arts by which he contended with the Apoftle, he often appeared, fometimes in one fhape, fometimes in another, and was feen to foar aloft with wings like a bird, a great way, therefore being born up by his magical Arts, and by the Devils help, he did fo extreamly mock and bewitch the Romans, that oftetimes he made Reid

198.

199.

030

197.

77

made himfelt a god; and they made a Statue between the two bridges, fuperfcribing this title, To Simon, the holy God; he bragg'd, that by many unfpeakable conjurations, he could call up the ghoft of an innocent boy to affift him, and by that he could make it to do whatfoever he commanded to be done: for the truth is, he was familiar with the Devil, which he called the foul of the boy, that he might cautioufly cover the pretence of his divinity. Vierus book I. chap. 16. ex Clem. lib. 2. Recog.

200.

201.

78

There was a certain Man in Galeotide, that by his words could drive away dileafes, and could expell unfeasonable weather, and barrenneffe, and poverty, with his facrifices, and caufe mutations, and give reasons for getting Riches; they report, that he was inticed into Creet, by the rewards of Minos, that he might find out that farange death of Glaucus. Suidas.

Polionius Tyaneus the Philosopher, the fon of Apollonius, his mother being big with child, faw the Devil standing by her, who fiid, he was him whom the carried in her womb viz. Egyptian Proteus; hence he was accounted the fon of Proteus; he flourished under Claudius, Caius, and Nero, untill Nero's teign, in which he dyed; he was filent for five years after the Pythagorean manner; afterwards he went into Egypt, thence to Babylan to the Magirians, from thence he went to the Arabians; and out of all these places he gathered notable delutions; Suidas Philostratus has written his life: cunning Satan, by the deceits of this Impostor, would have brought the Miracles of Christ into question, and would oppose him as his Antagonist; Of which Magnus Anastasius the Bishop of Theopolis thus writes : In some places unto this day, the acts of Apollonius stands, and has their efficacy, fome of them good for the driving evil spirits from beasts; others to restrain the inordinate excursions of the mind, and to expell those things which endamage men ; neither did the Devil do fuch and fuch things when he was alive, but also when he was dead, and went along with him to his tomb, and by his name onely did great wonders, to deceive poor ignorant men, which cafily after this manner are deceived. What shall I fay of the magick of Manethon, who was fo expert and artificiall in thefe divellish arts, that he openly derided and laughed at Apollonius, as not being right instructed in his mystery; for, laith he, he ought by his meer words to do what he pleafes, (as I do) not to use any operations or means to it. Cedrenus in his historical Compendium.

202.

.80I

SEdeciau a Jewish Physitian, made magical places before the Emperour Ludovicus, and other Princes, he devoured men, together with their hotses and arms, and gulphed up a load of Hay, with horses and Cart and all; he cut off the head and set of divers men,& did put them with their blood into a bason, he flew through the Ayr, hallowing like a hunter, and the like pranks he playthe balld)

IT is rep from we was a Prin ed to wort of the wire hyder 13, t

A firat redic nal gods, mugne do v red, being bones were aus hiftor

> Ohn F law a canie c command imprintes those that thily beig upon the the Peince chap. 7. 4

F Acia while use while use he had the twenty ye fave years to bios, i parcind of the v

Ames a whit did logwith it al tang then fit it his on, was hammer

ed,

ons,

een the two he bragg'd, p the gholt i make it to h is, he was he boy, that nity, Viens

vords could le weather, aule mutaort, that he might find im, his moby her, who Egyptian fourithed nich he dynner; afians,from eces he gahis life: ebrought him as his of Theopalss Apollonius ne driving excurions nage men; was alive, o his tomo, poor ignod. What ert and arind laughed y; forstaith (25 I do) no: orical Com-

before the red men, rooad of Hay, teet of divers thew through this he played.

and cunning delusions of Devils.

79

203.

204.

205.

206.

207.

ed, Chronican Hisfaugienfe; and at latt he killed Charls Calvas (or the balld) the King with poifon.

I T is reported in the family of the Earls of the Andegavenfium, from whence Henry the fecond, King of England, fprung, there was a Princes, a notable Maga and a Witch, who was confirained to worthip and reverence the Eucharist, who fuddenly flew out of the windows of the Temple, and was never heard of after. Pohydar 13. book.

A Certain Woman of Mediolenfis, near the Comienfem gate, firangled aboy and devoured him; and when the was wracked for her cruelty, the faid, She was perfwaded by the infernal gods, that if the had facrificed a boy three or four times, the might do whatfoever the would; Therefore the was bitterly tortured, being laid upon the wheels croffe or latticewife, and to her bones were broken, and the dyed acruel and lingringdeath. Artabas hiftory, Mediolan I Sect. writes, that in his time this happened.

John Fernelius relates in his first Book of Occult caufes, that he faw a certain man, who by the firength of his words could caufe divers fights to be in a glasse, and those things which he commanded either in writing or in expressed in the commanded imprinted, that they might quickly and easily be differed by those that fateby, yea, and there were holy words heard, but filthily bespattered with obscene terms; and after this fort they call upon the powers of the Elements, and strange uncouth names of the Princes of the East, West, North, and South, Fierius book 2. chap. 7. of the Devils deceits.

F Acius Cardanus, the Father of Jeremy Cardanus, as he faid, had an actiall devill to be his familiar for a long time, who a long while ufed Conjuration, and it gave him true anfwers, but when he had fhaken it off, it returned him falle anfwers, he was eight and twenty years a Conjurer, but he was freed from his familiar about five years, but whilf he retained the fpirit, it was very profitable to him, neither did it alwayes come alone (although for the moft part it did) but fometimes it came with its companions. Cardane, of the variety of things, 16. Book chap. 39.

James Jadoci de rafa Cartriensis, carried a Ring about with him in which he thought the Devill was tyed by exorcisms, and he did speak for five dayes together at the least, and did consult with it about strange things, and diseases, and the manner of curing them. At the last being bound, and condemned to banishment, first his ring in a publique place, and a great company looking on, was bruiled and broken in pieces with the beating of an Iron hammer by the Chancellor Dane, at Arnhemie, 14. July, in the year

And The state of the

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK Baden-Württemberg

year 1548. Vierus, Book 5. chap. 1. of the delusions of Devils.

TN the year of our Lord 1546. The daughter of John Vemerus a Citizen of Ellingensis whole name was Margaret, was fo fwelled by the pains of her belly, that the bigneffe of her belly almost clouded her face, and did seem to be ten palms in circumference, she faid that there were creatures of divers forts was fed in her belly, when in the mean time the feigned to be recreated, and refreshed by fweet odours and delicate fauces, those that stood about her Bed, heard a crowing of Cocks, cackling of Hens, a gagling of Geefe, barking of Dogs, bleating of Sheep, grunting of Hogs, lowing of Cattle, and neighing of Horfes. There came out other fide worms and Serpents of a wonderfull bigneffe, about a hundred and fifty. Many Phyfitians and Surgeons were enquired of, and amongst them Leonbartas Fuchfius Tubingenfis archiatrus. At length came the Phylitians of Charls the 5th Emperour, and Ferdinand, and the Hungarian King, accompanied by fome of the Nobles, neither found they any thing falle or counterfeit. When the difease had almost endured for the space of four years, and her pains did feem to encreale more and more, the Magistrate of Eflingenfis fent his Phyfitian, together with three Surgeons, and a Nurse, that they might open the belly of the maid : they tyed her with thongs, they found her belly finely moulded up as with hands very artificially fluffed with pillows, with divers arches, by which the roundneffe of her belly was expressed : the Virgin being uncovered, had a very beautifull body, her belly was brought into Court, and referved in the place of Anathematifm. The Mother of this daughter was a Witch, and being examined upon the rack confeffed that by Satans counfell, and for gain the had done thus, and her neck being first broken, she was publickly burned, and the daughter having holes boared thorow her knees with a hot Iron was condemned to perpetual imprisonment. Lycosthenes, in his prodigies.

209.

-

.200

80

208.

I N Creet there was one Moles that went about almost a whole year ftirring up the Jews being about to draw them through the Sea, no otherwife then Moles of old performed. Those Jews gathered up all that they could. At the appointed day, he drew forth the miscrable people, a great multitude of men and Women going with him, the false Prophet brought them unto a steep place, and there sheweth them a promontory unto the Sea, and perswaded them to leap into the Ocean that they might swim to him being on the other side. And afterwards he promised that they should have a fate journey: Most of them leapt in, being bewitched by his large promises, but some were drowned, and perished in the waters, others were drawn out of the waves by Fishermen coming that way by chance ; but many of them followed him, excepting those that narrowly nattowly did tell of nean whit ranifieds, ged hien t that pitti chap,

A set

were attitio ferable City Europauko Cedresan, JAnblin Schollen gr. mod, la a skal care amoogilt w the Cates of Gotari againgh hr off. Olaas

I is tel batby a guts, ag will caule famenelle famenelle Winnos wives be book 4. c

P Hhild dow, Cozen, wil great Sopl theald no

A Apollonius, did tell his name, Parents, manners, and what loever happened to him, as if he had been prefent at all. Philoftratus.
WW Hen the Antiochians defired of Apollonius Antiocheno that he would turn away the Earthquake by which they were afflicted, fighing, he writ thus in his Tables. wo to thee, O mi- ferable City, becaufe thou shalt be levelled eeven with the ground by many Earthquakes, and the River of Orontes shall stalk thee to its banks. Cedresus.	211;
JAmblicus returned from his facrifices into City talking with his Schollers, and by and by fasting his eyes a while upon the ground, saith he, Let us go another way, because not far from hence lies a dead carcase: Some of his Schollers followed him. But others, amongst whom Ædess , going forward in their journey, they met the Cats who had buried the dead carcase. Eunapius.	212.
Govarus the King of Norvegia had so much skill in the art of divination, that he could forefee whatsoever was attempted againgst him in Saxony, which was above a hundred German miles off. Olaus Magnus, Book 3. chap. 13.	213.
I is related that the Magicians, by no law vindicate adulteries, butby a fiction, as a young graft being thruft through a Frogs guts, and faftned by the Husband in his Wives flowers, then it will caufe his Wife to loath adultery, and be affected by its irk- fomeneffe, which they take for granted. Not much unlike that which Ariftotle writes, in the Phafian River at Colchos there is a Muchroom, whofe branch being lopped off by a maid, caft into his wives bed, will caufe her not to love any other man. Alexander, book 4. chap. 1.	214.
Philometor began to fall in love with Sosipater, Eastathias's Wi- dow, a most beautifull and prudent Woman, he was her Cozen, who that he might enjoy her, used Magicall Verses, A great Sophister busied about his Religious Rites, made her that she should not be married to him. Eunapius, in Ædesso.	215.
M

and cunning delusions of Devils.

81

narrowly cleaped, who returned to the reft of their company, and did tell of the danger and deftruction that others fuffered. In the mean while when these things were transacted, the false Prophet vanished; therefore they were not much out of their way, who judged him to be an evill ipirit, who by Gods permiffion did delude that pittifull multitude and destroyed many. Socrat. 7. Book 38. chap, Rehas the chief of the Indian Wifemen being inftructed by 210.

BADISCHE BLB

ons,

as of De-

Vemerus a s lo fwelled

er belly al-I circumfe.

was fed in

reared, and that flood of Hens, grunning of came out e, about a e enquired arthiatrus. rour, and me of the it, When s, and her e of Estinis, and a tyed her vith hands by which ing uncought into e Mother the rack ione thus, urned, and with a hot othenes, in whole year h the Sea, s gathered w forth the men going place, and perfwaded n being on hould have by his large the waters, ng that way g those that narrowly 216.

217.

218.

219.

82

Y Rata Regneri the wife of a Dane, a Champion, being a Witch who made a feast of three Wood-Snakes, not hurtfull to the body, nor defiructive to the mind, the offered the white part of the meffe made of the white Serpent, to Ericus her flep-child, but the black part diftinguish'd by red marks, made of the two other, the tendred to her Son Rollerus. Ericus tafting of the meffe to his preservation, being a courteous Man, turned the platter from one fide to the other, faying, Thus as it wonteth to be in al ftory, to be caft from the hinder deck to the fore-deck; but afterwards he did ear, and obtained the knowledge of all things, in an admirable manner fo that he could understand the language of birds and beafts. Crata knowing her errour, when the faw the inevitable providence of fate, fhe began onely to commend her Son Rollerus that he might fuffer the fruit of that happy birth by that kind of meat to flow to his brother: This is that Ericus that deferved the name of Eloquent, and at the jast he obtained the Kingdome. John Saxo Grammaticut, Book 5. of the Hiftory of the Danes.

Sclerus Sethus, under Manuel Comnzenus the Emperour, did Centife a Virgin by a Persian Apple sent to her by a Bawd, and drew her into his love. Nicetas, 4th book of Histories.

Chianus, the fon of Simeon, who ruled over the Bulgarians, was fo expert in Magick, that as oft as he pleafed he could turn himfelf into a Woolf, or any wild beaft. Sigebert, in his Chronicle.

Ome Italian women taking fome kind of meats, will fo lethar-Dgize mens minds, that they may feem those things to them, as they are not; St. Auflin hath recorded, that he heard this of Praflantius, and faid, that Praffantim reported, that his father was made mad by fuch kind of inchanted meats as thefe women made, and quickly fell into a great fleep, and for many dayes together could not be made awake by any medicine : And he told, That in that time he had the picture of a horfe, and alwayes bore corn : and he further added the time that he carried it, the place, and the manner how. The truth of which things being afterwards enquired after, he faith, That it was found out, that a horfe of that colour, which his father Prastantius did speak of, and in that place carrying corn, to which he faid, That it was a wonderfull thing, that women by their magical art, by giving meats, could make men think to do that to one being awake, to another being afleep, which without doubt there was no fuch thing : from whence in my judgment, that which is faid at one time of the Strigilian Women, is nothing elfe but a magical dream; although to others it may feem otherwife. Peradventure those metamorphofings which were caufed by Circes, were like to thefe, although they give another account of an allegorical fense for them. The same was shewed in an Egyptian

Egyttan broeght her tormi man, who whom, w high Prin Falgofas l

IN Proj Witch man in a (Country hogs-head place of th aay milch believe, ti found ma atid Curio of a cert 10000 that cann they are t II IS conft Peets, and Examples, did give a not much : metamorp not, he can

and cunning delusions of Devils.

ms,

g a Witch

full to the part of the

ld, but the two other,

effe to his

from one ory, to be ds he did

admirable

birds and

itable pro-

llerus that

l of meat

e name of

John Saxo

erour, did

lawd, and

1485, Was

ould rurn

is Chro-

them, as them, as

father was

men made, es together

ld, That in

bore corn ; ce, and the

ards enqui-

e of that cou

that place

rfull thing,

could make

eing alleep,

hence in my

thers it may

s which were give another

thewed in an Egyptics Egyptian Maid, when the was transformed into a Mare; they brought her to St. Hillarion, who prefently turned her into her tormer shape. To which the like may be faid of a young man, who by magical women seemed to be surned into an Asse; of whom, when Peter Damianus did accurately dispute before Leo the high Priest, he affirmed, it was the effect of Magick, and no fiction. Fulgosus book 8. chap. 11.

N Prussia, Livonia, and Lituania, there is a great number of Witches, who at Christmus before night, laying the picture of a man in a certain place, they affume the Wolts face, and go to the Countrey-mens houles in the Woods, and there fight; and drink off hogs-heads of Ale, kill cattel, and afterwards they count that place of the inhabitants divine; And if at any time there happen any milchief, as a Wagon overthrown and caft into the Snow, they believe, that he that it belongs to, shall dye that year; as they have found many times by fad experience. Within Lituania, Samogetia, and Curio, there is a certain fione-wall standing, being the ruines of a certain Cafile : At this, at an appointed time there meets 1000 of Wolves, and tryes their nimbleneffe in leaping, and they that cannot leap over this wall, (as those that are fat often cannot) they are beaten by their chief Governours : And, in the last place, it is conftantly affirmed, that in this multitude there are the great Peers, and many of their Nobility. Olaus illustrates it by many Examples, lib. 8. cap. 45. &c. He affirms, That the Duke of Pruha did give no credit to fuch Witchcrafts, but caufed a certain man, not much skilled in Negromancy, to be imprifoned, till he fhould metamorphofe himfelf into a Wolf; but when he faw he could nor, he cauled him to be burnt.

Ratiflaus, Prince of Luca, who first founded Uratiflavia, warred against Grezomi/laus Prince of Bohemia, his Nephew. They fay there was a woman there, that forecold her fon in law, that with'd for the fight, that Uratiflaus fhould be killed in the battle, and the major part of the people should dye with him; but he being but a youth, might peradventure elcape, if he would be advifed by her. She charg'd the young man, (that faid he would do whatever (he commanded) to kill the first he met withall, and to keep close both his ears in his pocket; prefently making a croffe with his fword on the ground, between his horfes forefeet, and kiffing it, he got upon his horfe, and haftened away : Uratiflaus being flain in the Camp, called Thuscus, the young man, that hearkened to his Mother in law, fled home fafe, but found his Wife, which he intirely loved, killed, without ears, and holes made in her breaft. Thus those cars which he had cut off from his enemy, in great amaze, he knew to be his Wifes. Aneas Silv. in Hiftor. Bohemia.

M 2

Apollonius

83

220.

221.

A Polonius Thyaneus cured the blind, the lame, and those that were tormented with unclean spirits; he delivered the City Ephefus, that was infected with a grievous Plague, by shewing them an old beggar, which he commanded should be stoned by the people, who alterwards taking away the heap of stones, was found in the thape of a dog, whom himself affirmed to be a Devil.

223.

84

222.

Some Examples of them, who by magicall enchantments continued to the end in torments, recitat. Vierus lib. 4. cap. 10. de Damonum præstigiis.

224.

uffus, King of the Scots, was fick of an unknown difeafe; in the night he fweat very much, and in the day-time being more at eale, he took his reft. His body, like to one in a Confumption, was pined away with a lingring discase. His pulse was as before when he was in health, likewife his fenfes and appetite to meat 3' His Phyfitians were in despair of his recovery. In the interim, about that time arole a rumour, not known by what Author, That the King was poyfoned by women, and that they in a Town of Moratia did practife the black art to deftroy the King. Meffengers were fent to make peace between Duffus the King, and the Inhabitants of Moravia, and being by night admitted into the Caffle, are warned of the whole bufinefle by a Souldier, who fearcht out the whole matter from his firumper, whole Mother was one of the Wirches that poyfon'd him. Breaking therefore into their houfes, they found one of the hagges having an Image of wax reprefenting King Duffm, which was made by their hellish art, fastned on a woodden spit before an hot scorching fire ; another was found muttering a charm, as he poured forth liquor on the statue by little and little. They being caft into prifon, and queflioned about the impiety, they made answer, Whilest the image at the fire was scorching, King Duffus was in a fweat, but reciting the charm, he thould be alwayes awake, and at the melting of the wax, he thould wafte away, but it being utterly confumed, the King fhould inftantly die. They were hired to do this wicked act by the chief Governours of Moravia. When the women were burnt, Duffus gave over fweating, and was reftored to his health. Hector Boethus lib. 11. Historiæ Scotorum.

225.

V Itolfus, cihef Ruler of the Helfingians did fo deprive those of their eye-fight whom he pleafed, that they neither could fee houses, that were nigh unto them, nor certainly to go unto them, he knew fo well how to dimm their eyes with a cloudy mist. Olaus lib. 3. cap. 17. Septentrional. THe filoot at of; who miry of the Cir was for upon hi are brou was unit

A hance fight, and his Conther. ftrangel found w

Jakobi aloft was chi again to were al

1 Odd with ftorm, environ by his f on the t

Baden-Württemberg

TIS

ions,

id those that ared the City hewing them id by the peowas found in vil.

tments con-, cap. 10, de feafe; in the being more onlumption, as as before ite to meat; he interim, uthor, That own of Me-Mellengers the Inhabi-Caltle, are rcht out the s one of the their houles, repretenting affned on a s found mutby little and bout the imwas loorchm, he thould (hould waite uld inftantly thief Goverfin gave over cethus lib. 11.

leprive thefe neither could go unto them, y mift, Olasi

BLB

TH

BADISCHE

LANDESBIBLIOTHEK

and cunning delusions of Devils.

The Lappones and Finni in the Northern parts use to make thort artificial javelins of lead, the length of ones finger, these they shoot at a distance towards them which they wish to be revenged of; who having a canker arising on their leg or arm, are with extremity of pain dead within 3. days after. Idem, ibidem.

W Hen Ifabell, King Alphonfus the 11th his daughter, was given in marriage to Johannes Galeacius, Governour of the City Millain; Ludovicus Sfortia sceing her, his affection was so ardent towards her, that he defired her father to bestow her upon him to be his Wise; and on this manner he by his magick art brought it about, that Johannes Galeacius for many moneths was uncapable to perform the conjugall mysteries. Guieciardinus lib. 1.

Prthagoras on a time was seen at Criton and Metapontus on the 228. Same day and hour. Apollonius in Mirabil. historiis.

A Pollonius Tyaneus being kept in publique cuftody at the Palace, and acculed by Domitianus, vanished clear away out of his fight, and was the same day found at Pateoli, whither he had sent his Comrade before, and charged him to wait for his coming thither. When this same man had a book in his hand at Tigilla, wherein his accusation was included, he did miraculously and strangely cause, that this book being open, could in no place be found written. Philostratus.

JAmblicus, a Philosopher of Syria, as he was praying, was lifted alost from the ground more then ten cubits, his body and vetture was changed into the colour of gold. Prayer being ended, he came again to his former effigies, and fell down to the ground; viz. these were the illusions of Magick-contemplations. Eunapius, in ejus nica.

T is reported by Olaus in his Hiftory of the Northern folks, That Oddo Danicus, a grand Pyrate, rov'd up and down the deep Sea, without the help of a Ship, and did often, having enchanted a ftorm, overthrow his enemies Shippings, and was at laft (being environ'd by an enemy of greater skill) drowned in a gulph, who by his fleight and cunning charms, did in former times use to dance on the top of the waters.

Othnim

229.

85

226.

227.

231.

230.

Other again, when he was most fadly deluded by the tricks of the Devil and Magitians, and far leparated from his company, on horseback over a great part of the Sea, and Hadingus thorow some flits of his rocket under which he lay trembling, palpably faw his horse feet tread the waves, to his great admiration. Olaus lib.3. cap. 19.

234.

235.

236.

237.

233.

T Hespetion, the General of the Gymnosophista in Æthiopia, by his incantations injoy. I an Elm Tree, that it should falute Apollonim, which the Tree did, with a very distinct voyce indeed, but fomething like a womans. Philostratus in vita Apollonii & Volatteranus, lib. 13. c. 8. Anthropol.

T Heotecnus the Magitian under Maximinus, by the power of magick made the Image of Jupiter to utter Oracles, by which the Citizens were incited to perfecute the Christians, and the Emperour was much efferated and exafperated against them. At last, Licinius having found out his tricks, punished him severely. Eusebim lib. 9. cap. 3. & 11.

The Grammarian Appion, with the herb Cynocephalæa (which in Egypt is called Ofirites, and prevails against all manner of Witcherafts, but whofoever gathers it, dies prefently) raifed the ghost of Homer, that he might know of what Country and Parents he was defeended. But never durst tell what answer he received. Plin. lib. 30. cap. 2.

A Pollonius Tyaneus coming to the Tomb of Achilles, aver'd that the Ghoft of Achilles in his old and known likeneffe and pofture prefented it felf before him, and that thereupon the Sepulchre did a little tremble or move, and prefently a young man appeared, at firft about five cubits high, but in a fhort time he became twelve in flature, and feemed handfomer than can be imagined. The youth ask't him fome frivolous queftions, and when he began to be fomewhat too wanton and obfeene, Apollonius perceived he was imployed by the Devill. He therefore fore't the Devill to depart, and when he was gone, a certain flatue hard by in the likepeffe of the faid youth, fell to the ground. Philoftratus.

238. JAmblicus the Philosopher, tegether with his Schollars, went to Gadara to certain Baths, the beft in all Syria, (or the Roman Empire) except onely those of Baja, to which no Baths could be compared : whilest they were washing there, there grew a dispute concerning these Baths amongst the young Gentlemen; Jamblicus similing, commanded his pupills to inquire, of some of the men that attended the baths, of the names of the hot ones; but which were were mad cularly boa mcaoing C the other prefently upon the out) and tome of th as yellow in every young ma the other Ann, it hair, and liars of ra him, as if to their to Bath. Es

Would no

There was rinut, prochaite, w King, and as one he cothe promitibarle unduthe Vision had been nothing is Monk, the the King ir created ki-Ziana.

A Boye cd by frequent man of N thingof it terwards i how by fa how by fa fily learn, would to i

ms,

Denmark to y the tricks s company, gas thorow lpably faw Olaus lib.3.

pia, by his ute Apolloideed, but & Volatte-

e power of , by which ns, and the them. At a feverely, les (which manner of nely) railed ry and Pawer he re-r'd that the pofture prechre did a peared, at me twelve The youth to be fomce was imto depart, likepefie of ars, went to Roman Emuld be comw a diffute n; Jamblam of the men ; but which were

and cunning delusions of Devils.

87

239.

240.

were much more pleafant than the reft, and had been named particularly for a long time. They answer, they understand not the meaning of the names ; but that one of them was called Amor, and the other Anterotes, The revenger of the Injuries of Lovers. He prefently touching the water with his hand, (for he fate perhaps upon the border of the Well, where the water overflowed and ran out) and mumbling over a few words, raifed one out of the bortome of the water very fair, and of a comely flature, with his hair as yellow as gold, with a pure white skin upon his back, who was in every thing like one that washed, or had been bathed. The young man being aftonished at the novity of the thing, he went to the other Fountain, and did the like there, calling out the other Amor, in every thing like the former; only that this had darker hair, and longer, hanging down along his neck. Both thefe familiars or rather Tutelars, came to Jamblicus, embracing and hugging him, as if he had been their own natural father, whom he rettored to their former flations; and fo having washt, returned from the Bath. Eunapius, in his life.

When Basilius the Emperour dyed, his eldest fon Constantinus dyed with him, he so passionately loved his father, that he would not live after him, but defired alwayes to fee him alive. There was a certain Monk called Theodorus, and firnamed Santabarinus, preferred to the Government in the Metropolis of the Enchaitee, who being a most just man, was in great favour with the King, and with whom the King coaverfed very familiarly, which, as one he observed to be very devout, and a great lover of the truth. He promifed the King to shew him his fon alive, fitting upon a horfe under a green leavy shade. The foolish old man thought the Vision that the ministerof the Devil had deceived his eys with, had been his fon, and that he had embraced his fon, when he had nothing but a Phantaim; and fo wholly relyed on the credit of this Monk, that he, in the conceit that his other fon was alive, brought the King into fuspition of his fon Leo, whom he had crowned and created King; infomurh, that he imprisoned him, and there tormented the poor innocent Prince a long while. Cuspinianus out of Zonara.

A Boy called Lotharingus, come of an honeft flock, being corrupted by the evill example of his equals and companions, begau to frequent Taverns and tipling-houses; all this while Gilbertus, a kinfman of Nozerenus, to whole care he was committed, knowing nothing of it. Mean while, a young man, (which proved proved afterwards the Devil in a man) he being drinking with his pot-companions, drew him afide, and promifed him he would teach him, how by faying a certain verfe, and fome words which he could eafily learn, he might have money at his pleafure; If in his name he would to his hoft reckon up a Symbol, and from his heart believe thofe things which were in the holy book by him written; nor would ever ever unfold the holy Bible. The youth promifing him all he defired, he told him the fum of his art therein; then taking the book in his left hand, holding it down with his fore and middle finger of his right hand, and muttering out the verfe, (in the French tongue) braffe and copper fwims about, and gold leaps, and he shaked off his fingers 60 Crowns, the fum he defired. The Youth do.s the like, as this his Inftructor did before him, and with the like fucceffe; but in great joy going home with the book, and being much taken with the novelty, opens it, that he might make another by it. In the middle there was a spharical circle, like an Orb, divided with two ftraight diametrical lines croffewayes, upon which there was a picture drawn of a most dreadfull shape, horned, and every way like a Devil ; on his right hand were two croffes that joyned together, on his left were the immodest parts, both of a man and a woman, most obscenely placed, opposite to each other. Prefently, as he beheld thefe ugly fpectacles, his eyes began to darken, and his head to grow light; and whitherloever he went, he would look back ever and anon, verily believing fome body followed him clote at the heels. His Chamber-fellow, a young man, who had observed this Prodigy, was examined about it, and confest all the bufineffe to his Tutor, at whole perfwation the papers were caft into the fire, where they remained a full half hour, without being toucht by the fire, (although the matter of them was to all appearance most combustible) to the very great terrour of the young man, and the amazement of all the fianders by. Cognatus, 1.8. Narrat.

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK Baden-Württemberg

241.

88

IN the time of A iastafius the Emperour, the Bulgari, a people before that time unknown, inroded upon Illyrium and Thracia. Againft whom certain Roman Captains, made a voyage with an Army; whom these Bulgari, using Magicall devices and stratagems, did bafflle and destroy wholly, except a very few that escaped. Culpinianus.

242.

243.

Sigebert King of France was conquei'd, his army deftroyed, and nimfelt taken prifoner by a people called the Hunni, by reafon of their inchantments they used against him. Gregor. Turon. lib. 4. cap. 28.

H Aquinus Prince of Norway being to fight against the Danes, by his inchantments so vexed his enemies, which were of a stupendious magnitude, that their heads were so fore beaten by the storms, that their eyes were even fore with weariness and loss their fight, infomuch that they received more detriment by the Elements than the E, emy. The Biarmensfes, a people very near the Artick Pole, fighting in the North with that most powerful King Regnerus, by their incantations role a most violent thorm against the Danes, and studenly afterwards a most hot gleam infomuch that between these two extreams, the Enemy were both destroyed and conquered. Olaus, lib. 3. cap. 19. THM

Gern

they bled

Weaponharms, a Thisal delivera Was nut o Christmas Devils Ba ed it toge which the with the the Devil trem the with fleer of the flet 6 a very. feat many and Emper THE 1 jes when th

ons,

mail he def. I taking the e and middle ric, (in the old leaps, and lefited. The m, and with te book, and might make ircle, likest ewayes, up. adtull shape. nd were two nodelt parts, oppolite to cles, his eyes hitherloever lieving tome llow, a young bout it, and ation the pa-I half hour, of them was rrour of the V. Cognatus, ri, a people and Thrasa, royage with is and fitataew that clea-

firoyed, and ni, by realon Turon, lib.4

the Danes, by were of a flupearen by the and loft their the Elements he Artick Polo. Regnermy, by that between and conquer-Artgrie

and cunning delusions of Devils.

A Regrimus the Swedifb Champion perfecuting the wood Finni, or Tories, and in a conflict having put them to flight, caffing three flones behind their backs, they made them appear to the Enemy like to many Mountains, to that Arngrimus feeing he was gul'd, recalled his forces from the purfuit thinking that by those great mountains their paflage had been flopt. The very next day combatting with these fame again, when they were not able to fland it out, throwing Snow upon the ground they made the appearance of a River; And to frighting the General of their Enemy with this vain flew of waters, they again escaped. But the third day when they faw their party begin to fail, they yielded themfelves up into the Conquerours power. Olaus, lib. 5. cap. 15.

THe Magick vesture called Indusium Nece Sitatis amongst the Germans, Nothembt, was much effected of old, with which they used to arm themselves, and then they were shot-free, and weapon-free, and thereby defended from all manner of bodily harms, and enabled to undergo any hardship whatsoever untoucht. This allo was used by women in childbed to procure easie and fate deliverance. Hence was it called the fbirt of necessity, becaule it was put on in the greatest necessities. Thus it was made. On Christmas day at night, maids of most known chastity, did in the Devils name, fpin yarn out of the mud, weaved the fame, and fewed it together. In the breaft of it there were two heads fewed, of which that on the right fide had a long beard, covered as it were with a helmet, but that on the left fide was grim crowned, and like the Devil; on either fide was a croffe made, in length it wrought from the neck down to the middle part of a Man, being compleat with fleeves, &c. Vierus writes in his fourth book, and 15.c. of the fleights of the Devils, That he faw one of them in the Poffesion of a very Noble perfon, left him by his Grandfather, a Souldier, and a most fout man, and that they were very commonly used in times past, by Kings and Emperours.

The Polonians in a battle they had with them at Legnicia in the year of our Lord, 1240. bore very hard upon the Tartars, and when they gave ground, profecuted the purfuit. There was in the very rear of the Tartarians, an Enfign whofe Motto was onely the letter X and upon the fpear of it there was the image of an ugly black long-bearded man. When as the Enfign-bearer did very much thake and waver this colour, it raifed a very thick and black fmoak. This cloud did not onely obfeure the Tartars from the fight of the Polonians, but killed many of the Polonians with the flink of it. The Tartarians did this by fome incantations they ufed, which as well as many other ariolations, and divinations they very much praftife as well in war as upon other occafions, and do often make conjectures of future events by the entrals of men. The Barbarians when they faw the Enemy in a fear, tallying and encouraging one another 244.

245.

246:

80

90

247.

248.

another, they made a great impression upon them, and having difordered their ranks, made no fmall flaughter; in which Pompo the leader of the Christians, with many of his valiant affociates died. There was fo great a massacre of the Christians that day, that the Barbarians having cut off all their car-rings, filled nine great facks therewith. Cromerus, libro 8.

A Cruel Warr happening between the Kings of the Danes and Suesia, in the year 1563. It is written out of the Danes Castles, That the Suecian King when he was in his pomp and profperity, carried four old Witches about with him, which by their enchanted verses did procure all the Victories to the Danes, that he could not do any hurt to his Enemy; And those which were belieged by the Suefian King, were debilitated and made weak, and unfit for War, fo that they were glad to yield themfelves captives : And although at first there was no credit given to the report, yet afterward one of these Witches was taken captive by a Souldier of Mounfieur Comitis, a Schwartzenburg Guntheri of the Duke's Army; and those things which she confessed to him, are written down; Afterwards there was found about the Wells, Springs, and Fenny grounds, a long thred extended out a great length, upon which were many woodden croffes and pictures, with ftrange characters deferibed on them. Vierus faith, That they grievoully offend against the manifest Commands of God, that they require fuch unlawfull means or helps from the Suefians; and the Danes they are afraid of thofe magical delutions, and divellith deceits and mockeries. Lib.2. cap. 33. de Præstigiis Dæmon.

E Mpedocles Agrigentinus the Magitian, writes these things of himfelf;

> Medicamenta que et mala et fenestutem propulfant, Audies; tibi enim foli ego ifta omnia conficiam, Et fedabis indefe sorum ventorum vires, qui in terram. Ruentes flatibus, rura corrumpunt, Et visissim si voles, reduces ventos, adduces, Et efficies ex imbre nigro tempestivam siccitatem Hominibus, et efficies ex astiva siccitate, Flumina secunda quaque in astate spirant, Et reduces ex Orco defunsti animam viri.

Ope now the labyrinth of thy mare-like ear, And then firange Cures and Medicines thou fhalt hear, That will all evils and old age repell, To the alone I will this myftery tell; And thou fhalt huft the rumors of the wind, Deftruction's beefom when thou doft it find, To fweep the Country with its poyfonous breath, And Dragon-like doth ftorm many to death :

And

BLB

An

Ti

As

Th

An

The

An

When for blaikt at intela be bonks, a

Tecenve I

if one th

Tilter

1 ed P

u tach C

with Alt

our allives a gallant are upcosthe p

thenilly ve

torin a por fasius, lide

HEM

wurch day

the tempe

A

Uni

burnt; Sh ty called

had, what

Inthefam

of factific

opon bur

comesa g

timnity a

tions,

ind having dil. fich Pompo the flociates died, day, that the ne great facis

the Danes and Danes Calles, d prosperity, their enchantthat he could e befieged by and unfit for ptives: And rt, yer afteta Souldier of Dake's Army; ritten down; s, and Fenny n which were afters deferind against the ch unlawiull are afraid of keries, Lib.2.

nings of him-

er atts,

halt hears

eath,

And

and cunning delusions of Devils.

And if thou wilt that Æalus fhould blufter, 'Tis in thy power all the winds to mufter. If black big-belly'd Clouds appear again, As though they would nothing afford but rain, Then thou thalt caufe in them a barrenneffe, And a great drought, and bring a great diffreffe Upon poor mortals: and when th'Earth is dry, It thall be fleckt by tears of weeping eyes : But when it's parcht with Summers fultry weather, The foaming floods thall then all flow together, And quench its thirft; yea from black Pluto's den, With Orpheus thus thou'lt fetch thy friend agen.

When for a certain while the winds did fo vehemently blow and blufter at Etefta, that they hurt the grain, he gave order that Affes thould be excoriated, or their skins thould be pluckt off, and make bottles, and to be fo far extended in the Promontory, that they might receive the wind; And he being afleep, was called xaxuotusuus, as if one fhould fay, The ftayer of the Winds. Suidus.

There are a certain people amongst the Lydians, who are called Persici, their Cities being Hierocasaria, and Hippapa; and in each City there are Temples very large, and Vaults in them, with Altars, upon these are associated as a far different colour then our associated as a set of a set of a set of the set

Herodotus testifics, lib. 7. of Xerxes's Governours, that in a tempest of three dayes, they lost four hundred Ships, untill the fourth day, that their Magitians Thety, and the Nereidians did allay the tempestuous winds by their factifices.

C Aftabilis is the Phane of the Persians Diana, where they fay religious women go upon hot coals barefoot, and are not burnt, Strabo, lib. 12. Under the Mountain of SoraBe, there is a City called Feronia; it is called by that name, from a goddesse they had, which the bordering people thereabout worthip very much. In the fame place there stands a Temple, having a wonderfull kind of facrifice; For they that are inspired with the Deity, do walk upon burning coals with their naked steet: And therefore there comes a great multitude every year, as well by reason of the solemnity and celebration, as to see the fight. Idem. lib. 5.

N 2

Tulina

91

249.

250.

251.

- 252. Tullius Hoffilius the Roman King, in the imitation of Numa Pompilius, whileft he endeavoured to raile up Jupiter Elicius, was funck with lightning when the Palace took fire. Tufia, a veftall Virgin, being accufed of inceft at Rome, that the might be cleared of it, and her innocency and chaftiry might be differed by her prayers, the drew water with a fieve; in the 609 year, after the City was burnt, Plinius, lib. 28. cap. 2.
- 253.

A Rmiplus, an Egyptian Magitian, in that War which the Romans had with the Quadi, when there was a cruell skirmith and battel, and the victory hanging in Aquilibrio, they did not know who thould get the battle, by his magical Arts and Inchantments called upon that Mercury, who dwells in the Airy Region, and other fpirits, and begged of these a great deal of pouring rain, and thereby did to affright the Quadi, that the Romans got the Victory. Dion Nicems in Antonino, & Saidas. Some attribute this to Julian the Chaldean.

254.

255.

There was in old times a Northern people called Finni, that in rimes pass did fell winds to Metchants, offering them three knots twisted by magicall cunning; the first knot being opened, they should have gentle winds, and fost gales; the second being untwined, they were to have somewhat more vehement winds; and the third knot being loosed, they should have tempessues winds and storms. Olaus lib.3. cap. 16. ex Sax. Grammat.

IN the year of our Lord, 1462. Ferdinand the King of the Neapolitans, did befiege very closely the Marcos Town, being fubjected under the Tower or Castle of the Draconian Mountain, scituated near the entrance of the Massick Mountains, and by reason of the fcarcity and want of water, he almost compell'd them to yield and furrender themfelves; When the wicked Priefts durft by their conjurations caufe great thowers, for there were found in the Townefmen who were befieged, who in the night-time deceiving the Cafiles Watches, thievoully fole to the flore through rough and hard rocks, bringing with them the Image of Chrift crucified on the Groffe, first with imprecations curfing it, and profecuting it with Magicall Verfes; afterwards they fall into a frenzy, calling upon Heaven, Earth, and Sca, for a Tempeft. At what time thefe Priefts, the wickedeft and blafphemoufeft of all mankind, fludied by their prophane arts to please the Souldiers persisting in their wicked rites and ceremonics, by which means (as it is reported) they procured rain, and an Affe being fet before the dores of their house, and they fung an Elegy, as though he were troubled in mind. Afterward the Sacrament was thrown into his mouth, the Afle making great moan, and lamenting, as though with funeral fongs; at length they buried him quick before the dores of the Temple. But she rite or ceremony being fcarce finished, the Sky began to be, clouded

NEar years fi taihione outrito but the p thereabo Witch. namod P. and at the hk. s. cap

Pelog of A be troub hil, 6.

Ditaha 1 Who maile 新花 研究有 godhim going together m(a) di (laid As ofLitter Pythager with bis therd to Neather guage, b cattefor

tions,

of Numa Pueer Elicits, was affia, a vefiall ght be cleared wered by het year, after the

th the Roman nifh and batot know who others callon, and other o, and thereletory. Diss o Julian the

Finni, that in them three eing opened, fecond being t winds; and effuous winds of the Neapo ing inbjected in, leituated realon of the n to yield and by their cos the Townel ving the Ca h rough and crucified (rolecuting 1 cuzy, calling at time theil and, Audico ting in ther is reported) ores of their bledinmind ith, the Alie funeral fongsi the Temple began to te cloudes

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

clouded, and the Sea was begun alfo to be tempeftuous, and the fplendour of the noon-day was celipfed with darkneffe, and now the Heavens began to thine with their flathing fiery lightning; then all other light was obfeured, Heaven and Earth trembled with thunder, and Earthquakes, the poles of the Earth were aguith, the Trees that were cradicated and plucked up by the roots, they were blown about in the whirl-winds, the rocks that were cloven with lightning, filled the Ayre with clamorous noifes, and there came fuch a deluge by this rain and ftorms, that the Cifferns and Conduits were not able to contain it, but the parched ftones, and fcorched Rocks did diffufe and fpread about every where those fhowers, torrents, and Rivers which the ftorm brought; fo that the King whose onely hope was to get the Town by want of rain was fruftrared of his purpose, and returned to his old Caftles at Savonia. Pontanus, lib.9. belli Neapolitani.

NEar Elton Paguma little mile from Embrica, placed in the Dutcheffe of Clivensis near the high way, about forty two years fince, there was a spirit that vexed travellers after divers fashions, beating them, throwing them from their horses, and overthrowing Waggons, neither was there ever any thing seen but the picture of a hand, they called it Eckerken, the Neighbours thereabout did attribute this wickednesses to the conjuration of a Witch. Wherefore a hand was factificed to a Sybill Woman named Puiscops, who by right was a fervant to the Earl of Montensis and at the last the hand being burnt, the grievance ceased. Vierim, lib. 5. cap. 2. de prasitig. Damon.

P Elopfin an Olympick charrietter, got some spell or inchantment 257. of Amphion, that the horses in that very plain might alwayes be troubled with an unaccustomed sury and terrour. Pausanias, lit, 6.

Tthagoras called a very cruel favage Bear, of a great bigneffe who ftruck those that looked on him with fear, and fed and nourifhed him with himfelf; he once with a low voice as though he were Conjuting in muttering and whilpering words, he charged him that he thould hurt no living creatures; after that, the Bear going away, went into the Woods, and gathering her Whelps together, and with much faithfulneffe fae (which is very rare in men) did perform that the was fworn to. Perhaps from hence (faid Augustine) came Pythagoricall nercomancy, by the numbers of Letters, and by the Moon. And it is certainly reported that Pythagoras faiw an Oxe near Tarentum, fpoiling the Fabacian Corn with his eating, as allo by the trampling of his feet, as the Neatherd told him, he counfelled the Oxe to fpare the Corn. The Neatherds wife laughing, I (faith fhe) have not learnt Oxe-language, but thou feemeft to be verft in that kind of learning, and therefore take my place : prefently Pythagoras bending himfelf to 115 its cars, whilpered fome Magical words into them; and, that which is to be admired at, the most obedient Oxe, being willing to be taught of one that was wifer then himfelf, not onely gave over tearing the Corn then, but abstained from eating corn of that fort afterwards, and also was freed from his Neatherd, and was rurned from a country ruftical fwain to a Citizen-peripatetick, and waxed old at Tarentum, and was fed by mens hands. Calimalib. 19 .cap. I. A. L. Plutarchus in vita Nume. The fame Pythagoras, as Ariftotle faith, killed a Serpent in Esruria by biting, who deftroyed others by biting. Apollonius in Mirabil. Historiis.

256.

258.

93

Follonius Tyaneus going from Rome to Byazatium by the Citizens leave, did expell out of that City, a great company of Serpents and Scorpions left they should hurt any one, and did quell and reprefle the intemperate neighing of horfes at the Randevouz of Princes. The fame thing was requefted of him when he came to Antioch, for when the Antiochians were vexed by Scorpions, and gnats, he made a brazen Serpent, and put it upon a pillar erected on the earth he commanded the people to carry reeds in their hands, and run about the City firiking and lashing with their reeds, and to cryout; Let the City be free from gnats: And by that means the Serpents and gnats were driven out of the City. Cedrenus.

260.

261.

259.

94

IN the bigger India, there is a Province called Maabas, famous for pretious stones and pearls, for that Sea being very dangerous for Sea-Monsters, the Abrathimins their Magitians, who anciently were called Brachmans, by their daily witchcraft do fo bewitch the great huge Whales, that they are able to hurt no body; but in the night-time they let them have their liberty, left there thould be any occasion given to thieves to steal. M. Paulus Venetus. lib. 3. cap. 23. rer. Oriental.

IN the Mart-Towns in Holland, as in Rotterdam and Scheidanus, I they chiefly live by fifting; those Inhabitants when they fayl out to catch Herring, they bring fuch plenty of fifh home to Rotterdam, that loads whole Ships. Thefe on a time, drew back their Nets loaded with stones to Scheidanus; which unexpected misfortune was quickly attributed to witchcraft : Wherefore they apprehended a woman, which without delay confeffed, that the made it come to pafle with her witchcrafts, and that the flew out of a hole of the window; She thewed them a hole of the fame bigneffe, which the could hardly thruft her finger in, and whilft they were laying in wait for fishes, she went to Sea in a Cockle-shell, Moßel Sculpitis called by the fifthermen, and there paffed over all that space untill the came to the place where the Herrings were, and there with her inchantments, made the Herrings depart that place, and fhe ftayed in their room: this rumour being fpread abroad, fhe was committed to the flames, Vierius lib. 5. cap.8.

They

BADISCHE

LANDESBIBLIOTHEK

BLB

They

1 ferver

by his inch ready, and make it to quetsofal

Table, wi

init as the

TIsrela

Litts Eit

a very loat

that he wa

let his ho

bles were d

to Nama.

(amai, fil

theremad that by the

topher, ch veros did s

that they for

greak Farm

to have bu

Here

Tian

against the

the bowned

(# 16.9.

Ascal

with a pi

within his part it thre came out th

tending to

he had no b

that fam h

the

ons,

I, that which illing to be y gave over of that fort of that fort of that fort of that fort celims, id. 19. utbageras, as to deftroyed theCitizens any of Serl did quell Randevour he came to tpions, and r erected on ir hands, and eds, and to means the nut.

bas, famous y dangerous , who ancift do fo bert no body; y, left there ulus Venetud.

I Scheidanus, en they Tayl e to Rottert their Nets fortune was pprehended e it come to hole of the e laying in fogel Sculps, that fpace and there places and oad, the was

They

and cunning delusions of Devils.

T Hey report that a certain man, one Pafetas by name, that deferved the chief name for his skill in delufions and Magick, he by his inchantments did make a Banquet quickly to feem to be made ready, and furnifhed in all points; again, when he pleafed he could make it to vanith, Suidas. Brachmanns could make ready Banquets of all kinds, and prepared Mefles of meat to be fet on the Table, when they could fee no fervitours that fet them on. Philofirstus.

It is related that Numa the Roman King, fometimes invited divers Citizens to a Banquet, and fet homely fordid furniture, and a very fparing mean fupper; but it being begun, there was a fpeech that he was familiar with a Goddeffe, and inftantly he let them fee his houfe, was furnished with pretious cups, and the Tables were deckt with all gallantry and magnificent teasts. Plutar. in Numa.

W Illiam the Earl of Halland was Crowned by the inftigation of the High Prieft, being against Frederick 11. and convad. filim Aquifgraci Roman Kings returned to his Colony, and there made a gallant feast to the Princes. In which it is reported that by the admitable art and skill of Albertus Magnus the Philofopher, the Trees did flourish in the depth of Winter, and the herbs did grow. It is faid, that the Writers of that Age relate, that they faw him do this; for this deed it is faid, that he had a great Farm given to him, with its appurtenances, in Trajetto, and to have built a Monastery. Culpinianus.

There is a Tradition, that Pythagoras did perform the Pythagorian fport by a Looking-glaffe; he writ fomething in blood in the Looking-glaffe, and quickly the Letters being turned against the Moon, being in the full, to him that flood at his back, shewed the perfect characters, as it were ingraven'd in the Moon. Cal. lib. 9. cap. 23. Antiq. left. ex Suid & in voce beflaxid subs.

A Puleiu lib. 1. de Afino aureo, bac feribit. At Athens, faith he, near and over against the Pacilean Porch, I have seen a young Chevalier plainly to have swallowed a sharp darr, pointed with a pile, and presently again without any reluctancy hide within his bowels a hunters lance made of a little stump, in which part it threatens destruction, and behold the iron of the Launce came out through his gut behind, and he being a fine finnical boy tending to Mollicies, by his Scrpentine windings did so dance, as if he had no bones to hinder him, and therefore was admired of all that faw him.

Philumena

93

262.

263:

264.

265.

266.

Philumeva, the harlot of Apelles the Heretick, did put in and take out of a little hole of a narrow glaffe bottel, a great loaf of bread. D. Augufinum Sedecias the Jew, did devour and fwallow up Souldiers with horfe and arms, and a whole load of a Hay, and flew in the Air.

268.

96

267.

"N the reign of Andronicus Senior, the Emperour, and young Ardronicus his Nephew, there were Magitians came out of Egypt to Byzantium, to thew their art : they did fasten upon a Platt of ground two or three main mafts of a loadned and ballasted ship with ropes, left it should totter to and fro, or bend to either fide;atterwards they firetched one rope from the top of one maft to the top of another; furthermore, twifting and doubling another rope that winded to the ground, they made fteps, or a ladder of cords, by which they did climb to the top; and when one of them went up to play their tricks of activity, he would ftand on the bare top of the mast, now flinging out one foot, then another upwards, (as , though he defpifed and fpurn'd at Heaven) and then turning topficturvy, his head inclining towards the vertex of the Pole or Maft; at the laft, falling on a luddain, one hand holding fast to the rope, and there he hung fwinging and turning about the rope, and whirling about towards Heaven (being of a vertiginous brain) and towards earth, in a femi-moment juft like a top, afterwards bending his leg, he caught hold of the rope with that, inftead of his hand, and tl ere he would be a Supine, viz. hang or lye downwards, and would then circle and turn himfelf about after the former manner; By and by he would ftand firaight up on the rope, and taking in his hand bow and arrows, would aim and thoot at a white mark, that was put a great way off, and thoot fo artificially and skilfully, as they that flood on the ground could do no better : And then again fhutting his eyes, taking a boy in his arms, he would go up to a higher rope, and fo would prance up and down from one rope to another; and one man did do all this.

269.

But another that fate upon a horfe, and fputring him in a race, and as the horfe was running, would get upon the faddle, and frand right up on the top of it, and would fometimes with his legs being folded together, fit upon the horfe's main, and on his forehead, and on his buttocks, and flying to and fro, as though be were a bird; and fometimes he would light off from his horfe as he was running, and then catching hold on his tail, would leap upon him again, and was feen fitting on his faddle prefently, and light ng and fhifting from another fide, or part of his faddle, he would turn himfelf under his belly, and prefently afcend on the other fide of the horfe, and was carried by the horfe, and when he did thefe things, he did not neglect to whip the horfe to obtain the race, and thefe things did another of the Magitians. Another of them carrying a club about half a yard long on his fhoulder, did Michael effactoate

then make

is a large p

princi,he ad crushed

pous toget l stur titoaki

patt, sedep!

diety; and b

muchgreife

there was a

then Veffel

was ready o about, than

to pieces.

this, for wal

them, by an

through fea another, d

and when a

were throw

Jed, be like iparks,

of the fim

Bille,

book.

Baden-Württemberg

fo

ions,

a great loai a great loai and fiwallow of a Hay, and

d young AL. out of Eggs on a Plan of allasted ship ither fide;almait to the pother rose er of cords, them well he bare top ipwards; (as irning topix. ole or Mall; to the ropt, , and whith ain) and toards bending his hand, and s, and would manner; by aking in his te mark, that skilfully, as then again goup to a one rope to im in a race, faddle, and with his fegdon his foreis though he his horie as would leap refently, sad is faddle, he ford he alte and when he to obtain the Another di fhoulder, did

and cunning delusions of Devils.

fo belabour that Veffel, being then full of liquor, that it lasted and was ferviceable not long after. Another there was that fet a long fpcar upon his head three fathoms long, and from the top downwards, the rope net-wife was folded, or ftairs made by it, and a Boy did afcend to the top, lometimes thifting hands and feet untill he came to the fpears top, and then he defcended again, and he that carryed the fpear on his head, walked all the while. Another would throw up on high a Globe, or a round ball of Glaffe, and then when it was falling again, would catch it with the extreament parts of his nails, and fometimes by his elbows, now one now another, but fome that were not very expert, fell and perifhed. And whereas there were above forty came out from their country, almost twenty of them came to Byzantium, and they travelled all over, gathering a great deal of Money of the spectators, and some came tor profit, fome to thew their art for oftentation fake. Gregor. lib. 8.

Ichael Sicidites Mague, Manuel Comnenses being Emperoiir, M who would not fuffer nor allow of fuch fights, which did effacinate the peoples eyes, but fent all these Divel's, companions to them which he would have banished ; when he saw a little ship in in a large place of the Palace, in which ports and diffies were tranfported, he by his magical verfes caufed the Marriner to be fqueeled and crushed, and made him no sooner leave to strike and dash the posts together, then they were all refolved to dust : a little while after ftroaking his beard, he began to lament, and the mift being paft, hedeplored himfelf, that he was fo handled by fome irefull diety; and being asked why he broke his ware in perces, he with much greif declared, that, being very bufie rowing with his Oares, there was a horrible greatSerpent, that extended it felf over the carthen Veffells, and that he faw it with staring eyes, as though it was ready to devoure him, and no fooner began to leave off rowing about, than that all the pots and platters were broken and crushed to pieces. This Magitian played another prank, fomething like this, for washing in a Bath, he began to quarrell and wrangle with them, by and by he went out of the Bath, a little after fome others through fear and hafte running out together, and treading upon one another, did leap out of a Channell, in which there was hot-water, and when they skipt ou of it, they were as black as Pitch, and they were thrown out of the Bath, and were foundly kickt. Nicetas 4. book.

Ged, be could fo thake and thrike his fleeves, from whence fire, like fparks, would come out of them, and fo deluding the eyes of the fimple by those petty miracles, as a figne of his holineffe.

0

With

271:

97

270:

WIth the Offrogothians is a great lake or Gulph called Veter having a pleafant, but a very long Ifland, which is as it were its Center, and contains two parish Churches in it; under one of which there is found to be a den or cavern with a convex hole low entrance, and of an unmeasureable unfathomed depth, into which fome men out of a tympany-like oftentation defcend with lighted torches, and long threds to fathome it, and find how deep it is, as did one Gilbert by name, and others, they met a famous Magitian, who was overcome and bound formerly there by his own Mafter Catillas, over whom he prefumed to domineer and infult, for his hands were tyed with a little rope, and certain Gotbifh and Ruthenien characters were enferibed on'r, and fo was caft down into this den by his mafter ; Gilbert remained there being imm oveable; divers did go into the cavern, not without great danger, to fee these strange enchantments. Afterwards the law forbad any to go down themfelves, or perfwade others to go down, under that perill that they were likely to undergo, viz. death, and fo the mouth of the den was flopt up with ftones. Olaus Magnus, lib. 3. cap. 20.

Ntonius Heliogabalus with his Magicall arts and enchantments, did Conjuce up the departed Souls of Severius his father especially, and Commodus, and many others from out of Hell, who rell him of future things, he effeemed highly of Apollonius Ganeus Cappadocian who flourished in the reign of Domitian, and honoured and praifed him much, and took care that a monument should be made for him, because he was the greatest Conjurer. Dion ex Xiphil.

He potent Emperour Arrian, when he underftood by Magicall fopperies who fhould reign after him, whofe name fhould begin with Theta, he gave command that all those should be flain whole names began with that letter, as the Theodorans, Theodotans, Theodulans, and a certain valiant Man Theodofius coming out of Spain, his father who afterwards ruled Theodofii. Wherefore many being affrighted, anagramatized, and changed their names. It was given out that this divination was made by a Libanian Sophister Jamtlicus by name, the Scholler of Proclus, when there was many killed, he commanded the executioners to enquire out the Authors of this divination, Jamblicus fearing much the Princes cruelty, took a cup of poyfon and dyed. Socrates, lib. 4. cap. 19. Sozomenus, lib. 6. cap. 35.

Andronicus

273.

274.

98

272.

Narom

Acian, (

his Succeff

the beginni

ters the le

thought that

nen, the Ne

Manna, had.

the balancelle

polleflicker

aniwered,

how can Ifa

Kingdom fr

tions and p

was dead,

him; and

oft, and i

their feet putting, (

tellow; b

AN LE LOC

Captorofy

C Byzanti

many unian

which the f upona Lion

Herales In

on a Lyon

need upon l

ins, but die

integes, and thin Pedilars

ing in the f

NUR, Hali

N the tin

than, the

and a crue

lays to cauly Emperiour ; Arceries he upiret, that and bed, as tian cafily

guieup

toms,

called Fein lich is as it it; under one convex hol deptin, inn leicend with id how deep et a famous there by his neer and it. rrain Gaist as caft down ing immovet danger, w orbad any 10 , under thu , and io the lagnus, libe 3.

ind enchastrisishis father of Hell, who ionius Cyanen ind honoured int thould be it, Dion es by Magical be thould be build be than to the the to the form of spats, out of Spats, e many being . It was ge ophifter Jass as many kilthe Authon crueity, took omenus/de.e.

Andrania

and cunning delusions of Devils.

99

276

277.

Falon

Ndronicus Comnenus Tyrannus did confult with one Seth a Magi-Atian, (having his eyes put out by Manuel the Emperour) about his Succeffour and his private enemy that watched for him; About the beginning of September, the Devil fnewed him in muddy, waters the letter Sigma, and afterwards Iota; therefore Andronicus thought that these letters decyphered If aurus, to wit, If actus Comnew, the Nephew of Manuel the Emperour, who coming out of Isauria, had appressed Cyprus by his tyranny. Much search about the bulineffe was there at that time; when the spirit with a great noife flickered in the water, within the exaltation of the croffe, answered, Therefore vain (saith Andronicus) is this Oracle; for how can Ifaacius in to thort a time come from Cyprus, and take my Kingdom from me? And for this cause he fleighted fuch divinations and prophefies. But when one faid, Surely Ifaatius Angelus was dead, or elfe that Oracle would have been verified concerning him; and he faid further, That they imagine things that are afar off, and in the mean time neglect those things which are under their feet; and fo he was incenfed against the diviners art, and puffing, fleighted Ifaacius Angelus, as a tender foft pufillanimous fellow; by whom a while after, he was deprived of his Kingdom and life too. Nicetas, lib. 2.

Eupbrofyna, the Wife of Abrius Angelus, the Emperour of the Byzantines, when the defired to know future contingencies, did give up her mind to all kind of wicked divinations, and acted many unlawfull things : the cut off the bill of a Porcupine hogg, which the faw ready with its piked briftles and cruel teeth, to fall upon a Lion in Hypro; and the chaftifed with many ftripes, famous Hercules Image, the gallant workmanthip of Lyfimachus, lying upon a Lyoneffe skin, and deplored her fortune, leaning with her head upon her hand; neither was the fatisfied or contented with this, but did mangle and break in pieces divers other Statues and Images, and knocked them on the head with hammers : fome certain Pedlars diligently taught birds to imitate humane words, fo that in the fireets and porches they would fing with their ordinary voice, Jufitia Politica, mannak red Sizano. Nicetas.

N the time of Galerius Maximinius, a perfecutor of the Chriftians, there was one Theotecnus at Athens, who was an enchanter, and a cruel enemy to the Chriftians, and did as much as in him lay, to caufe the Chriftians to be accufed and brought before the Emperour; and by this deceit he did it, by his conjutations and Sorceries he caufed Jupiter's image to utter these words; Speak to Jupiter, that these Chriftians may be expelled out of the City and fields, and banished, as being enemies to bim. The subtility of this wicked Magitian eafily took effect under such a wicked Prince. Eusebing, lib.8.

foren al tost e Circi and fils O Pup to famet hat an ar

100

278.

3

Afon the fon of Afon, Nephew to Pelias the Thefalonian King, withing to do fomething worthy of memory, and to imitate fome heroick deeds of Persius and others; Pelias did confent to his defire, not that he might encrease the glory of his youth, nor adde fplendour to it, but hoping that he would quickly be flain in fome warlike Expedition or other; for he feared his brother Afon, left by the help of his fon, he should get the Kingdom from him. In the mean while, he promised him ayd for his Warr, if he would prepare for a Voyage to Cholcos, to get the Golden Fleece. Then was Pontus inhabited by the Barbarians and wild Nations, and they were fo cruel to firangers, that they flew all them that failed thereabouts; Wherefore Jafon makes a Ship near the Pelian Mountain, of a greater bignefs and bulk, and which had greater furniture, then in those dayes they usually had ; for there was onely then used fome little Ships or Frigots: The rumour of this thing was spread all through Greece, fo that he invited many gallant young men, of their own accord, to come to his Warr ; Jafon chose the chief of them that defired to go with him, which number was four and fifty. Of these who were famous, was Castor and Pollux, Hercules, Telamon, Orpheus, Atalanta Schenei, besides Thespius's sons, and the author of the Voyage, Jafon. The Ship (we will not fay, when dipped in the water) was called Argo, from Argos its builder, who also took care of repairing her, when the was failing on her Voyage; or elfe named Argos, for her admirable swiftnesse, because the Ancients called any thing that was fwift, Argon; they preferred Hercules to be their Captain, the chiefest for Vertue and Fortitude. The wings of fame flying all abroad the Countrey, did bring news, that all mole that failed with Jafon to Pontus, perifhed by a mortality. In the first place, Pelias made Jafon's father to drink Bull's blood, he flew his brother Pomachus, being but as yet a boy. Althimede his Mo-ther was defigned for death; for all the was a Woman, yet the did one very memorable thing with a manly courage ; when the fled into the inmost receffes of the Palace, and there begging of the gods, that they would reward and revenge fuch impiety, the ran her felf thorough with a fword : Jason returned back into The Baly, and the Argonautes promifed him to do what they could to revenge fuch an hainous wickedneffe, if he would fight against the City. Medea promifed, that by her craft the would kill Felias, and would deliver the Kingdom unto them without any danger, and that the would do her task too; for the was to inftruct them in every thing; and the from the Palace was to give figns of the whole Affair (Imoke by day, fire by night) to the Keepers of the Watch-Tower on the Sea coaft ; therefore preparing Diana's Image, which was convex and hollow, in which the hid divers kinds of venomous things. Afterwards by her medicines making her hairs gray, and her face to be fo rugged and wrinckled, that the feemed to all that lookt on her, to be an old woman ; then taking Diana's image, went forth into the Ciry, and ftirred all up to superffition, as though

the

the came

good and all the wh

to the King

Attion, Vo

chantmen

was come

did affirm,

and that the

that the mi

the most Re

Goddelfe h

raseaway

which wor

esperimen.

She requir

of his day

the anoin

ced to he

Elénis can

the air, an

towards Pe

ly comman

oblervant

about her reported, ti dy of Pelias

wereabout

gintmitte

the house for the thould

tormer con

iate, the d

ande pieces

Lamb cost o

alithe virgi

ry, abitaine

ticher by b they thous

fort perfort

withtien

the Chaldian

and gave th

performant

and then is

the City,

lwords, w

toothin's

10ns,

alonian Kine mitate form content to his with, nor adde flain in fome tt Afon, let om him. la , if he would ce. Then wa ins, and they failed there. an Mountain, miture, that hen used form as ipread all oung men, of the chief a four and fifty. cules, Telamon, id the author dipped in the o took cared or elic name ncients called Hercules to be The wings of that all moke lity. In the lood, he flew mede his Moin, yet the do when the flet gging of the iety, the rat into The Baly ald to revenge inft the City. 1] Felias, 291 danger, and t them in ent. of the what f the Ward Image, which inds of venu her hairs gran feemed to a Dians's image ion, as though

and cunning delusions of Devils.

the came from the Northern Countries for the King and Cirie's good and welfare; divers worthipped her religiously as a Goddels, all the whole people was to beforted ; and they brought Medea into the King's Palace : These things much increased Pelia's superflition, yea, and his daughters were to bewitched by Medea's Inchantments, that they were perfwaded that the was a goddefs, that was come for the profperity and felicity of the Kingdom; for the did affirm, that Diana was carried through the Ayr by Dragons, and that the had gone about the greatest part of the World, and that the might be perpetually worthipped, they ought to choose the most Religious King they could get; and moreover, that the Goddeffe had commanded her, that with fome Medicines, the thould take away the old age from Pelias, and turn him young again. At which words the King admiring, commanded Medea to try the experiment upon her felf, that they might believe what the faid. She required, that fome pure water might be brought her by one of his daughters, and when the had thut her felf up in her bed, the anointed her body, and by the ftrength of herbs the was reduced to her former age; It is reported, that the by her enchantments caufed a Goddeffe in the likeneffe of Dragons to fly through the air, and supported by the Hyberboreans, which feemed to turn rowards Pelias; Pelias effeemed very much of Medea, and diligently commanded his daughters to do what the commanded, and be observant of her, and whatsoever the gave in charge to be done about her body, that they fould do it : In the following night it's reported, that Medea should fay, that it was necessary that the body of Pelias should be boyled in Copper, which when the Virgins were about to do it, they required one experiment, that they might give truft to her words ; then there was a Ram that was kept in the houle for many years, to whom the promifed to the Virgins, if the thould first boyl that, the would afterwards reftore it into its former condition again. When the Virgins did confent, they relare, the did boyl the body of the Ram, which was divided into little pieces, and by her medicines brought forth the figure of a Lamb out of the kettle ; which being done, and believing Medea, all the virgin-daughters, except Altestis, (who for her eminent Picty, abstained from doing violence to her father) they flew their father by beating of him : Then it's faid, That Medea, left that they thould boyl the body of Pelias, made as though the would first perform her Vow to the Moon, and commanded the Virgins with their lamps to alcend to the top of the Palace, and there in the Cholemans tongue, made a long speech, to drive away the time, and gave the fign to the Argonautes that the time was now come of performance of the thing; they out of a prospective glasse, faw fire, and then supposing the King was dead, came fwiftly, demanding the City, and going upon the walls, and with glittering drawn fwords, went firaight way to the Palace, kill'd all the watches that withflood them, Sec. Diodorus, lib. 4. cap. 3.

Johannes

101

279.

102

TOhannes Teutonicus, very famous in old time, his Father was a Prieft, and by reason of the good opinion of learning that was had of him, he was preferred to Halberstatenfem Parish, to which none but Noblemen and true begotten legitimate, were to be admitted; but he was much despiled of his colleagues for his bale birth : he invited them to a fumptuous Banquet, and taking occafion, asked them whether or no they would fee their own fathers. And when they told him that they carnefily defired that he would do fo, and by his Magicall art, he made appear horrid ghaftly fpectrums, reprefenting the mape of Cooks, Stable-grooms, fools, rufticks, whofe faces they confessed themfelves, that they had fometimes seen at their fathers heuses. But Teutonicus did Conjure up his father in the comelieft, beautifulleft fhape he could, with canonicall Prieftly habir, in a fat Vilage. The shadows being passed away, he asked his guests whose father now they judged to be the nobler : they being affrighted, (as it were Planet-ftruck) and contounded with fhame, went every one home to their own houfes, and after they never troubled Johannes, who was ennobled by his vertue, if not by his extraction or birth. Johannes.

280.

Icholas Venetus, in his Indian History, tells of a Pilot of India, When the winds did ceafe, invoking his God which he called Muthian, and that at length he went to a certain Arabian, and that the Man being impulsed by fome invisible spirit, ran along the Veffel, till he came to a Table, that for that purpose was fixed to the Maft, and devoured certain coals that lay thereby : and calling for 2 Cocks bloud, when they had killed one, and brought him the bloud of it, he drank it off, and when he had done, askt them what they defired? and when the Pilot answered, Wind, he re-demanded what wind, and when he told him an East-wind, he promifed them for three dayes they fhould have it at will, and admonished them that they would be carefull to improve the opportunity. When the Conjuration was paft, the Arabian remembred nothing of whathe had Prophefied, done or fuffered, but to a minute of the time, all things fell out accordingly. Cardanus de fubtilitate, libro de Damonibus.

281.

S. Jerome writes in the life of Hilarion the Eremite. That in a Mart Town of Gaza, a young Man languished for the exceeding love he bare to a young maid a neighbour of his, who when he could do no good by frequent courtings, touchings, jeftings, noddings, whisperings, and other allureing dalliances, the common exordiums of the decay of chassity; he went to Memphis, that to having made known his condition, he might be instructed by the Magitians, how to circumvent this young Lady. And after he had been disciplined for a years time by the Priests of Æssalapius, he returned, and hides under the threshold of the young maidens dore certain Magical words, and inchanting figures, graven in plates of Cyprian fursthat fo titters, and inte the City

the commo

Ving the P

tor a wild

Magick ver

that calting

may be plea

the devine p

the fickneff

cerning the teth, in the

Baden-Württemberg

ions,

Father was a ing that was rift, to which vere to be ad. for his bale taking occasi. own famers. hat he' woold orrid ghaffy rooms, fools tey had forme Conjure up d, with cana being palled ed to be the ck) and conown houlds, obled by his vilot of India, ich he called ian, and that long the Velfixed to the d calling for ught him the cetthem what re-demandel romited them inited them ty. When nothing of note of the ilitate, librok

That in a the exceedbo when ht dings, nodcommonexs, that fohad by the Maafter he had gralapars, he maidens der n in plates ei Cyrias

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

Cyprian braffe. Suddenly the maid grows mad, and caffing by the decent binding of her head, tears her hair, gnatheth with her teeth, calls upon the name of the young man; fuch was the extafy of her love that made her raging mad. Her Parents bring her to a Monaftery, deliver her to an old man; immediately the Devill howling, confelleth; I have faffered violence having been brought bither against my will, how bravely did I delude people by Memphian dreams, O the croßes and torments that I fuffer. Thou wouldst have me go out, and I am fast bound under the threfhold. I will not go out unlife the young man that boldeth me bound, difmisse me. Then the old man faith Great is thy fortitude, who are bound by the drawings out of threds and plates!tell why thou wast to bold as to enter into a young maid, the fervant of God ? That I might preferve her a Virgin. Thou preferve her, thou betrayer of chaftity ? Why diddeft thou not rather enter into him that fent thee? To what purpose should I enter into him who had my colleague the Devill of love? The holy man did not command him to feek out the plates or gravings, left the Devill might have leemed to have quitted the inchantments, or he to have given credit to the Devills speech, affirming the Devills deceitfull, and dexterous in diffimulation. Moreover having reftored the young maid to her former right wits, he much blamed the Virgin for committing fuch faults, whereby the Devill thould enter her. These things, Hierome.

Hen by the levere laws of Pope Hadrian the fixt, the peftilence feemed little reftrained by the touching of the fick that fo increased, that many dead corps were to be icen in the fireets, and croffe wayes, and in few dayes that feemed to depopulate the City, but that a certain Greek, by name Demetrius Spartanus, the common people favouring him, undertook the work of removing the Plague, no man being to bold as to forbid his fuperflition. For a wild Bull, the half of whole horn he had cut off, putting a Magick verte into his right ear, fuddenly he made him fo tame, that cafting a small thred about his whole horn, leading him which way he pleafed, he immolated him at the Amphitheater, to appeale the divine power, nor did he wholly deceive the hope of the credulous multitude, for by the prosperous offering of that vain facrifice the ficknefic began to aflwage. Jovius, lib. 21. As his kiniman concerning that matter of observation, and worthy animadversion, writeth, in the year of Chrift, 1522. a most grievous pestilence invaded Rome; There was then a certain Greek, who had a long beard, with an ugly afpect, who profefied himfelf to be assessment, that is, a helper of evil, he promiled if he fhould have thirty pieces of Gold to him and his heirs monethly, to caufe a ceffation of the Plague ; The Romans accept of the condition. He commandeth to bring him a black bull, and find out a new well in the fuburbs of the City : in the dead of night he commeth to the bottom of the hill Marius, where he found the Bull prepared, and the Well; he fees upon making a rope, and as he was weaving that, fometimes with a high, and 282.

104

and fometimes a low voice, I know not what he murmured out, in Greek; the clamour of his voice was heard by many spectators: afterwards he cafting a rope about the neck of the Bull, they report the Bull being made tame and gentle, he led him thrice about the Well, then cafting the Bull profitate upon the ground, the Bull making three weak or harmleffe kicks, prefently with little reluctancy, fuffered him to cut off his horns; which done, he commanded the Bull to be led by the shephcards thorough the feven gates of the City, and the feven high-wayes, and afterwards to be let loofe that he might return to the fields and pastures, wherein he was wont to feed. They that were there, then faid, that he lifting up his eyes towards Heaven, and making I know not what kind of humming, they faw Stars falling, and innumerable likenefics of dogs, and Wolves, and fuch kinds of living Creatures, to fly all about, &c. Things being finished in this manner, the Magitian being returnned to the City, took fuch courfe with the Roman Magifirates that they commanded by publick edict that no one fhould of three dayes kill any four-foored beafts, the rulers of the City who were then absent, when they returned, commanded the Greek impostor to be apprehended, and caft into Prilon; scarfe escaping the threats of the people, he was punished with eternall banishment. The Magick book which he uled, was publickly burnt. Gilbert. Cognatus, lib. 8. of Narrations, 283.

A Ntonius Benevemus, lib. 8. concerning the hidden caufes of fick-neffes, thus writteth; A Maid of the age of fixteen, was pulled with griping grief in the bottom of her belly by infernal spirits, and falling into horrid clamours, her whole belly did on a fuddain fo fwell, that one would have thought the had gone eight moneths with child; She had an exhausted voyce, and fometimes caffing her felf upon her bed, and joyning her feet to her neck, the leaped up, and falls upon her feet again; caffing her felf down, fhe immediately again started up; this she oft did by turns, but by little and little coming to her felf, and fomewhat refreshed, she was asked how fhe did; fhe was wholly ignorant what had paffed: but we inquiring the caufes of this fickneffe, thought this evill to proceed from the fuffocation of the matrix, and evil vapours drawn upwards, and then firiking the heart and brain: But when the could not be helped by Phylick, the was wonderfull fierce, looking about her with a ftern countenance, fell at length to vomit, whereby the caft up long and crooked nayls, braffe pins, with wax and hairs conglomerated; and laftly, a gobber of fuch magnitude, that the gorge of no creature what loever could wholly devour; and when the had done this often, I my felf, being a spectator, conceived her to be poffeffed with an evil spirit, who whilest she did these things, amazed the beholders. Wherefore being afterwards detected by more manifest figns and arguments, the was committed to the Ecclefiaffical Phyfitians; for we have heard her prophelie, phelic, an power of fi

a

C Addan might more him, that h what timeb and though thele hings broken glaff a bag full of that he he for bred them r huge troubl nut the agei Devil purs celutions,

N Page Magae 1/11/156 EII, about and goes to fattingth by a tion, in come Weether fb weretreefre William BO made clean, wards it wi as horrible f grinning face Maid, that fr stre, of a co Mind or Soul ay, wherei he certainly heath of he for that the t was fo exerci upoa a ftaff. our on her ious ribs, a he Moon, ed or grew Ulcer fuch mined, an Surgeon of

tions,

urmured out iny ipectation ill, they report rice about the d, the Bull ma little telucian. commanded en gates of the e let loofe that c was wont 1) g up his eya of humming. of dogs, and ll about, &c. being returngiffrates that of three days no were the imposter to be threats of the The Magici Cognatos ,lib.8.

caules of licken, was pull ternal (pirits on a fuddan eight moneth ctimes caling ck, the leaped own, the imbut by little , the was asipaffed: bu s cvill to proapours draw: But when the fierce, looking vomit, wherewith wax and agnitude, that devour; and Aator, concehileft the dia ing afterward Was commit heard her pro Pheie

and cunning delusions of Devils.

104

284.

285.

phefie, and feen her do those things befides, which go beyond the power of fickneffe, and exceed humane understanding.

G Ardanus relates in his fifteenth book, concerning the variety of things, of a certain honeft Countreyman and friend, who might more cafily have been deceived, then deceive, who told to him, that he had many years laboured of an unknown difeafe, at what time by his inchantments he vomited glafs, nailes, and hair : and though at length he were reftored, to the very day he relates thefe things, he did affirm, that he thought he had a huge heap of broken glaffe in his belly, and a found or noife as one fhould thake a bag full of broken glaffe, by which he was much vexed, and alfo that he the feventh hour of every eighteenth day, althou, h he numbred them not, had fo many blowes on his heart, which was a huge trouble to him for eighteen years fince his recovery; who fees not the actions, legerdemanes, and vexations firft and lait, that the Devil puts upon those whom he finds fir, by their fimplicity, for his delufions.

N Pago Bevensteftet under the Duke of Brunswick, a Maid named Margaret, daughter of Henry Achils, twenty years old, in the year 1562, on the holy day of the Visitation of the bleffed Virgin, about to wipe or make clean her thooes, drawes out her knife, and goes to a place fit for that purpose ; the Maid having lost her ftrength by a long Feaver, was yet weak; contrary to her expectation, in comes to the house a woman fomewhat old, and asketh her, Whether the were yet troubled with her Feaver 2 and whether the were free from her difeate ? It was answered her by the Maid, As yet I have not been able to go out of the house : The shooes being made clean, the puts the knife in her bofome; which when afterwards it was diligently fought by her, the faw a black dogg of an horrible fhape, lying upon his belly under the table, which with grinning thewing his teeth, went away; prefently it feemed to the Maid, that from her head to her teet did flow fomething, as it were, of a cold humour; to whom happened allo a defect of the Mind or Soul, and the becomes as dead without fenfe to the third day, wherein at last the begins to breathe again, and affirms, that the certainly knew, that that knife which the had taken out of the fheath of her Sitter, did flick fixed in the left fide of her own body, for that the did perfectly feel pain in that very place; by which the was fo exercifed, that being bowed double, the was forced to lean upon a staff, after three moneths there begun to appear and stand out on her left fide above the Spleen, betwixt her two lowest spurious ribs, an Imposshume of the bignesse of a Cocks egg, and like the Moon, by whole increment or departure, the either fwelled or grew quiet. The thirtieth of June, there islued out of the Ulcer fuch ftore of matter, that the fwelling was fomewhat remitted, and then as it were the point of a knife appeared; the Surgeon of Duke Henry, fent for from the Castle of Wolffenbuttel, took took out with instruments the point of the knife standing out under her ribs, and cured the Ulcer. 10 Vierus lib. 3. cap. 12. concerning the imposfures of Devils.

F Rom the Nativity of Christ, 1539. in a certain Town of the Bishoprick Erstetting Engelistic University of the Bishoprick Erstetting Fugestal; Uricus Neusessier, a Husbandman, when he was tormented about one of the fides of his ribbs with the cruel torments of griefs, upon a fudden he feels with his hand an Iron nail under his unhurt skin, which a Surgeon, a fervant, there diggedout with his knife; notwithstanding his griefs ceafed not, but daily waxed worfe and worfe; wherefore when the wretch faw there was no remedy of his grief, but by dearh, he taking a knife cut his own throat. Therefore being dead, he was brought to be buried the third day ; there were present then Resentader of Wißenburg, a Town of the Noricks in Germany, and John Effente', a fervant attending about such businesse, who, a greater company beholding, fell fuddenly upon opening the ventricle of the dead Husbandman, wherein they found very long and imooth wood, four Steel culters, partly tharp, partly like a Saw with teeth, and two rough tools of Iron, every one whereof did exceed the length of a span, and there was like the cover of a Globe: but that thou wilt most admire, is, how fo many and fo great tools could be contained in the cavity of his Ventricle, & by what art they are carried in; certainly by no other, then the cunning and deceit of the Devill, Joan Langius, in his Book 1. Epistle med. 28. & Vierus, Book 3. Chapter 8. Concerning the legerdemain of Devils.

Certain religious man an inhabitant of the Town Hefden in a field called Leodren, for Religion's fake, went to Jerufalem, flayed after his companions at Jerusalem that he might celebrate the holy time of Easter there, which his other companions om itted; and being afraid afterwards, left by that delay he had loft the opportunity of conveying himfelf to Europe, he made hafte towards the Sea at Joppa, and therefore was weary in his journey, and meeting with a Knight, who thewed himfelf to compatiionate, that he took him up behind him, and that very day, to the great admiration of all his, was carried into his own Town Hefden; where it being declared how it happened, the Inhabitants thought him mad, he went to the Temple of St. James in Spain, and returned again before his companions were come back from Jerufalem; when that was affirmed by them, that he stayed behind them at Jerufalem, then what he had told them concerning the celerity of his return was believed. Fulgofin, Book 1. chap. 6.

Boccatius of a Noble Lombard, who had entred himfelf a Souldier for Jerufalem, to gain the Holy-land, and departing, left to his wife part of his ring, which had his coat of Arms ingraven upon it, with this condition, that if he returned not within three years, with this carnest and fymbol, the might marry another "sband, 287.

106

286.

7

288.

Hosban

to the Su

velling in his Fathe the Salta

valued hi

he telli

ingenniya

canita hi

Statpill

Window

Leniph

him, mak

and the H

Ohan, 1

EXAN

Jomen

DE, with

haddle

Discall a

rabbed her

March th

White te

that that to

ant bigged that the place, a rating both

tis many fail cauled by t

ciles,

THey

L Prince

Fine power

Leys Alex

A Rguff

to whom neceffary

their forn

mean tim

ilw about

tions,

ding out under 12. concern-

n Town of the , a Husband. es of his ribbs feels with his con, a fervan s griefs cealed ien the wretch , he taking a was brough Rofenbader ti obn Eftente', 1 tter company c of the deal mooth wood, ith teeth, and ed the length but that then could be con icy are carried it of the De-Vierne, Book IS,

vn Hefden int to Jerafales, ight celebrate nons omitted, iloft the opte towards the , and meeting , that he took idmiration of here it being him mad, he d again before hen that was rofalem, then is return was mfelf a Scal departing, kit arms ingraves within three marry another insbards

and cunning delusions of Devils.

107

502

289%

291.

Husband, he being taken Prifoner in Judea, and carried into $\pounds gypt$ to the Sultan (whom his Father had entertained a good while travelling into Europe, though unknown) for the Holpitalities fake of his Father, his own Wiledome and dignity, he prefently fo pleafed the Sultan, who by dayly familiarity approveing his behaviour, he valued him more then all he had. The three years being finithed he fell into great forrow, the caufe whereof the Sultan having diligently fearened out, calls a Magitian who took that care that he caufed him being faft a fleep in a pretious bed, and loaded with a great burthen of Gold, and pretious flones to be carried in the laft night of the three years into the chief Temple in Joapia, a City in Lombardy. The Tutor affrighted with the fight, flies, and with other things of the Vision, relates in $\pounds gypt$ which he faw meeting him, making haft to the houfe of his Wife who was to take home another Husband the next evening.

Ohan. Baptift. Port. Neopotalitan, in his Book 2. of Natural Magick, thus writeth, There falleth into my hands, a certain woman lomewhat old, who of her own accord, undertook to inform me, within a certain time, what those things are which fuck the bloud of Infants in their Cradles, in the form of a night Owl, which men call a Scritch Owl; the commands all that were come along with me witneffes, to go out of dores, and caffing off her cloathes, rubbed her felf very much with a certain Oyntment; we perceive through the chinks of the dore, that by vertue of the loperiferous Oyl, fhe fell into a deep fleep, we out of dores discover great beatings, and pinings, but to great was the force of her deadly fleep, that that took her fenfe from her, when the ftrength of her Phylick began to decreafe and grow weak, we return from without to the place, and the being called from her fleep, began to tell many raving dotages, that the had paffed Seas, and Mountains, giving us many falle informations. We shew her black and blew fores cauled by the beatings which we heard, but the most flifly denics.

T Hey report Apollonius Tjaneus to have received of Jarcka, the 290. Prince of the Indian Philosophers, a gitt, as it were, of Divine power, that he was partaker of very great severy other day, Alex. from Alex. book 2. chap. 19.

A ^{uguStine concerning the City of God, book 18.chap. 18. faith, When we were in Italy, we heard of certain women keeping Victualling-houfes, and using evil arts, who by cheefe given to whom they pleafed, turn'd them prefently into beafts, to carry neceffary burdens; which having performed, and returning to their former flate, could perfectly remember all which in the mean time happened to them. Apuleim alfo himfelf, in his book which he inferibed by the title of The golden Affe, re-P 2 ports,}

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK Baden-Württemberg

ports, That it happened to himfelf, having taken poylon, his humane foul remaining, that he was transformed into an Afle, &c. but it is manifeft, that thefe are legerdemaines, and delufions of the Devil, deceiving the Soul and fenfes of men by vain conceit.

292.

108

Incentius reports in his Speculations, he tells us in his book 3. chap. 109. and william of Malmsbury, Monk, in his Hiltory, in the time of Peter Damianus, That there were two old women Inneholders, that is, fuch as gave entertainment to travellers for their money, (for an Inne is properly called a publick place of entertainment for money) which old women living together in the fame houle, and exercifing the fame art of Witchcraft, when a ftranger came alone, they transformed him into an horfe, a fwine, or an Affe, and fold him for a certain price to Merchants. A certain day a young man appearing, by his gefture a Stage-player, being enterrained of them, and earing meat with them, was by them transformed into an Affesthey gained much by him, who fhewed many wonderfull tricks to paffengers; for at the command of the old women, or any fign they made, he turned, or moved which way they pleafed; for his understanding perished not, though his speech ceafed, whereby the old women got much money; which being perceived by a neighbour, he for great fumme of money bought the Affe; but the women conditioned he frould fo keep him, that he fhould not go into the water. His keeper for a long time kept him from the water, but at last was to incautelous, that he brought him to a pool in the neighbourhood, where he a long time wallowing and rumbling, he was reftored to his own proper shape; and when his keeper raifed him up to fee whether it were his Affe or no, he told him who he was; the fervant told this to his Mafter, his Mafter telleth the fame to Pope Leo; the old women being converted, confesse it. The Pope doubted hereof ; but a most learned man, Fetrus Damianus manifested whim, that it might be true, by the example of Simon Mague, who had imprinted upon Fauftinius his own image or likeneffe.

293.

Michael Verdunus, and Peter Burgottus, Shepherds, having contracted with the Devil, could when they pleafed, by the ufe of a certain oyntment, transform themfelves into Wolves, and killing men, and other creatures, they ran away amongft other Wolves, as people imagined. They were burnt alive in the Diocefs of Bifnutina, in the year of Chrift, 1521. Vierus, book 5. ch. 10. concerning the legerdemains of Devils. TN the

a mol

may INers

any interi

tiouily th varia felt (

0000,851

ed, Walls

worthistow

tillous de

tan to the

Tom of E

gaping of 1

the Earthe

lowed up a was no pol

dreds, Wy

into Marte

inpherance

opaie, fait Chancellon

bait 7.

Ostine

elliste fac

Cieranda wi

which the andialate

DEN

I and sig

was convert

was as a Ba and finting

knowing it This pale

nom unde

ppeared

lotoped by about this

A Studio gin, be intimatei

teld by h wish who he would

tions,

tened into an lemaines, and les of men by

IR HIS book 1. in his Hiftory, women land. llers for their e of entertainin the fame hen a stranger fwine, or an A certain day , being enterical transfored many wonie old women, ich way they is speech ceach being pery bought the him, that he ime kept him it he brought ng time waproper (hape; were his Alk to his Maller, hen being cona moff learned ht be true, by pon Fauftinie

i, having confed, by the the Wolves, and amongft other ive in the Diobook 5, ch.19.

and cunning delusions of Devils.

In the year 1348, on the eighth Calends of February, In Normay a most great Earthquake did happen, as it is recorded at Pannonia, Illivicum, Dalmatia, Carnis, and Huffria, which lasted withouany intermition for the space of fourty dayes; the Earth was varioufly thaken, wonderful works were thewed, Moravia and Bavaria fele the loffe of twenty fix Towns and Caffles thereby thrown down, as it is related in the acts of that year; Men and Beatts perifhed, Walls, Temples, Buildings were overturned, whole Cities overthrown; morcover mountains burft alunder, fqueezed that ruinous defiruction and loffe of mentior two Mountains (as it were) ran to the devoured Cities, and being drawn violently to the Town of Elifs, killed all living Creatures that were therein ; the gaping of the Earth, that thereupon enfued, parely remained as the Earthquake left it; but fome part of it growing wilter, swallowed up all before it, the foyl being to fallen into it, that there was no possible passage. Fifty men, and more rufticks, many kindreds, with Cattel, were overwhelmed, and bodies were reduced into Statues of falt. Conradus of Meydenburg, an excellent Philotopher and Mathematician, fpeaking of this tempeftuous Earthquake, faith, That these Stames were feen by him and the Austrian Chancellor at Charmum, Aventinus in his Annal of the Bozori, book 7.

Oscillus, King of the Smedes and Goths, an exact obferver of Juflice and Equity, loft the love of many of his Nobles that difliked fuch feverity, who being inraged at him, procured a Bull charmed with magical incantations, and placed him in a high-ways wherein the King paffing was fet upon, and by his horns was killed, and so loft his Scepter. John Mag. in his book 8, chap. 13.

P Hilip Melanähon reports, that he was told by Christopher Groß and Sigsfmund Galenius, that a certain Virgin of Bononia, that was conversant amongst men two years after her death, and who was at a Banquet whereunto the was invited, not tasting any mear, and fitting amongst other Virgins, by chance a Magitian present knowing the fraud of the Devil, faith to them that were present; This pale Maid hath been dead, and coming straight to her, taketh from under her right shoulder, an inchantment, whereupon she appeared an ugly dead corps. This inchantment had been performed by another Magitian, and thereby the Devil had carried about this corps all this while.

A Studious young man of Sfordia, with the raging love of a Virgin, became almost mad by the violence of his passion; he being intimately acquainted with one skilfull in the Magick Art, was told by him, that he would by his skill fo work, that the Maid with whom he was fo much in love, should come to him, fo that he would abstain from the imbracing of her; the young man promileth

297:

295:

296.

12

109

mifeth continence; prefently the young Maid being moft beautiful, enters his bed-chamber, by words and geftures declaring much love; which he feeing, upon his first beholding her, he was fo wrapt out of himfelt, and unable to command his affectionate palfion, imbraces her very courteoufly; whereupon the Virgin prefently falls down dead, which did infinitely torment both him and the Magitian, who by his inchantments fo worked at length; that the Devil entred her body, and by his motion of the Devill, the Maid returned home; the was intent to her accustomed labors, but wholly pale and filent. After three dayes her Parents got Divines to her, who when they had ferioufly converfed with her, the Devil went out of her, and the falling down, appeared a meer ugly bale carcafs; blood is the caufe of a good colour, and lively fpirits; thefe the Devil cannot create : God onely our Creator can. Out of the Colloquies of Luther.

298.

299.

110

IN the year of Christ, 1543, a certain Italian, by name Andreas, a jugler of Sathan, coming up and down amongst the Sepulchres, and leading a red blind dog, by which he did many prodigious things; sometimes in the middle of the Market, Audreas (a great company ftanding about him) would caufe them to throw down upon the ground gold, filver, and Iron rings, behind this dog, which after he had mixed together, the Dog at his command would deliver every one of them as they were taken alunder to his proper owner; in like manner divers forts of coyn and moneys being confusedly heaped together, he would at his Mafters command in order difcern, and deliver to the right owners; and if he were askts who were fornicators, adulterers, or men of great authority and credit, he would most certainly declare; and if any fuch required the knowledg of any thing from him, he would fuddenly fatisfie them : wherefore some did not doubt to affirm, that he was possefield with a Pythonical or Satanick spirit. Cron. Red. part. 2.

WWHen Valens was Emperour of the Romans, Libanus, a Rhetorician, and Jamblicw, the Mafter of Proclus, are reported by the divination of a dung-hill cock, to have found out who fhould be Emperour after Valens; and moreover, after this manner it was found out; Twenty four letters are written in duft, and a grain of Wheat and Barley is put to every letter; then the Cock, certain vetfes having been recited, is let loofe, and they conceiv'd out of what letters he took the corns, the fame being joyned together, would declate the thing that was inquired after; which when they had done, the Cock took the corns out of the letters $\Theta \ge O A$. They read the letters, but yet effected the fignification doubtfull; for it was conceived, that either Theodofus, or Theodorus, or Theodolus, were defigned thereby. It being known, according to my relation, Valens fulfpected many that had thole names, being alio fought out by the diviners themfelves.

Baden-Württemberg

Tobo Fa

Jabour w

karg, whit

malgated

down to d

paping wi

gone eut o

at length, t

We down,

cachothis

the second

whole hour

is reste

IS WOOL TO S

N the yes

challen

Baranti, E

sig caten,

認識人

這些201

itather of 約, 部合日

or thirly co

印度州起

WE CODE

by Magicall

inter antise Mandate to letters t

the Prince,

th take thee on mill fulley com

mered, W

aller delay

an giteat

upon a

net alione t

Tistept

mam, a P

that up

Furth at H

by the fiwi

credible (

Many ver his Magin

tions,

molt brautiful, eclaring much ser, he was to fectionate pahe Virgin protient both 1 m rked at length, of the Devill, efformed labors, larents gor Dl with her, the red a meet ug at , and lively your Greator name Anares, he Sepulches, any prodigious idreas (a preat o throw down his dog, which and would do to his proper neys being coa ommand in orhe were assis authority and fuch required d fuddenly fafirm, that he it. Cron. Ast.

tibanus, of Proclass, and ave found an over, after the oritten in duts, etter; then the , and they coito being joyned l afters, which t of the lengts he fignification fus, or Theology in, according to c names, being

and cunning delusions of Devils.

111

300.

301.

302.

In

John Faustin, a filthy beast, and a fink of many devils, carried about with him an evil spirit in the shape of a dog; At wittenburg, when the Edict of the Prince to apprehend him was promelgated, he fled away; so coming to Norimburg, and being set down to dinner, he began to be very much troubled, and fuddenly paying what was due to the Hoast, went his way; he was fearce gone out of the dores, but the Serjeants inquire concerning him: at length, the fates compelling him, being brought to wittenburg, he sate down, being very melancholy, his Host defired him to tell the cause of his forrow; his answer was, I pray you be not terrified this night, though you hear a huge norse, and the very shaking of the whole house; in the morning they found him dead in his chambers, his neck being turned topsie-turvy. No wonder, that the Devill is wont to give such rewards to his fervants.

IN the year of our Lord, 1323, Frederick of the Austrian Family, challenging to himfelf the Title of Emperour, against Lewis of Bavaria, Emperour, waged a cruel Warr, in which Frederick being taken, was for three whole years detained priloner in a Caffle near the famous Town Naburg, feituated by the River Nabus. In the mean time, a certain Magitian coming to Duke Leopold, the brother of Frederick, promifed, that he would free him out of prifon, and take luch care, that within the space of one hour, he should be safely conveyed into Austria; Leopold promised great rewards to the Magirian, when he thould effect his promife. When night was come, both of them went into a Circle defigned, and prepared by Magicall incantations, the Magitian by his charms, raifed a fpirit, which appeared in the likeneffe of a Man, receives the Mandate to bring Frederick home, if he did not refuse to follow him: Therefore the spirit immediately in the night, comes to the Caprive Prince, faying to him, Thy Brother Leopold hath fent me hither to take thee out of Prijon; wherefore arife, and mount this Horfe, and I will fafely conduct thee to thy Brother. To whom Duke Frederick an-Iwered, who art thou ? Ask not who I am, faith the fpirit, but without further delay mount this horfe, if thou defirest to be delivered out of Frifon, then great fear and trembling feized, not onely upon Frederick, but allo upon all that were with him; but they figning themfelves with the fign of the Croffe, the fpirit vanished away, and returned alone to the Magitian. In the Chronicle of Hedion, book 4.

T is reported that in the year of Chrift, 1271. one John, an Almain, a Prieft at Hallerstadium, was fo skillfull in the Magick Arr, that upon Christmas Eve in the motning, he faid Maffe thrice. First at Halberstadium. Secondly, at Moguntia. Thirdly, at Colonia, by the fwistuesse of this Horse which he rode upon, which with incredible speed, carried him from one of these Towns to the other. Many very prodigious things are written, which this Priest did by his Magicall Art.

I N the year of our Lord, 1272. came to Crucenatum, a Town in Lower Germany, a Magitian full of tricks and Legerdemains who cut off his fervant's head publickly in the Market place, the people being spectators, and within half an hour, joyned that to his body which lay as it had been dead, upon the ground; the fervant immediately recovering life, and becoming as sprightful as ever he was. He was feen carried up and down in the Ayre, and making a great noife, he seemed to be a hunting to those that beheld him often times. He seemed also fometimes (to them that flood gazing at him) to be an armed man that did greedily devour a Cart or Waggon of Wine or Wood and the Hories too.

304.

305.

112

303.

IN the year 1553, two inchantreffes were taken, which by tempefts, hail, and cold, endeavoured to defiroy the fruits of the Earth. Thefe women ftole a Neighbours child, which they cut in pieces, and put into a pot toboyl. It came to paffe by providence, that the Mother feeking her child, came at that inftant, and faw in the pot the diffected members of her child, therefore thefe two peftilent Witches being taken and examined, conteffed (by tortures that were defervedly inflicted upon them) that if the boyling of this child had been perfected, they had caufed fuch terrible cold as had deftroyed the fruits of the Earth. Hedian. book 5.

IN the year of our Lord, 1558. in a neighbour Town of Abena, a certain Magitian cured many mad-men by hearbs which the Devill had fhewed him. Moreover he had commerce with him, and took dayly advice of him for curing of difeales: it happened that there was great diffentions twixt him and a neighbour of his, a Carpenter; in their railings and brawlings, the Carpenter did exafpetate and vex the mind of the Magitian with fome bitter and reproachfull speeches. After some Moneths were expired, the Carpenter fell into a dangerous difeafe, and as one having forgot all former difcontent between him and the Magitian, feeketh to him to cure him of his most miscrably afflicting fickneffe: The Magitian counterfeiting himfelf appealed and much his friend, whilf he promifed his utmost indeavours to cure him, in the mean time he refolves, having this opportunity, to revenge the wrongs he conceived, and gives him a porion composed of venemous hearbs, which as foon as the Carpenter had taken, his body was cruciated and tormented with fuch extream pain, that he fuddenly gave up the Ghoft. The wife therefore of the Carpenter with his kindred, accufe the Magitian of man-flaughter, for which caufe he is convented before the Senate at Ahena, and being examined by torments, he confeffed this murder, and other impious and most wicked deeds, and that he had learned his Magick of a certain old Woman in the neighbourhood, which lived at the Wood Hercynia for which most horrible and flagitious arts, they caused him to be ryed

ryed to a l

M drift that antighbot much kind her good a chantments Advice a loca kind of fettedand in deibution; his for ay he by forced int at thurein. puffble that la cattain dy is obsorid mitaties Gulitionath

this the

TWO W ports wit ing they conf by chance the ing to came NUTER UDOD 1 ter, the Wi ther, the power repres doub G menby Wite hto try the nowhich to whe per m arthe Lord And Chrift, Mal.

A Lower both d Papedome s fire, he fet f proceeded of him, if he we that the De fote accord posarie at o

tions,

n, a Town in redemains who place, the peored that to his dy the fervant tiful as ever it y and making at beheld him that flood gayour a Carter

hich by temfruits of the sich they cut tille by provitille by provitille

n Chabena, 1 which the De ith him, and appened that our of his, a arpenter du n with 100% oneths wett and as one the Magitian Hiding feb and much lis cure him, in to reverge the ofed of remo ken, his bob hathe ich arpenter with at which can't (Timincia) ous and me ta certainoil Nood Hangin fed him to be THE!

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

tyed to a stake and burnt to death. Manlius, in his Collections.

Artin Luther using many words concerning Witches, tells WI that his Mother was many wayes vext by an inchantreffe, a neighbour, infomuch that the was wont for fear to thew her much kindneffe, and by intreaties and courtefies, uled to procure her good will : for this Witch did fo torment her Infants by inchantments, that with continuall crying, they expired their lives. And when a certain Preacher in his Sermon declaiming against fuch kind of Witches, and alluding to her impiety, he was fo infefled and infected with inchantments, that he had no way to elcape deftruction; for by these Wirchcrafts, the ground to thrinked from his feet as he went, that he could not ftay himfelf, but' was thereby forced into the River, being unable to ftay himfelf till he was cast therein. And when it was enquired of Luther whether it were poffible that fuch things fhould happen to the Godly, heanfwered. Yes certainly, for our mind or Soul is subject to a lye, yea our body is obnoxious to death and afflictions; and I am periwaded that my fickneffes, (God permitting) infest me by inchantments . but God, though he fuffer his Elect to fall into fuch calamities, yet he delivers them from the fame.

Wo Witches being in an Inne, filled two Urns, or waterpots with water, and fet them afide; and when in the evening they confulted, whether they thould deftroy the corn or wine ? by chance the Hoft hearing their difcourfe, and taking the waterpots, he came loftly to the bed-fide, where they lay and caft the water upon the Witches in bed; which turning fuddenly into Ice, the Witches were utterly extinct : Whereupon, faith Luther, the power of Satan greatly appears in these Witches; for two wayes doth God thew his power, by fuffering the Devill to affail men by Witches; first, to punish the fins of the wicked : fecondly, to try the pious and faithful, and for their glorious approbation which they will obtain by their perfeverance in faith : for without the permission of Almighty God, the Devil can hurt no man; for the Lord faith, He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye : And Christ, Without the Will of my Father, a hair cannot fall from your head.

A Lexander the fixth, when he was Cardinal, fpent his time both day and night, in contriving how he might obtain the Popedome; and that he might more eafily accommodate his defire, he fet his fludy upon the Satanical Art of Magick, and fo far proceeded therein, that he promifed the Devil diligently to obferve him, if he would fatisfie him in those things he inquired. He defired that the Devil fhould take the fhape of a Pronotarie; Satan therefore according to his with, appeared to him in the form of a Pronotarie at the day appointed, and promifed to tell him whatever Q

308.

307.

113

he demanded ; He defires to know whether he fhould obtain the Pontificial dignity? which when Satan affirmed, he moreover demanded, how long he flould continue in that dignity ? To which queftion the Devil fo answered, That Alexander understood him to promife the Popedome to him eighteen years, but he reigned onely eleven years and eight dayes; the eleven years being expired, he falling into fickneffe, commanderh one of his fervants to go into the upper Conclave, and bidshim bring him the book that lay upon the Table, in which Magical Arts and incantations were taught; the fervant afcending, and opening the doors, he finds Satan fitting in the Chair of the Pope, clad with the Papal ornaments : affrighted, with which Vision he returns to the Pope, and tells him what he had feen : The Pope hearing this, compells him to go again, to lee whether the Devil did continue there? the fervant coming thither again, found the Devil fitting in the fame habit, who demanded what he would have of him ? The fervant anfwered, That he came thither for the Pope's book. To which the Devil replyed, What doeft thou call the Pope? I am the Pope. When the Pope being fick, by his Minister, heard these things, he was greatly afraid, and eafily underflanding how the cafe flood with tim, by his own command he was carried into the inner Conclave, whither as foon as he was come, the Devil taking the habit of a Poft-meffenger, cometh and knocketh haftily at the door, and being let in, cometh to the Pope lying in his bed, and tells him, that the time was now expired, and therefore he must speedily depart this life : Whereupon there arofe contention, whereby those who were prefent, understood the strife betwixt them, to be concerning the number of the years; but Satan evidently demonstrating to him the reason, that the number of the years were expired, went away; and in a very fhort time after, the Pope gave up the ghoft.

309.

114

Y Regorius Martinus told Martin Luther, 1538, a ftory much I to be bewail'd, of a certain Virgin, that instead of tears, wept drops of blood; being brought to that miferable condition, by the malice of an Inchantrels, and that the Witch was prefent, though the took no notice of it when the poured out fuch tears; He faid, that it was not convenient that there fhould have been any delay or putting off the put ithment hereof; nor that Lawyers or Judges needed to hear any further testimony, evidence, or demonstration. Furthermore, he added as followeth; Within these few dayes, (laith he) there was brought to me a Cafe concerning Wives; a Wife did endeavour to kill her Husband by poylon, and when the Woman was examined by tortures concerning this matter, no confeffion of the truth could poffibly be extorted from her; for Witches remain mute, notwithstanding torments, which they nothing value, the Devil doth fo dexteroufly ftop their mouthes; therefore when what they have done by witchcraft, convinceth the Witches according to this example, there ought fuch course Tw

but

BARS fold to him, b the buy teller v wich(d what he thing u 108000 the hou ded cha himfell cdbyh Wite ingly a y. T they w utice Women which t which Prilon t puncha g sdos Whith #25] though it was c of his h ELS DOLD Women hanged

PH

Itions,

ould obtain the , he moreout uty? To which understood him but he reissed s being expired. vants to go into ook that lay up. ns were taught: ids Satan fitting nents ; affright and tells him pells him to g es the fervau he fame habi ervant aniwe which the De am the Pope thefe things, he the cafe floot the inner Con aking the habi at the door, and and tells him uft specdily the whereby they orm, to be con ntly demonstration s were expired pe gave up de

a fory mul d of tears, wep ondition, by m s prefent, those rears; Helan been any delayor vyers or Judge r demonstration these few days, tning Wives; and when the is matter, co cos m her; for Wi ich they cooking mouches; then) continued to ghe fuch cours

and cunning delusions of Devils.

to be taken with them, that the example may be a terrour to otners.

T was reported, that some years past a Magitian was suspended 3 but vanishing away when he was upon the Gallowes, there nanged in his flead a buedle of firaw. The fame man having fold to one an excellent horfe, did warn him, that when he rid him, he thould not haftily go to the water with him. Wherefore the buyer, taken with a defire of finding out the caufe, why the feller withed him to forbear bringing the Horfe to water, forthwith (defirous to caufe his horfe to fwim) rides into a deep River, when he came to the middle thereof, he perceived that he had nothing under him but a bundle of grafs and Hey; Wherefore being in a most violent rage, he runs breathing as it had been for life to the houfe of the Witch, who perceiving the coming of his defrauded chapman, laying bimfelf down upon a bench, counterfeiting himfelf to be alleep, the buyer rushing himfelf into his stove, feeked by hawling and pulling of him, to raile him from fleep; the Witch thought he would kill him at last, and therefore exceedingly affrighted, he gets up upon his knees, and runs away speedily. The fame Witch did often fell to men, fwine, which after they were bought, turned into bundles of ftraw; at last Divine Jultice brought him to a deferved punishment at Norburg, (with two women that were his complices) he and they, by diabolical tricks which they used, when they were not observed, stole mens goods, of which being at last detected, they were apprehended and cast into prifon together; and a rich Woman, who was till that time reputed a Matron of good conversation, was confessed by the women, to be guilty of the fame wickedneffe of ftealing and fornication, which by their legerdemaines they exercifed; and therefore the was likewife caft into prifon; but the chief Magitian himfelf, though put to great torments, would confesse nothing ; and when it was conjectured, his art, and spirit or familiar, was in the hair of his head, they cut away his hair. Whereupon he confessed all his notorious wickedneffes, and after a few dayes, first the two women, and immediately after the Magitian, were defervedly hanged.

He horrid and much to be admired example of the power of Satan, which he theweth by his curled instruments, Witches, are fully demonstrated to us, in the book called, Mallem Veneficarum. And although the power of Sathan be great, and that God fuffereth him fometimes to exercise his mischievous cruelty against fome men for their fins and unbelief; yet fometimes allo it pleafeth Almighty God, by the envy of the Devil, to try and prove his own dear Children; Neverthelefs, we are affured, that their very hairs are numbred, and that not fo much as one of them can fall to the ground contrary to his will : therefore we may eafily arm our felves against the power and inares of the Devil, if we diligenty ly beware and take heed of fin, and perfevere firm and confiant in faith and prayer. But becaufe the Devil hath to this day shewed his greatest power amongst Papists, therefore I will declare some examples out of the forenamed book, by which it most manifestly appears how great the power of Satan is, and what inveterate envy and malice he hath towards mankind; He who defires to see variety of discourse to this purpose, let him peruse the said Author.

Q 2

311.

115

312.

313:

314.

116

O F the filthy commistion which Witches use with the Devil, it is a shame to tell; whosever defireth to know how these filthy Plagues and beasts do commerce with the Devil, (whereby they have oft deformed births, and exercise nothing but Satanical deeds) let him, besides the foresaid Author, peruse Austin in his third book, and second chapter, de Civitate Det.

A T Ratisbone one of two Witches which were burnt to afhes, being one that waited upon a Bath, confeffed, that the was compelled by the Devil, to use feveral means to feduce a chafte young Virgin, the daughter of a certain honess and very rich mans to lye with the Devil; to which end the devil thought it his best course to invite the Virgin to his Chamber, upon an Holy-day, where he might talk to her in the shape of a young Gallant; which having often affay'd, the Maid alwayes figning her felf with the fign of the Cross, his defign was frustrate.

A Nother Virgin of the Dioceffe of Argentinum flaying alone at her fathers house, upon a Sunday there came to her a certain old woman of the fame Town, who after many fcurrilous words which the used, fac invites her to go along with her to a place where the thould fee all the handfomeft gallants of the Town; the young maid overcome by the obscene enticing words of the old woman went along with her to her house, they were no fooner come to the house, but the old woman faith, we will go up to the chamber where the young gallants whereof I fpoke of are, but take heed you fign not your felf with the fign of the Croffe. The young maid hearing what the old woman faid to her, as the followed her up the flairs, was ftruck with fudden fear, and therefore fhe figning her felf with the fign of the Croffe, by prayers commendeth her felf to Almighty God. Whereupon the Devils vanished ; which the old woman perceiving, with a grim and devillish counrenance, raging, and curfing the young maid, thrust her out of dores. Ibid.

ad an Children e Movembelels, we ere affurade ever unit vory

Il and the montrold and that not formed as one of them can but to the securit extract, to his wall ; three new on thy same

Alle icher ng sinft it o power and instas of the Davil, if at culling

IT was who was old w the proto office of for eight licall let

IN the ... acerta how not her, at to her, at to here the who refu Virginse fling her ward the underfil notice of ments, i molt mi pittiful

A Cer terri gentikan

Inchante

could b

that alt

Ohenfe

the con

marriag

had for ningthe

talkstol

and incp

health;

of him,

well, ar

him, S

Earlpe

tons,

nd confrant in is day incwel declare fome oft manifelts hat inveterate defites to itt the faid As-ith the Devil ow how their vil, (whereby but Satanical Autin in au

urnt to albes, that the was duce a chalie ery rich man, the it his belt an Holy-day, allant; which felf with the ying alone at her a certain rrilous words a place where n; the young e old woman t come to the the chamber out take hed ne young mail wed her up the figning her felt deth her felt u ilbed; which levillifh cour ruft her out a

and cunning delusions of Devils.

TT was likewife confelled by this woman that waited at the Bath, who was formerly spoken of, that the was likewife deceived by an old woman, who brought her to the Devill in a way, to whom the profinuted her felf, and that he in every respect, performed the office of a luftfull man, and was alwayes prepared for that; and that for eighteen years denying the faith, the ferved the Devill in diabolicall letchery.

IN the Brixiensian Diocesse, a young man being inamoured with a certain young maid, much defired to have her to wife, but I know not upon what occasion altering his affection, married another, at the folemnization of the matriage, not having altogether forgot his old love, amongst others, invited his former paramour, who refused not the invitation, and when the honeft Matrons and Virgins offered their gifts, this impudent beaft comes forth, and cafting her hands towards the bride; faith to her, From this day forward thou (bal: not enjoy one day of health. Which words, when they understood the levity of the impudent curtefan, they took no great notice of; but the Nuprials being ended, by the force of Inchantments, the loft the ftrength of all her members, and for ten years most miserably afflicted, she kept her bed, and then ended a most pittifull life.

A Certain Earl of an illustrious extraction of the westravienfian territories, bordering upon the confines of the Dioceffe of Argentinum, having married a Lady of an illustrious family, being by inchantments deprived of naturall ftrength, for begetting iffue, could by no means underfland the reason thereof. It happened that after he had been three years married, he going to the City of Menfes, to expedite some businesse which he had, that he fell into the company of a certain woman, who for fome years before his marriage, had been his Concubine, whom he diffaited not for what had formerly paffed betwixt them, nor did he fulpect her concerning the Witchcrafts with which he had been afflicted, but kindly talks to her of their old love, which he was pleafed to acknowledg, and inquires of her, her condition, and whether the were in good health; She perceiving the pitty and goodneffe of the Earl, inquires of him, whether he were in good health, he answered, That he was well, and that all things fucceeded happily and profperoufly with him. She amazed for a little while was filent; which when the Earl perceived, he by gentle speeches, invited her to discourse; whereupon the inquires his Wives condition, he answered that the was well: She again asketh whether he had any Children by her. The Earl answered, I have had three Sons by her, the bare me one every year. Then as one flupefied, the was filent. Saith the Earl, then pray thee my dear, why dolt thou lo accurately inquire of the condition of me and mine, I do not doubt but thou rejoycest at my felicity : then, faid fhe, I am heartily glad, but curled be that old woman

117

315.

316.

118

318.

319.

man, who firmly fwore that by her witchcrafts, fhe would make you unable to perform the rites of Marriage with your efpouled Lady, the knowledge whereof the Well that ftands in the middle of your Court will give you ; in which an earthen pot is caft, being fill'd with inchantments, of which the old woman did affirm that fo long as it should lye there, your power of rendring Nuprial rites thould utterly be wanting, but lunderstand now, and rejoyce at it, that what the fpoke was vain and frivolous. The Earl hearing these things, wilely diffembling the bufinesse, makes haste home and caufeth the Well to be drawn or emptied of all the water that was in it, findeth the Earthen pot, which being burnt, he recovered his former ftrength and vigour. ibid. Concerning the manner how Witches use to take away the Members of men, read in the Book called Mallem Venificarum, cap. 7. p. 2. It is to be thought impoffible that fuch members fhould be to occultly pulled or taken from the bodies, but by the legerdemains of the Devill.

IN the Biefiacus in the Bafilienfian Diocefs, a young Wench afterwards by means of her art, made one of the Society of Wirches, the was brought by her Aunt (who was afterwards burnt at Argentina) to an upper Chamber of the houfe, where there were together five gallant young men clothed in green; then the old woman faith to the Maid, Chufe which of thefe young men thou pleafeft to be thy husband; which when the young maid refused, the did most grievously beat and hurt her.

N the Basiliensian Diocess, a Priest of the Town of Oberweiler was of opinion, That there were no Witches in the VVorlds and paffing hastily over a bridge, he met a certain old woman in as great hafte as himfell; to whom he would not give the way, but threw her off the bridge into the mire; whereat the old woman much inraged, gave him bitter and contumelious language, faying; --- Thou shalt not escape revenge for this; which words he regarding not, nor well understanding, went home, but in the night he was become fo weak and feeble below his girdling place or middle, that he could not poffibly rife out of his bed; fo that he was fain to be carried by two, as oft as he went to the Church, or to vifit the fick; after this affliction had continued for the fpace of three years, this old woman (whom he had not without caufe fulpected) falls fick, therefore the was advifed to go to the Prieft to confesse her fins; and although at first the refused, yet at length perfwaded thereunto by her Mother, fhe was by two fellows carried to his house, and there confessed her fins to him, but made no mention of her witchcraft; her confession finished, she faith, Knoweft thou by whom thou wast bewitched into this weakneffe ? The Prieft answered mildly, I know not; quoth the, Thou haft fulpected me, and that not without eaule, I brought upon thee the evill that thou art afflicted with for that thou didft caft me off the bridge into the mire, but my departure out of this World is now

now at my dea dingly, the Dev covered

IN the of a ne onely all tures wer taits of t lybirths ; kiled tha acle wou telle wou

THE L wit expedied a factions advilled th all heed; Caffile, an this With dy with b Waeren Wamb theteur WHO WIL which c and that head of it loot the r

IN a cert tar mod cutting w cutting whice in, whice for 's to t for 's to t contends, for 's to t cruell C combar Scriean being est call him an ching as

ions,

would make our efpouled in the middle not is caft, beand did affirm dring Nuprial v, and rejoyce the Earl hearhe water that t, he recoverg the manner the thought alled or taken ll.

ng Wench alstety of Witvards burnt at the there were then the old ang men thos maid refuled, of Oherweile the VVorle ld woman in e the way, bu e old woman inguage, fajich words he , but in the girdling place bed; fo that the Church for the fpace without caule o to the Prich , yet at length ofellows car but madero ed, the faith, his weaknelle. the, Thou has gbt upon the isft call me of this World is

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

now at hand; I will therefore caufe that within a few dayes after my death, thou thalt recover thy health; which happened accordingly, for according to the time for which the had contracted with the Devill, the died. And within thirty dayes after, the Prieft recovered his former health and ftrength.

IN the Laufanen fian Diocefle, a certain Witch caufed the Family of a neighbour to be plagued with a grievous battenneffe, not onely all the beafts and cattle, and other domeftick living creatures were unfruitfull, but the wife of the family, by the Witchcrafts of this fellow, being made unfruitfull alfo, had feven untimely births : when at laft the Witch was taken and examined, he contefled that in a hole digged under the threfhold of his dore, there lay hid a ferpent, which as foon as removed, the mifery of barrenneffe would ceafe, which as foon as ever it was effected, fruitfullneffe was reftored to the whole family. ibid. cap. 6.

He Wife of a great man, in the Town of Reichshoffen, being with child, got to her house, some weeks before the time the expected deliverance, a Mid-wife. There was in the faid Town a famous Witch, of whole company and difcourfe, the Mid-wife advifed the Gentlewoman who was great with child, to take speciall heed ; but after some dayes, the for recreation fake, went to the Caftle, and met with certain women come together to a feaft, where this Witch was alfo, who touched or ftroaked the belly of the Lady with both her hands, as it had been in the way of falutation. Whereupon, the prefently perceived her young one to move in her Womb with great pain and grief, whereat wonderfully affrighted, the returns home, and tells the Mid-wife what had befallen her, who with a fad countenance, cries out, We have loft the child; which came to paffe accordingly, for the had an untimely birth, and that in fuch manner that at one time the was delivered of the head of the child, at another of the feet, at another of the hands, and loof the reft. Ibidem.

IN a certain Town of the Argentinenfian Dioceffe, one whofe name for modefty fake I conceal, had at his houfe one of his Tenants cutting wood, whom a Cat of a vaft magnitude at unawares fet upon, which when he had driven from him by blows, another more fierce joyneth to the former, againft whom, whilft he more fharply contends, a third comes, fo that at firft he was put to a ftrait, being forc't to ufe the utmost of his ftrength againft three fuch maine and truell Cats, neither could he drive them away, and free himfelf from them without the receiving of many hurts and wounds; which Combat being finished, the man falls to his work, prefently two Scrjeants, apprehend him and carry him before the Judge, who being exceedingly moved with rage and fury, commanded them to caft him into an ugly prifon, his groaning and often fighings, nothing availing him for clearing or making manifest his innocency; and 1. Sta

322.

321.

119

and the Judges anger did daily encrease exclaiming against the wicked fellow (as he called him) who would not acknowledg his villanous doings; after three dayes were paffed, upon the often importunities of others, the Judge fends for him to the Senate to receive his judgment, when he was come to the Senate, the inraged Judge could not with patience look upon him ; he (poor man) talleth down upothis knees, and humbly begged that he would hear him fpeak for himfelf, the Judge fadly laid to his charge that he had grievoully wounded the three chief Matrons of the Town, and vet was fo impudent that he denied the wickedneffe which he had to villanoufly perpetrated within a few dayes paft; which the poor wretch hearing, answered, that he had never hurt any Woman in all his dayes : the Judge on the other fide thundered out, that it was notorioufly known, that he fo hurt these Gentlewomen, that they lay in their beds with all their members and parts of their bodies fo out of joynt, that they were not able by their own proper ftrengths, fo much as to turn themfelves from one fide to the other; he again denies that he ever hurt these gentlewomen; Bu', faith he, I well remember, that upon that day whereon I was apprehended, and, for that caule, was caft into prifon, I being fet upon by beafts, uled all the vigour and firength I had to quit my felf of them and drive them away, which words amazed all that were prefent. They enquire by what beafts he was fet upon, then he declares all that was done very orderly. The truth being thus difcovered, the Judges feek what they can to huth up the bufineffe, and procure. what filence they could for the prefervation of the honour of the Matrons.

323.

120

TN the Basiliensian Diocels, in the Confines of Lotharingia and Alfatia, a Gentleman of great fame did inveigh against an old woman with fomewhat bitter language; who thereby inraged, determined to take most speedy revenge of him, as she faid ; which . threats he little valued, yet the very night after there arole a blifier in his neck, which when he fcratched, it overfpread his whole face and neck, and an horrible form of Leprofic made ugly his whole body : being in this condition, and fulpecting the Witch guilty of Inchantments, he fendeth for his friends, with whom he might beft advife and take counfel, and declares the whole bufineffe, especially the threats of the old woman. What need is there of many words ? the woman is taken, and being exercifed with torments, and examined, confessed the fact; and the Judge inquiring diligently into the manner and caufe ; faith the, I boyling with revenge for the contumelious words which he fpake against me, returning home, met there with a maligne spirit, 19 whom inquiring of me the caufe of my grief, I told the whole butineffe, and fought to him for revenge; whereupon the Devill asked me, What evil I defired to be inflicted upon him? I answered, I defire that his face may be fo blown up, or fwelled with a continual tumour, which may make him most ugly to behold :

Suith the a more I had conto (1), 11.

IN the C and Frid falling our betwixt to upon her w (opposite to conceived f Leprolic₂ w

IN the fan man lifer turning her and cogeth the infected tew dayes a ANhone the had ceived that her a Witc oct own ac neeting wi very face of iny Garder with the V paths in th the WVnch orawl with ar, the oth billy, and inc was not pict all he imentatio (it possible Potterco KNOWN, at Inchantene to learch; any incha alfo foun being bor tightove and call pings, c

Saith

ions,

g againft the knowledg his ion the often e Senate tore-, the inraged or man) tal. ic would hear arge that he e Town, and which he had hich the poor 20y Womat red out, that women, that is of their boown proper to the other; n; Bur, laim as appreheng fet upon by y lelf of them were prefent. e declares all fcovered, the and procure onour of the atharingia and gainft an eld reby mraged e laid ; which e arole a bli ad his whole ade ugly his g the Witch ith whom he e whole ball What need is ting exercises and the Judge he, I boy hich he spate gne fpirit, el the whole beon the Devil im? Janfweiwelled with a gly to behold

and cunning delusions of Devils.

Saith the Devil, going from me, I have already firuck him with a more loathfome plague then thou defireft; which when the had contefled, the was defervedly burnt to athes. Serun, Part, cap. 11.

IN the Conftantienfian Diocefs, betwixt the Towns of Brifatam and Fribargum, a leprous woman told to many auditors, that the falling out with another woman, and many railing words paffing betwixt them; as foon as the came home, a fudden wind blowed upon her which came from the houfe wherein the woman dwelled (oppofite to her) with whom the had contention, with which the conceived the was fo ftruck, that the was thereby infected with a Leprolic, whereof the could never be cured.

IN the fame Diocefs and Territories of the black wood, a hangman lifting up a Witch from the ground by a pole of wood, the turning her felt towards him, faith, I will give thee thy wages; and together with thele words blowing on the face of the hangman, the infected it with an ugly Leproke, whereof he dyed within a tew dayes after.

AN honeft woman of Oenipontus, returning home from a Garden, the had adjoyning close to a woman-neighbour, and having perceived that this neighbour of hers came oft into it, but fulpesting her a Witch, durst not lo much as reprehend her for it ; yet she of her own accord, without any provocation of the honeft woman, meeting with her, with brazen fac'd impudence flying into the very face of her, faith, Thou suppected that I often paffe thorow thy Garden. To whom the other woman, fearing to brawl or chide with the Witch, answereth pleasantly onely in these words; Your paths in the grafs declare what trefpaffe you have done me. Then the VVitch, much troubled that the could procure no occasion to brawl with her, went away murmuring ; within a few dayes after, the other woman was afflicted with most immane griefs of her belly, and most acute gripings in both her fides; infomuch, that the was not onely afflicted with continual pains, but did alfo difquiet all her neighbours, with continual pitifull cryings out and lamentation; and when multitudes who came to vifit her, that (if possible) they might relieve and comfort her, amongst the rest, a Potter comes, to whom the witchcrafts of this woman were well known, and perceiving the caule of her ficknels to be no other then Inchantments, he commanded the Husband of the afflicted woman to fearch, whether he could find under the threshold of his door any inchantments; where amongst many other, witchcrafts, was allo found a waxen Image, about the length of an hand, which being bored through, had two pins faßned on both fides, the one right over against the other; which witchcrafts being removed, and caft into the fire, the was freed from those most grievous gripings, cap. 12.

R

121

324.

325.

326.

Ar

T Zabermus in the Argentinen fian Diocels, a Witch, being a midwife, came to a certain honeft and godly woman, offering her fervice near the time of her delivery, who knowing her infamous by her witchcrafts, dilmifleth her with pleafing words, feigning, that her pains, when time thould require, would be very acceptable to her; but when the time came, neglecting her, and making use of another Midwife which the fent tor, the conceiving in her breaft the feminine flames of anger, eight dayes after the birth, in the night, with two women cometh into the Chamber of the woman that lay in, and maketh hafte to her bed; whereupon the woman in childbed endeavouring aloud to call upon her Husband, finds her tongue and all her members flupify"J. Then the VVitch flanding in the midft between two women, faid, Behold, this fcurvy creature fcorn'd I thould be her Midwife; but I'le be reveng'd of her. The two women that flood on each fide of her, interceded for the woman, faying, They never knew or heard any hurr by her. But the again thus broke out paffionately, Becaufe fhe hath vexed my Jublits, i'le vex hers; but for your fakes her pain shall be fuspended for half a year; and then putting her hand upon the womans belly, her guts appear'd to come out as it were, and the Witch roll'd fomething into them; afterwards, the women being gone, the child-bed woman being come a little to her felf, call'd her husband, and tells him the whole bufmeffe. He comforts his wife, and bids her be of good chear, for these were but vain terrours, and fuch as women in child-bed were ufually infested with. But she answered, O she threatned I should endure this mifery after half a year, but if now they are gone, I find no more hurt by it, I will reft confident upon thy opinion. She had alfo an Arch-deacon to her fon, to whom the reveal'd the bufinefs. When the fix moneths were over, the began indeed to be most grievoully cortured with pain in her belly, to that night not day the could take any reft, but continually groaned and thricked out moft miferably; Nor in all these torments did the forget God, whom the fill implored for his affiftance, and who heard and delivered her : For on a day when the went to ftool, all that filth came from her. Then the called her Husband and Son, and faid, Now I hope you are convinc'd it was no vain imagination that I told you of; who ever faw me ear thorns, flicks, and bones ? For there the thewed them Rofe-briars a hand length, then flicks and bones, and other rubbish, whereby the was fo tormented. [Ibid. cap. 3. 1 .

328.

122

327.

The Devil had fo efferated, and wholly acted certain Witches, that they devoted even their own Children, or any other Infants they could come by, to him the Prince of Devils, with horrid exectations; which cruelty of theirs was thus detected. When a certain Witch denyed all help at the time of her travail, but onely of one daughter of her own; her Husband wondring at the thing, thing, b tiery, at and obla by the in hooks, J mean tio and accla ment)he delay; a who carri where the two of his came to a patting it diately dyn bomane po bridge, bu other fide, the man, a demands t up the Der tot any vil hcient telti Non was or fore a Mag both deferr

N a par Itchis C DIS With Maid hear him, She o at the chill layes the could cafil impelt, a with ; and was prefe ged her to eskt her if that the he her, wer demander teply'd; her to the cauled it bours, a allo mak this the

itions,

Witch, being ly woman, of y, who know r with pleafing riquire, would me, neglectute ne tent tor, the r, eight days meth into the fie to her bed; oud to call uppers liupity". women, fait, Midwife; bu on each fide of knew or heard fionately, Bo for yout lais en putting bu come out as I afterwards, th ome a little o bufmefie, H for their wet were utuali thould endun one, I find to tion. She had 'J the bulines. to be most grit. he not day the ieked out mak et God, whos and delivered filth came free id, Now Ibope I told you di; For there like icks and bonch coted. [Ikd.

ertain Witchs any other Isevils, withheerected. Who travail, but orwoadring at the ubits.

and cunning delusions of Devils.

123

329.

thing, bid himfelf in the house, that to be might find out the myflery, and by that means faw the horrid rites of both the facriled? and oblation; He faw the Infant, held up by no humane means, by the impulsion of the Devil alcend up the chimney by the Pothooks, looking with an ugly Satanicall look; the Mother in the mean time calling upon the Devil with her ufuall diabolicall rites and acclamations. Which when the man faw, (to his amazement) he was very earnest to have the Child christened without delay; and taking with him fome neighbours, and his daughter who carried the child, for the next Village he is bound in all hafte, where the Parifh-Church flood; and having as he went along, told two of his neighbours of the businesse from first to last, when they came to a bridge they were to paffe over, he drew his fword, and putting it to his daughters breaft, vow'd fhe thould there immediately dye, if the did not convey the child over the River without humane power; for I will not have him go (layes he) over the bridge, but of himfelf let him be conveyed immediately to the other fide. And when the good woman wondred at this rigour in the man, and fought to perfwade him, he yet infifted upon his demands the more refolutely, untill he forced his daughter to call up the Devil, and make him convey the Infant over the River without any visible means. The Child being baptized, he having fufficient teltimony against his daughter, when the time of purification was over, accused wife and daughter, who being brought before a Magistrate, and convicted of that most impious crime, were both deservedly burnt. [Ibidem.]

N a part of Suevia, a Country-man walking over his ground to fee his Corn in a dry fealon, with a little girle, a daughter of his with him, wished that it would rain a good shower. The Maid hearing her father fay fo, out of her childifh fimplicity told him, She could eafily procure that for him. The Father wondring at the childs words, askt her, how could the do fuch a feat? O, (fayes fhc) I learnt that of my Mother : and added, That fhe could cafily caule it not onely to rain, but hail, and raife a great tempest, and that her mother learnt it of a Master she converst with ; and that whenfoever and whatfoever the required of him, was prefently perform'd; but that her Mother had firicily charged her to tell no body. The father being terrified at these things, askt her if the had ever feen this Mafter. The girle answered again, that the had feen many come in and go out, who her Mother told her, were their Masters and Loving Lords. Her father again demanded, if the could just then raife a flower or florm? She reply'd; I, if the had but a little water : He therefore brought her to the River, where calling upon this Master, the prefently caufed it to rain in her father's fields alone, and not in his neighbours, as he had commanded her. The man feeing that, bid her alfo make it hail, but fo, as but in one field which he thew'd her 3 this the prefently effected. And then being fully telolved his wife R 2 was was a Wi ch, he brought her before a Magiltrate, there convicted her of the crime, and burnt her; his daughter being put to hely exercises, and by facred means, was delivered from the power and wiles of the devil. Ibid.

IN the Town Fach, a Judge commanded his Scricants to apprehend a Witch, and bring him to execution: but they were fo annoyed with loathfome flincks, and flruck with fuch a terrour in the bufinefle, that they utterly defpaired of effecting it. The Judge (his name was Peter) infifting more carnefily upon the performance of his command, again exhorts them, that they would take courage and lay violent hands upon the Witch, for now the appointed time was come, wherein the detected crimes of this impious perfon muft be punified; by which encouragements, being animated to repel the fafeinations of the devil, the VVitch was taken, and brought to execution.

331: AT another place when a Witch was bound and brought to the Gallows top, the fpet in the face of the Hangman, and he prefently fell down d ad; in like manner the did by a fecond. But the third going about a little more warily, was yet to invenom'd by her breath, that all his face fwelled till he was thark blind with it, and a little after, he died of it.

332. What power the Devils have to afflict Brutes, Cattle, and all other creatures, and how they can raile florms and tempefts, you may find fufficiently laid open in the 14. & 15. chapters of the forecited Author: the examples are very horrible, nor do I think it neceffary to commemorate any more of them. The Hiftory of Job will evidence the fame thing, what is not onely the power, but how extream the malice of that evill Spirit.

333.

124

330.

Here were two brothers, to whom their Father left a competent eftate when he died, the one of them took upon him a Monaffick life, the other married, and fet up a common Inne; and most earnestly gaping after Riches, used all means possible to defraud, not onely his guefts, but their beafts by falle weights and Measures, and converghing their provender from before them. Whilft he thus ftrove to be rich, his eftate went to wrack on every fide, and the more he took care to heap up, the more and greater loffes he fultained. When his brother the Monk came to him to part the eftate with him according to his Fathers Will; he defited his brother that he would forbear profecuting him for the division of the goods at prefent, for he was poor and in a very low condition and notwithstanding that he used all means possible for the gaining of an effate, yet all the fraud he could use profited him nothing; when the Monk heard this, he laid ; O my Brother, if you order your Family fo unjuftly, 'tis no wonder that things go fo ill with you. For you keep fuch a guest that confumes all, and more than

Not lo Subut treed a we ed, and the loaking ton and with a and with a touncing c ad by this lealth, at beaten, at

I hemen there, J in the I to mentio fure, A when he could c cap. L.

you

tions,

there convicted of put to help the power and they were for fuch a terrour fung it. The upon the perat they would b, for now the ness of this imements, being Vitch was ta-rought to the , and he precond. But the enom?d by he d with it, and

, Cattle, and pross and temt 15. chapters tible, nor dol ... The Hills not onely the firit.

eft a comptk upon him i non Jane ; and poffible to de e weights and before them. rack on every re and greater ame to him a ill; he defined or the division y low condition for the gaining him nothing , if you orde go fo ill with and more than 117

and cunning delusions of Devils.

you can poffibly gather; and if thou wilt fee him, follow me into the bottom of the Cellar, and I will thew thee who confumes thy eftate, Whither when they were both come, the Monk by his adjurations, made the Devill that lay hid there, thew himfelf to his brother. And prefently a beaft of an immenfe bigneffe, and fo fat that, without much ado, he could not move himfelf, appeard, which when the Monk law, he faid, O what a gainfull Inne doft thou keep, and turning to his brother, faid, Behold that beaft thou haft pampered by thy fraud, for whatfoever thou fraudulently gotteft from any man, this ugly beaft devoured. Therefore hearken to me; Be faithfull and upright in thy dealing towards all men, ufe an equall measure, and defraud no body; and after four years I will come again, and then divide my Fathers effate with you. His Brother follows the Monks counfell, and as much as he went backwards in the world before, he now came on, and in a thore time had tuch experience of divine goodneffe, that he was Mafter of a great eftate. At four years end, came his brother the Monk, to fee what condition his brother was yet in, who received him with great alacrity, and told him he had followed his advice, defiring to fee the beaft now again, in which the Monk gratified his brother, and commanded the beaft that lay hid in the Cellar to appear, which when he came was to lean, his bones would fearce hang together. Then fayes the Monk to his brother, now it's time for this guest to get hence and seek another Host. But if thou shalt hereafter order thy affairs with the like Justice, thou shalt alwayes learn experience of the great bleffing of our great and good God.

Not long fince; fayes Bodinus, in Vallis (which is a name of the Suburbs of Laodunum) a certain Witch by her inchantments, treed a woman from her difeafe, who was most grievously afflicted, and thus the effected it. Falling down upon her knees, and looking towards the ground, the called upon the Devill very often, and with a loud voice, that he would cure the Woman; and pronouncing certain firange words, gave her a morfell of bread to eat, and by this means the woman recovered. Which kind of cure is plainly fuch, as if the fick woman had prayed to the Devill for health, than which it were better to indure the moft painful death. Damonomania, lib. 1. cap. 6.

Remember about 20. years ago, at Latetia, in a Noblemans houfe there, I faw a young man by often reciting certain French words in the prefence of many honeft people (which I think not good to mention at this time) make a feive dance, and move at his pleafure, And that he had a Familiar to help him is manifeft, for that when he wasgone, and another repeated the very fame words, he could effect nothing of that nature by it. Idem. Lib. 2. cap. 1.

125

334.

126

336.

337.

338.

339.

No Country-man (fayes the fame Bodinus) is ignorant, that if two Verfes out of the Pfalms be recited while the Milk is a churning, there will no butter be produced by any Art. I was at Chillis of the Valefians, when a boy ftanding at the maids heels, hindred the butter to come or gather: but fhe threatning curfes from God upon him, if he did not ceafe and remove his Verfes, made him fpeak fomewhat prepofteroufly, and backwards as 'twere, and then the Butter came after the had ipent almost a whole day about it. If you purbut a little Sugar into the milk, it will make no butter; for this proceeds from an antipathy in nature, and by the fame reason, if but a little Cyprian-braffe be cast into a Furnace of Iron it will never melt, but turn to as thes, and therefore the Forge-men when they kindle the fite, fee that there is none in the Furnace, nor any one near the Chimney.

There is a diabolicall art called Aaxlutopaulelar, or Ring Magick which is performed by putting a Ring upon a bowl of water. This a famous VV itcn, an Italian born, uled at Lutetia in the MDL XII. year of Chrift, muttering out with all fome kind of words, and by this conceit, gave anfwers aright to fome that confulted her : but most were deceived by it. Joachimus Camerensis tells us that Hieronymus the Stage-player, whose fon became Chancellour of Mediolanum, had a ring that spoke, or rather a Devill speaking in a Ring, which rightly rewarded the Master of it at last, for it caused him to be excommunicated and cursed. Bodinus, Demonom. lib. 2. cap. 1.

I Once faw a Phyfitian of Tolofa exercife 'Paßsuarra, or rod-Magick, and with a low voice murmure out fome (1 know not what) words, till the two ends of the rod met, and touch't each other. But when it profited nothing to the cure of the affected, he blamed their incredulity, and cutting it into pieces, he caufed it to be put about the necks of those that had the quartane Ague, for their remedy. Ibidem.

OF all wicked devices of this nature, none arrive to that community and pernicioufneffe, as that of reftraining new-marries people doth: This the common people call the binding of the Ligula, which boyes practife with impunity, and with high impudence, fome bragging of it. Not is this a new thing, for we read in Herodotus, that Amafis King of Agypt was fo bound in this nature, that he could not have to do with his VV ife Laodice, till with exorcifmes and folemn prayers he was freed. Paulus Amilius alfo tethifties in the life of Clotarus the fecond, that his Concubines ufed this trick against Hermamberga. Some Epicurean Philosophers laugh at this miracle, because these Artifts in knotting the Ligula that are abroad, make people wonder when they fee that they can by no means cure the fame. And therefore the Canon fayes thus, If at anytime wayes ju them, th tellion. or under dered by Toomas hu flinction, particular tet of Frig by the per performed Godistoi observed, do, and as bolical me

E Special words

enfes told tar, while 8 and that th H Pillavia Wasbroug lemy Lang that Art) is capie, dec whether to ipting the the man f woman, a or for as lo that there other, and and that t noit affee hould fer manely. for three child, A gated, de ugns of c laid, the hinder co lome that and the I WELE NOT thing; a

BLB

any

tions,

norant, that if the Milk is a Art. I was at aids heels, hing curfes from Verfes, made s as 'twere, and ole day about II make no bunnd by the fame rnace of Iron he Forge-men e Furnace, nor Ring Magiti owl of water. Luteria in the fome kind of one that conmu Camerenfo occame Chanther a Devil lafter of it a field. Bodinm, now not what reach other. d, he blamed ed it to be put for their reme to that comng new-marnbinding of the th high impufor we read in in this naturb till with extrmilas allo to methics all

and cunning delusions of Devils.

127

340.

any time by Witchcraft and forcery through the hidden, but alwayes just Judgment of God permitting, and the Devill preparing them, thy copulation is hindred, repair to God by humble conteffion. Our of which place we may note four or five Axioms, or undeniable politions. First, That copulation may be hindered by Witchcraft, which all Divines unanimoufly confirm, and Thomas himfelf upon the fourth book of Sentences, in the 24th diflinction, where he faith; That a man may be reftrained in that particular, as to one woman, but not otherwife; and in his laft chapter of Frigid things. The fecond is, That it is done occultly, but by the permiffion of God in just Judgment. The third, That it is performed abfolutely by the Devill. The fourth, That in this cafe God is to be repaired to in Fafting, which laft head is chiefly to be observed, least those that are troubled with these things (as many do, and as the Devill defires and intends they fhould) run to Diabolical means for remedy.

Specially it is flrange, that little boyes by pronouncing fome words, fhould be able moft exquifitely to perform this inchantment. I remember Riolew, general Embaffadour to the Blefenfes told me, that a little boy was feen tying this knot under his har, whileft Matrimony betwixt two was celebrated in the Church, and that the boy being feized on, escaped with the knot. Whileft at Pistavium I acted as Vice-Procurator in the year 1567, there was brought a cafe before me of this nature; which when I told tomy Landlady, a very vertuous woman, the (as if most skill'd in that Art) in the prefence of Jacobus Bauvafius an Attorney in the caufe, declared there were above fifty wayes of tying this knot, whether to tyc a married man, or a woman onely, that the one defpifing the other's infirmity, might run after adultery, but that the man for the most part was bound, but feldom and hardly the woman, and that they might be bound for a day, a year, or ever, or for as long as the knot thould laft, unleffe it were diffolved. That there was a knot, whereby one might be brought to love another, and not to have reciprocal returns, but extream hatred; and that there was another way to make two love one the other most affectionately; but if they came to lye together, that they fhould fcratch with their nails, and beat one the other most inhumanely. As I heard at Tholofa, there were two thus illigated for three years space, and then reconciled, and had a very fine child. And (which I most admire) the woman whiles the was ligated, declared the had little rumours like warts role upon her as figns of children the thould have had, but for this ligature. She faid, there were knots to be made to binder procreation, and not hinder copulation, that there were men could not be ligated, and fome that might before marriage, and fome after; but those few, and the Urines of men might be Hopt by this trick, whereof they were not few that dyed. I found a poor boy almost dead with this thing; and the man that did the fear, lool'd again the kner, and fo gave:

gave his urine vent. And not many moneths after, this very Sorcerer dyed of a like ligature.

This mifchief proceeding to a community in the Countrey of the Pids, the chief Qualtor of Niortum, when a new-married wife accufed a Neighbour of hers for reftraining her husband, in the year of the VVorid, 1560, he caufed her to be call into a very loathfome prifon, threatening her the fhould never come thence till the man were loofed; a dafter two dayes the imprifoned woman gave leave to the married people to enjoy each othersbed; and when the Judge heard the man was freed, he freed the woman from prifon.

This is worthy our obfervation, That it paffes the skill and power of the Devil, or any of his Agents, to refirain mens fenfes, or bind others from eating or drinking, by intercepting their power or flomach; or deprive a man of the use of any member, fave only that fecter one, and fign of our virility, which in Germany they often deprive men of, by making them run up into their bellies. Sofprengerus tells of a man of Spira, who when he thought he had loft his premifes, fent for Physicians and Chirurgeons to tearch for them, who found no tear or wound at all; therefore he repair'd to the VVitch he had offended, and appeas'd her, and fo was cur'd. Alfo a Citizen of Ratisbone furnishes us with another example, of one who violently laid hold upon a VVitch, and threatening to flrangle her, compell'd her to loofe him from that nodus. All thefe Bodinus relates in chap. 1. of his fecond book.

343.

€

128

341.

342.

I Nfulanus, Abbot and Lord of the Norallians, who now is fent Ambafladour to Conftantinople by the King, and Polonus (who is alfo called Pruniskus) Ambaffadour for France, told me, that one of the greatest Kings of the VVorld being very defirous of the knowledg of the number of his years, and the time of his death, fent for Jacobius, a Sorcerer, who when he had ended Maffe, and confecrated the Hoft, commanded a first-born fon, or man-child of ten years old, who was provided for the purpole, to be beheaded prefently, and putting the head upon the Hoft, pronounced certain words, and inferibed fome characters not nect flary to be known by us; Then he ask'd the head, what he would have? which anfwered only two words, I fuffer violence. At this the King was inraged, and cryed, Take away the head; and prefently in that fury dyed. This ftory is very common in the Country, wherein it was acted, and very certainly reported, although there were onely five perfons prefent at the thing. These things thus writes Bodinas. mae lod ann cluop nonverow staduozna ner unight he loss marrisget and fome atter; but they,

Ace

king for h

with her he began:

the direct. with the f in every p the truth of himfelf w to oyntm KoBounce the Count dillant no manfaw nis, (in a and in a [Good Goo patty vani lorced fo light upor making t acculed lirate, wh the buline bufineffe,

niffe.

A Liof

ht, aneir

mailion t

not ice h

the gally

leen her h

te imme

Witches

sas muc

in him

alf all

conieffin

tions,

, this very Sa.

the Countrey of them a new-mating her husband, to be caff into a fild never cone yes the imprito enjoy each s freed, he freed

the skill at irain mens' in creepting the f any member, hich in Gensan into their bishe rhought he rgeors to feath fore he repair! and fo was curid her example, a chreatening m odus. All the

TO NOW IS OF Polonus (who is ... d me, that at ous of the know his death, for affe, and conian-child of a beheaded pro nounced centra to be known by ave ? which a s the King and prefently in the mary, whereas there were are, thus writes i

Filen

and cunning delusions of Devils.

Johannes Charterius, that wrote the Hiftory of Charls the VII. tells us how one Gailhelm. Edelinus, a Doctor of Sorbon, was condemned for Sorcery upon Christmas Eve, in the year, 1453, who confett he had often in the night-time been carried abroad to a great meeting of Magitians, where he alwayes renounced God, and ador'd the Devil in the fhape of a Goat, kiffing his posteriors.

Certain poor man, when his Wife often went forth in the night, and forth would remain the man knew not where, making for her excule to him, either that the went to ftool or bath with her neighbours; wherein when he had often difprov'd her, he began to suspect her chaility, and threatned to kill her, unleffe the directly told him where her haunt was. She being terrified with the fenfe of pretent danger, told the matter plainly, as it was, in every particular; and turthermore, that he might experience the truth of what the faid, promited him he thould fee, and go himfelf whither the uled to go. And to that purpole giving him an oyntment, wherewith they being both anointed, and the having pronounced fome words, the Devil immediately carried them from the Countrey of the Lochti, to the Burdegalenfian Sands (which are distant no lesse than fifteen dayes journey; or more); when the man faw himfelf in company with Magitians, Witches, and Devils, (in a humane, but horrid (hape) a thing very unufual to him, and in a firange Countrey, he began to bleffe himfelf, and fay, Good God, where are we now? At which words the whole company vanished. Then he understood that he was naked, and was forced fo to wander up and down the fields till morning, when he light upon/fome Countrey-man that fet him in his way. And fo making the beft thift he could, he returned to Lochium, where he accufed his Wife politively of all these things before the Magifirate, who commanded her to be apprehended : But the miligating the businesse as much as the could, contessed the most part of the bufineffe, and acknowledging her fault, returned from her wickedneffe.

A Lio fome few years fince, a woman of great quality at Lugdunum, role in the night, and taking a gally-pot out of her clofct, anointed her felf with it, muttering fome words withall; a ftallion that lay with her that night; obferving her, when he could not fee her, role to look for her; and when he found nothing but the gally-pot, taken with novelties and cutiofity, he alfo, as he had feen her before, anointed himfelf with the oyl that was in it, when he immediately found himfelf to be among a great company of Witches and Sorcerers in the fields about Lotharingia, whereat he was much amazed. But in the first place calling upon God to affift him, the whole company difappear'd; and he, finding himfelf all naked, returned to Lugdunum, accufed the Witch, who confeffing all the bufineffe, was burnt for it.

346.

Pa

129

345-

347. A Thing of the fame nature befell a Nobleman of Maldunum, who by fome words of a Milner, together with the initigation of his own curiofity, was induced to go amongft a company of Witches to fee fashions forfooth; but when he was among the thickess of them, an extream horrour feized of him, infomuch, that although he did not invoke Divine aid, the devil faid with a very loud voyce, Who is this that is fo fearful? And when he fought to depart their company, the Witches all vanished. And when he returned, he intended to discover the Sorcerers, but they fled for their fastery. Bodinus Dæmonom, lib. 2. cap. 4.

348.

TE read in Paulus Grillandus, a Lawyer of Italy, a man very well experienc'd in the facts of Witches and Sorcerers, That there was certain Country-man not far from Rome, in the year of the world, 1526. who when he faw his Wife rife naked in the night to anoint her felf, and that thereupon prefently the was gone out of his fight, and could not be found in the houfe, the next day provided himfelf of a good cudgel wherewith to belabour her fides, untill the thould tell him whither, and to what end the fo conveyed her felf last night, which the prefently doing, he pardoned her, upon condition that the would convey him amongst her fraternity. She the next day anointed both her husband and her felf, and then they were prefently mounted each of them upon a Goat, and fo prefently brought amongst the murster of Witches. Now his Wife had forewarned the man, he should by no means name God or Chrift, unleffe in fcorn and opproby to him : when they were thus in the croud, the wife appointed her husband to stand a little aloof till she had faluted the Prince of them, (who was most magnificently cloathed and guarded about with a great, ring of men and women; all honouring and waiting upon this their Lord) and that by fo doing, he should fee the whole of the businesse. When they had done thus, they began a ring-dance, (which is now taken up among the Countrey-people) that dancing backwards, they might not fee one the others faces : It may be to the intent they might not know, nor accuse one another, if perhaps they might be arraigned in the presence of one another, after: which Trifcalanus did, to whom Charls the Ninth gave leave and liberty, that he might discover his fellows. He told him, being in a great affembly of young men, That there were many there that adored and worshipped a Goat in their meetings, and kiffed his very posteriours (or arse-hole in plain English, if you will have it so). Then by reason his back was towards them, he not seeing them, they danced together, and the devils copulated together in men and womens shapes. After their dancing, the tables were covered and furnished with meat; the woman then moved the man to falute the Prince, and fitting down with the reft of the company to the table, feeing the table furnished with meat, he called for falt; and when falt was brought to the table, before he tafted any thing,

Here

I Maid that f Witches, tumetous, as foon as girle, beir whole but acculed by fire, THe fa

Valint Paul him of the that the m yearstince panyofV an oath to be faithfu ofmoftob ces to him ded them hould con icen min une fhe h the fruits CHIEDC FLOE fon for it, any reft ; of a Man Martinett tain tin & bla bia conveigh icand a r Wilth Sh

he

itions,

f Mildanum, who initigation of his wany of Witches the thickeft of th, that although very loud voye, ht to depart this the returned, has their fafety. B-taly, a man very and Sorcerets n Rome, in the Vife rife naked releasily the wa house, the new o belabour he what end the lo ing, he pardon m amongft he usband and be of them upon a er of Witches d by no mean to him: when er husband to of them, (whi at with a great iting upon this e whole of the a ring-dance)) that dancing It may be n her, if perhaps ersafter: which ive and liberty, eing in a great ere that adores kiffed his very ill have it fol t feeing them, gether in me s were covered the man to lahe company to called for fall, afted any thing

and cunning delusions of Devils.

13I

349.

350.

he faid grace, which being ended, prefently men, meats, and table vanished away, and he was left defolate alone, being very cold, and not knowing where he was; As foon as it was day, he came to / fome thepherds, of whom being asked, Whether he knew where he were? He answered, That he knew himself to be in the Beneventanian Earldom, in the royal command of the Pope. These things were done a thousand miles from Rome, from whence travelling, he was forc'd to beg his meat and rayment, and at length coming home upon the eighth day after, poor and lean, he apprehended his Wife; by whom many more being accused, and confessing the truth, they were all hanged.

There is in the fame Author, in the year 1535, that a young Maid in the Dukedome of Spoleto, of the age of thirteen, faid, that the was brought by an old woman into the company of Witches, and feeing the convention of them to be fo wondertully numerous, the cryed out, Bleffed God, what meaneth this? which as foon as the had pronounced, all vanifhed away; and the poot girle, being found early in the morning by a Shepherd, told the whole bufineffe to him, who bringing her home, the Witch was accufed by the Maid, and, being found guilty, put to death by fire.

He same Paulus Grillandus in his Book de Sortilegiis writeth, that being invited by a certain Nobleman to the Caftle of Saint Paul in the Dukedome of Spoleto, coming thither, he told him of three fage matrons, one whereof trufting in his promife that the might freely speak without danger, confelled that fifteen years fince, the was brought by a fage old Woman into the company of Witches, where the Devill being prefent, obliged them by an oath to renounce God their Creator, Faith, and Religion, and to be faithfull to him, and that with their hands laid upon a book of most obscure writing, healfo bound them to some folemn fervices to him in the night, and that they fhould whenever he commanded them upon Holidayes, or fet dayes, come whitherfoever he should conduct them ; the Devil on the other fide promifed to them mirth and felicity eternall : the confelled further that at that time the killed four men, many Cattle, and brought much hurt to the fruits of the Earth, and if it happened at any time that the came not to their meeting, without the were able to give good reafon for it, the was to vexed that the could neither fleep nor take any reft; when She came to their meetings, She heard the voice of a Man which called the Devill little Lord, and fometimes Mr. Martinetus; and as foon as ever She had anointed her felf with a certain unction, She mounted a Goat that flood ready at the door, and eld by the hair and tail; by which Goat She was fuddenly conveighed unto the great coverture of Beneventum, where She found a very great company of Witches and Inchanters. There when She had vow'd allegiance to the Devill, She danc'r, fate at S 2 Table,

Table, and laft of all, every Devill concopulated with her, or him they had to their peculiar protection; and when they had thus done, every one getting upon their own Devills, returned particularly, with the fame incredible fwittmefle that they came thither, and that alfo they did privately at home adore the Devill, when this was all conteft, and compared to the confeffions of two more there were many others accufed who acknowledged the crime, and together with their oyntments and powders, they were all burnt alive.

351.

352.

353.

132

Lso in the third book of Tarquamadas of Spain, amongst others A you have this more modern ftory. That a Magitian being very importunate, at last perfwaded a companion of his that he would be a most happy man, if he would but be of his Faith, and come to their meetings. And when he had given him his confent, he on a night took him by the hand, and speaking some words, they were both carried through the Ayre to a great company of Wirches in which an incredible company of both men and women compaffed a Throne, whereon fate the greateft of the Devills in the thape of a Goat, to whom all of them went to kiffe en la parte majuzia quatenta (which, to those that understand Spanish, is those parts which are not fit to be named in English). When this new-comet faw this, he faid to his companion that he could no longer patiently behold thefe things, and prefently calling upon God with a loud voice, they all disappeared with a great tempeft and Whirlwind, and left him alone there, who was three whole years before he could reach his own countrey again.

Bodinus alfo writeth, That Joanna Halveria, botn at Verberium in the Countrey of the Compedeenstans, did confesse, that by the decree of the Council, by the confirmation of the Judge Sanfisanus his Mother was condemned to the fire, and that he being twelve years of age, was offered by his Mother to the Devil in form of a black man, with fable appartel, boots and spurs, and a sword at his fide, having a black horse at the door, and using words to this purpose; Behold my daughter, which I have espoused to thee; and to her, Behold thy Love, in whom thou shalt be happy. And that from that time the renounced God and her Religion, and that he lay with her, as men use to do with women, and the found no difference twist him and other men, but that his seed was cold, and that the Devil once asked her, Whether the would be gravidated by him, which the refused, lib, 2, cap. 7.

WEE E find in writing that at a great Seffions for examination of the Potezanian Witches, held by Andrew Fertias the Kings Deputy over the Laodunenfians, where divers were burnt, out of whole confeffions fome things follow. Margaret of Bremontinus Wife of Noeles Lavertus, walking with Mary his Mother the Munday next after into the convent at Franquifanum near Lognium, which which fi her legs Sheanalt Roberta, Gailelina of huma with ther and that i her twice he fpent v things, co they were cold.

VV

both men tually acc lay with a tolleagues good men. the ftake Ratisbon 1 they had b that not a ! wickedacf Devillina many can them, th Devill be did very c clear day, ourn icen ousbands. and there CO DO EXC who ki de Sortileg Rame, in a nilance of every for the Hifte copulate

he lay in ritions,

with her, or hin en they had the cturned particetry came thirthe, he Devill, when ns of two monedged the crime, s, they were all

, amongli other Magitian beis of his that h his Faith, and m his confeat, it me words, the pany of Wircha wenten compilills in the there a parte majacili , is those pin this new-come onget patient od with a logi d Whirlwith cars before h orn at Verbenia effe, that byte Judge Sanfo he being twels il in form di g words to the ponied to the be happy. An ligion, and die nd fie funds wed was cold and d be gravidati for examination infress Firms the ers were both orer of Bresses his Mother the m near Logician which

and cunning delusions of Devils.

133

354.

In

which ftandeth in a Meadow, her Mother putting a Broom betwixt her legs, and speaking some words (here omitted) fuddenly both She and her Mother were carried to a place where they found Joanna Roberta, Joanna Guillimina, and Maria the Wife of Simon Agnus Guilelina, the Wife of one Grußus, with whom were fix Devills of humane shape horrid to behold, &c. And after some dancing with them, the Devils lay with them, and had to do with them; and that one that took her to dance with him, after he had falated her twice, lay with her for half an hour together, and that the feed he spent was very cold. Joanna Guillemina affents with her in these things, confessing that it was very true, that at least half an hour they were in copulation, and that the feed so wery cold.

VE read also in the 16th book of Johannes Meyerus who most accurately wrote the History of Flanders, That in the 1459th year of Chrift, there was a very great company of both men and Women burnt in the Town Atrebantium, who mutually acculed one another, that they met in the night, danced, and lay with the Devill. Likewife Jacobus Sprangerus, and four of his colleagues alfo tell us, that from the mouths of many wife and good men, they have been confirmed that many Witches had at the flake in Germany confeffed, and in particular at Constantia and Ratisbon in the year 1485, that the Devill lay with them after they had by his initigation denied both God and all Religion. And that not a few had repented, and turned off themfelves from that wickedneffe, and confeffed that whilft they were Witches the Devill had often to do with them. It is written likewife that very many came, and freely acknowledged, though no man accufed them, that they had been guilty formerly of commerce with the Devill being Witches, to these things Spangeus adds, that Witches did very oft copulate with the Devill, in the fight of the Sun, or clear day, and did ftrip themselves in fields and Woods, and were often feen naked in the fields, and were fometimes taken by their husbands in the manner with devils which they conceiv'd to be men, and therefore they fet upon them with Swords whereby they could do no execution upon them. Paulus Gralandus, a Lawyer of Italy (who knew very many VVitches) doth declare in his book de Sortilegiis that he was commended by an Abbot of St. Paul's at Rome, in the year 1526. in the Moneth of September, to take cognifance of three Witches, who among ft other things, confeffed that every forcereffe had a particular Familiar to commerce withall, in the Hiltory of St. Bernard, we read there was a Witch who ufually copulated with the Devil; her Husband not perceiving her, though he lay in the fame bed with her.

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK Baden-Württemberg

N the flourishing Garden of Antonius concerning Turquomeda of Spain. I found another Hiftory concerning a noble Spanilb woman. who related that the was induced by an old Witch when the was eighteen years of age, and from that time the had to do with the Devil; which was burned alive, and unpenitent, being a Cerdenate. The fame doth declare that another did repent, and was put into a Monastery. Adamus Martinus the Laodunensian Proctour of Confession, told me (faith Bodin) that he had a Witch of Biebra (that is a Village two miles distant from Laodune) in question, in the jurifdiction of D. Boan, the Captain of the Verumandians, in the year 1556. who was first condemned to be hanged, and afterwards to be burnt; but the was delivered alive to the fire by the fault of the Hang-man, or rather the just Judgment of God, who did fo demonstrate, that the punishment should be equall to the offence, neither was there any mischievous act that did more deferve fire, Therefore the confelied, that Satan (whom the called her companion) was wont to have to do with her, and that fhe did feel his cold feed.

356.

357.

ms bpaz

dard brid

1 355.

WW Hen I was at the great meetings of Pillavius in the year 1567. performing my office amongst the under servants of the general Proctour, I took two filthy and beggarly Magittans, which did beg alms at a rich mans house; who being denied, did cast in Witchcrafts, and all the houshold being ariven into fury, died mad. Damonum, libro 3. capite 1.

Here was a crafty Taylor at Lutetia a Magitian, who onely touching with his hand, did cure a Quartane Feaver, but he was in no wife cured that would not believe that he could cure him. And there was a certain Italian old woman at Audes curing difeafes in the year 1573. who when the was inhibited by the Judge to cure any more discases, called a Court of Parliament, her cause was pleaded Eloquently, and likewife Learnedly, by D. Johannes Baltruus, Lawyer to plead the cafes of the Parliament; fellow officer with the Lord of Matratius, and my Countreyman; but it is proved that the means by which fhe cured, did difagree with nature, as with the Brains of a Cat, which is poyfoned ; the head of a Crow, and other fuch like things; which things do plainly convince, that it was not done by the firength of the excellent Oyl, or of the healthfull Oyntment (which many good men, and lovers of the poor do make) but by means beyond Nature, or by charms of heal-Ing.

Fodocus

Disting the bre, man whic witchcraft when (as) teld the m perion, th thould rea nquire it ny many m healing, w Sie laying bur, the l atter the fi the way I her wicked

itions,

g Turquomeda di Spanifewoman ch when fne was to do with the ng a Cerdenane. ind was put into an Proctour of h of Biebra (that ition, in the b. tans, in the year and afterwards by the fault of who did fo de. the offence, nare deferve fitt, called her comthe did feel his

vius in the yeu e under fervans garly Magituas ing denied, di uven into furj

ian, who only Feaver, but is could cure him es curing difaby the Judge n hent, her case by D. Johann hisfellow office but it is provid with nature, n head of a Grow, ly convince, the r Oyl, or of the lovers of the pow charms of bal

Fodoca

and cunning delusions of Devils.

Jodocus Darmudanus doth write in Praxi crim. cap. 37. that there was a Witch at Bruga in Flanders, having the greateft repute of Holineffe, because the could cure innumerable difeases, but first the did take care for this, that they thould believe that the could cure them, afterwards the did make known fasting dayes, and commanded that Pater noster thould be faid divers times, and that they thould go to Compostella at St. James's, or to St. Arnolds, but at length the was convinced of many Magicall charms, and defervedly punished.

TOhanna Harvilleria, which (as we faid before) was caft alive into the fire, conteffed that the caft in charms, that the might kill a man which had beaten his daughter, but he having excelled her witchcrafts, suddenly felt pain in his loyns, and his whole body. But when (as the was greatly renowned for the fame of her Art) it was told the man that the grief could not come to him from any other perfon, then the promifed that She would work means whereby he thould recover, and took him into her cuftody: to that end She did require it earneftly of the Devill by intreaties, and She did labour by many means (which it doth not concern us to deferibe) for his healing, which Satan answered it could not be done. And therefore She faying to him, that for that caufe he fhould come no more to her, the Devil answered her, that he would not come. A little after the fick man died, and the Witch hid her felf, but although the was hid, the is found, and fuffered delerved punithment for her wickedneffe.

D Odin writeth that he faw a certain Arvernian Captive at Lute-Bea, in the year 1579, fometimes curing Horfes and men, with whom was found a very large book, full of the hairs of Horfes, Cartel, and other beafts of all colours. This man if at any time he caft his Charms on a horfe, he confulted, and having the hair of that fohe did cure him, that he might deliver his Witchcrafts to another, but he took no money, and if he did take it, he affirmed that he did not cate for it : And therefore he walked about in a very old Caffock, replenished with a thouland patches. But when once he had caft his Charms upon the horfe of a certain Noble man, being asked, he cured him, transferring his enchantments upon the fervant of the fame man : he answered, those that came again to have him cured, that they must know of the Noble man, whether he had rather lofe his fervant, or his Horfe ? In which thing the Noble man being in doubt, and ftriving to be advifed; the fervant died, and the Magitian was apprehended.

Iheard

135

358.

359.

T Heard from the Lord Turnerius the Aurelienfian Counfellour Concerning Hulinus Parvus the Aurelienfian Materiarius. This man by chance being deadly afflicted by Magick, did take care that a man thould be fent for, (who promifed that he would drive away all dileafes, being suspected of the Magick Art) that he might cure him. But he answered that he could not reftore health rothe man, unlesse he should transfer the difease to his fon then fucking. The Parent contented to the murder of his fon, to obferve the thing, that the malice of Satan might fo much the better be difcovered. The Nurfehaving called it to remembrance, fled away with the child, while the Magirian was touching his Father to cure him. The Father being cured by his touch, the Magitian doth require the child to be brought, which being not found, he fuddenly cryed out, I am undone, where is the child ? and when he was going away he had fcarce put his foot out at the dore, when the Devill kill'd him prefently, and his dead carcafe was as black, as if any one had dyed it with a black colour on fet purpofe.

Heard alfo (faith the fame man) in the Judgment of a Witch at Nauntes, (which was accufed of cafting in charms to her neighbour) that the Judges commanded that the fhould touch the woman that was troubled with the charm, which is done very often by the Judges of Germany in the Imperial Camera; fhe refufed, but feeing her felf to be compelled, the cried out, I am undone, and together touched the woman that was affl fted with the enchantment: the recovered, and the Witch being dead fell down, her dead carcaffe being condemned to the fire. I received the ftory from one of the Judges that was at the Judging of him.

363.

362.

136

361.

I Heard alfo at Tholofa, that a certain Student of Burdeaux, faid to his friend, being very fick of a quartan, that he would give his Feaver to one of his enemies; but he anfwering, That he had no enemy; he faid, Give it therefore to thy fervant. At length, when it was a doubt of confeience to him to do it, the Magitian faid, Give it me; Then the fick man confenting, the Magitian dyed, being opprefied with the Feaver; and the fick man revived. Bodim, lib. 3, tap. 2.

364.

But this is no news, and unheard of; For we read in Gregory the Turonensian, lib. 6. cap. 35. that the Wise of King Childe. bert, as foon as the heard that her fon dyed by a mischievous act, in her feminine fury the commanded a great number of Witches to be apprehended, burned, and put upon wheels; which acknowledged, that the King's Son was killed by them, that they might fave Mummo, a great Magistrate: Therefore Mummo being taken, and put on a horfe, he faid, That certain oyls and potions were given him by the Witches, to procure (as he thought) the favour of Prin to tell t King co tharp 1 hands, without

But

Magitian knew that fan Win heavilya fwords : will cure with a hu fick wom to concer which h done, he holding t up in hon with othe the fire : to Satan, a was tecon

)Geri The place at . pirit did which he Who durft bitants, be which he teither for itudent, leen in th ole his an woman m which die Lufitanus ground fr End the t digged u whitl-w seatofth in the ne

of

itions,

ide Counfellou ateriarise. Thu , did take can he would drive k Art) that he ot reftore healm to his fon the ns fon, to ob. much the better embrance, fiel ling his Fathe , the Maginin or found, he ful and when h he dore, when e was asblad ut on let put of a Witch a s to het neigd touch the wodone very often the refuied, he undone, and to h the enchandown, her del ftory from et would give had hat he had a int. At length , the Maginn , the Maginn ck man revive.

read in Green c of King Culto nifchievens at ber of Windo which acknow that they might furnes being the and potions was aght) the faust

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

of Princes; and he commanded the hangman that did torment him, to tell the King, that he perceived no grief from him. Then the King commanded that he fhould be firetched on the wrack, and fharp points of iron to be put between the nayls of his feet and hands, as it is the cuftome of punifhment in the Eaft, which was without the breaking of members; the pain was intolerable. After fome dayes being carried to his men of Burdeaux, he dyed.

D Ut Experience doth teach us, that a difease happening by a Baaural manner, not by witchcraft, cannot be taken away by Magirians. Quasitor Sprangerus doth bring an example ; when he knew that there was a Counterfeit Magitian among the Infprugenfian Witches of Germany, who feeing his poor neighbour to be most heavily afflicted, as if her bowels were inceffantly pierced with fwords : I will try, faith he, if thou art troubled with charms, and will cure thee. Then poured melted lead into a round iron thing with a hole in the midft, being full of water, and putting it to the fick woman, and uttering certain words, which it doth pleafe me to conceal, he perceived certain Images in the hardened lead, by which he knew that the was afflicted with charms. This being done, he took the husband of the woman with him, and both beholding the upper post of the door, they found a waxen Image fet up in honour of a victory, at whole two fides two Needles did flick, with other duft, grains, and Serpent's bones, all which he caft into the fire : But the woman, when the had given her foul for a pledg to Satan, and the Magitians, to whom the had gone for her health, was recovered.

Gerius Terrerius, a most learned Physician, when I was at Tholo Ba, hired handsome houses, and scituated in a very good place at Burfa, for very little, in the year 1558, because an evill spirit did trouble the Inhabitants of them, being not right owners; which he did no more care for, then Athenodorus the Philosopher, who durst dwell in a house forfaken by the Athenians, and the Inhab tants, because of an empty spirit : But when he heard that thing which he never believed, that he could not go to the Cellar fafely, neither fometimes take reft, having admonished Lusitanus a certain Student, to be in the City, who did exhibit hidden things to be feen in the nail of a little boy, he caufed that this Student should use his art : But a girle full of knowledge, faid, That she faw a woman most exactly adorned with most pretious chains and gold, which did bear a torch in her hand to a certain pillar; and therefore Lusitanus answered the Physician, that he should take care that the ground should be digged in the Cellar at the pillar, that he might find the treasure. The Physitian rejoycing, commanded it to be digged up. But when he thought the treasure was almost found, a whirl-wind arifing extinguished the light, and going out of the vent of the Cellar, brake fourteen foot of the battlements of the walls in the neighbouring houses, part whereof fell together into the porch

BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK 366.

137

porch of the dore, part into the vent of the Cellar; part upon a woman carrying water, whole water-pot was broken. There was nothing ever after heard of the Spirit. Lafitanus the day after, being more furely certified of the whole matter, faid that the fpirit carried away the treasure, and he wondred because it did hurt the Physician, who after two dayes related the History to me. These things were done on the fifteenth day of December, in the year 1558, the Heaven being fair and clear as it is wont to be in Haleyon dayes. And we at the fame time faw thorough the battlements of the next house that were cast down, and the porch broken to the Shop. Bodin Damonomania, Lib. 3. cap. 3.

367.

138

M Elanthon doth bring a Hiftory very like to this: Ten men were overwhelmed by the ruine of the Tower Magdeburg, when they did dig to find treafure; which Satan had shewed them. Gregorius Agricola in his Book de Spiritibus subterraneis writeth, that at Annaberg, in that ruine, which is called the Town of Roses, there was a spirit in the shape of a Horse that killed twelve men, and made them withdraw from the mine full of Silver, which Magitians found by the help of Satan.

368.

Heard of a certain Lugdanensian, in the Temple of the Virgin Mary, that there was Campellanus of Lutetia, who with his companions revealed the treasure of Arcolius near Lutetia by Magick-Art: but when they thought to have the Cheft in which it was hidden, it was carried away with a Whirl-wind, but part of the wall fell upon him, by which he was made lame for the whole term of his life. And when the Noribergensian Priest had found the treasure by the help of Satan, and long ago was about to open the box, the house was abolished with a fall.

369.

Heard also from a Lugdunensian practitioner in the Law, that he with his companions went in the night, that they might feek out a treafure by uttering Conducations, and when they began to dig, they heard a voice as it were of a man, which was put on the wheel, most horribly crying to the thieves : fo they were turned to flight : but evill spirits in the very same moment pursuing them, flew them even to that house from whence they came, and they entered it with so great a noise that the Host thought it had thundered, and from that time he fwore that he would never feek after treasure. Bodin.

370.

Bodin also proves by an example that forcerers can bewitch mens eyes, and move laughter, and make the spectators altonished concerning Trifealanus that Magitian, which said of a certain Curat, all the Parish Priests being present; See ye that Hypocrite, who feigning to bring a Register, doth bring play-papers! Then the Curate willing to shew that he brought a Register, he seemed to himself himfeli to them of accor after, g nefle of lade me thole w ter caft tee a m

T^{He}

but an a

lar or C cerefs w lick all bowels her pai were di unleffe gens wr

I Heard there w tain work that were who was and the found, t

Reme times at cMa be flain, to hang with pt infer;)

Obann clared of S. Prothat his ing cross word for word for could far comma

BLB

tions,

s part upon e cn. There was dayafter, being the fpirit car. t did hart the to me, Thele r, in the year s wont to be faw thorough ft down, and anie, Lib.

his: Ten men Magdeburg, (hewed them, writeth, that of Rofes, there live men, and which Magiti-

of the Virgin ith his compaia by Magick which it was t part of the or the whole had found the ut to open the Law, thathen night feek on a began to dig on the wheel, ned to flight: m, flew then ntered it with ed, and frea free treature.

can bewire peGators also id of a certain at Hypocrite apers? The the feemedo binder

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

himfelf to have play papers, and whofoever were prefent, feemed to themfelves to fee papers, fo that the curate caff away his book of account, and went away afhamed. But others coming a little after, gathered up the Regifter book, being freed from that likeneffe of Papers : by which thing it was manifeft that Satan did delude men in many things, and also bind faft every ones eyes. For those which were not prefent at the former action, when the forceter caff his delufions before the eyes of those that were prefent, did ice a true book of account, when others on the contrary did perceive but an appearance of papers, &cc.

The Germanes being about to fearch, what Witch had made a horfe feeble and decaying, did draw the bowels of another horfe to certain houfes, and not entring the gates, but a Cellar or Cave under ground, did burn thofe bowels. Then the Sorcerefs which had committed that evil, feeling the pain of the Collick all within; She runneth fireight way to the houfes, where the bowels were burn'd, that fhe might ask for a burning cole; and her pain did ceafe. But if the doors were not opened, the houfes were darkened, ringed with horrible thunder, and threatned ruine, unleffe thofe that were within would open the door: which Sprangerus writeth, that he obferved, and faw in Germany.

I Heard from D. Antonius Lonanius, the King's general Legate, that there was a Sorcerer at Ribemont, who having pronounced certain words, did difcover another by a fieve. All the names of those that were fulpected were brought, and when the name of that man who was in the fault was brought, the fieve did move unceffantly, and the Magitian acceffary to the fame fault, came, which being found, the Sorcerer was condemned. Bodin lib. 3. cap. 4:

Remember, that D. Bodin the King's general Procurator, fometimes related to me, When all his cattel remained in a Village at Moldena, that it was told his Wife, that a certain beaft mult be flain, which here it doth not pleafe me to declare; and he ought to hang it with the feet upward under the threshold of the stable, with pronouncing certain words (which it is not needfull here to infert); this being done, there did none of his cattel perish. Idem. ibid.

Johannes Martinus performing his turn of Ruler of Laodunum, declared to me, that when he was to try a Witch by the Authority of S. Proba, (for the had tormented a Mafon with fo great ficknefs, that his head did hang down almost between his legs, his body being crooked, which evill he did fulpect to come to him from the forcereffe) the Judg having regarded it well, he commanded, that word should be brought to the Witch, that the by no other means could fave her life, then by healing the Mafon. And therefore the commanded a fwathing band to be brought home by her daughter; T 2 the 371.

372.

373.

374.

139

the calls upon the Devill, cafting her countenance on the ground the muttered certain charms before them all, and delivering the iwathing band to the Mafon, the gave commandment that he thould be wathed in a bath, and that which was thut in the fwathing band, thould be put into the Bath with thefe words: Get thou gone in the Devills name. She taid that there was this and no other incans of recovery. Thefe things being done, the Mafon was cured. But yet before those things were feen in the Bath, the being willling to know what was in the fwathing band (which the had forbidden to be done) they found three little corns in it : But the Mafon while he was in the bath, perceived as it were three great fithes in it, when he came forth of it, although they did feek them very diligently, yet neither the fith, nor the arm was found. The forcerefie was burned alive, and remained without repentance, Islem, lib, 3, cap. 5.

375.

WE read in borto Antonii de Tarquamedia, lil. 3. of a certin Magitian, who faid to a ruftick man, whom he faw bitten by a mad-dogg, That he was one that delivered from harm, that he might not lofe his life. And when he prick'd his nofe thrice to let forth blood, he was cured.

376.

C A alus Martinus, Governour of Laodunum, being certified, that a poor woman in the valley (that was the name of the Laodunenfian Suburbs) was bewitched by a Sorcerefs her Neighbour, and taking piry of her, he threatned death to the Witch, unleffe the took away the difeafe from her Neighbour. She fearing, promifed to heal her; and therefore the came to the beds feet, looked fteadfaftly on the Earth, joyned her hands, called on the greateft Devil with a loud voice; afterwards renewed her prayers, repeating fome unknown words, and delivered a cruft of bread to the fick perfon, which in the fame moment began to recover. This being done, the Governour returning home, did appoint that the thould be apprehended, and be burned as foon as might be; but the was not feen in those parts from that time. Idem, ibid.

377.

VVE fhall bring a fresh example from an honourable man, President of Vitriacus Francus, who was affigned to all the greatest meetings of Bruss, in the year, 1577. When we wanted his help, I did earnestly follicite him, that we might affist each other in the publick burden, left he should go out of his place before the States were difmissed in the was fent for by him, and was made his heir, he thenceforth was fick five or fix years, his members failing him, and therefore his father being advertised, that there was a man in Flanders, who could cure his fon, went hither prefently: The Sorcerer unfolded the discase of the fon (which he had never feen) to the Father, and fent him away into Lussian to another Magirian (whose name he told him) living in the King's Court.

Court

where

to fper

Noblen

them w

fell into meantin

encellant

itions,

on the groun delivering the adment that he hut in the fineewerds: Gardia his and no othe failon was corel. the being the failon was corel. the being the failon was corel. the being the ch fhe had he it : Burthe Mocre three group y did feek then was found. The put repentance,

3. of a ciril m he faw binn m harm, thath sole thrice to be being certifie, e name of the els her Neighthe Witch, u She fearingbeds feer, looon the greast rayets, teperread to the fid This being that the thesid but the wa nourable mu affigned to it, hen we wante his place be e had a certain him, and was ars, his mendvertifed, chr hy went hither on (which he to Laftania p in the King' Certain

BLB

and cunning delasions of Devils.

Court. The Father bearing this patiently, went into Lusitania, where the Magirian faid to the Father (before he did onely proffer to speak); Friend, thy fon shall be cured in a short time, go into France, thou thalt find a certain man named M. Benedictus, towards Nouiodanam, about 20 miles from thy houle, (but there are many of the fame name) this man fhall cure thy fon. And therefore the Father wondring that he fould undertake fo great travail, that he might feek that afar off, which was near, took courage, and went to M. Benedictus. But he faid to the Father, Theu haft fpent very much labour going into Flanders, and Lusitania, that thy fon might bereftored, Go, command him to come to me, I am hc, that will healhim. The Father answered to these things : Now he hath not gone out of his bed for above thefe 5 years, and hach not truly the leaft faculty of moving in him. But at length, with no little trouble, the fick perfon was brought thither, and he was ealed in part, but yet he was not long well. Idem. ibid.

Acobis Sprangerus the Commissioner, to enquire after the crimes of Magicians, by the fame argument doth write, that he faw a Bithop in Germany, who being very fick, he knew by an old witch, that he was fick by witchcraft; neither was there any other way to recover his health, then that the fame witch fhould perifh by enchantment, who had caft the charme upon him. The Bifhop wondring, fent with all speed to Rome to the Pope Nitolans, V. that he might get leave to be cured by this meanes. The Pope, which did love him fingularly, did grant his request with this fimall fentence, that of two evils, he fhould flye the worft. The Letters Patents being brought, the Witch faid, Seeing that it pleafeth the Fope and the Bilbop, the would perform it. So in the middle of the night the Bifhop was reftored ; but the Sorcerefs which had bewirched him, fell into the fame difease from which he was freed. But in the meantime, that Sorcerefs, which dyed, would never confider, but unceffantly committed her felf to Satan, to recover her health.

IN the field of Poiliers in France, in the year 1571. Charls the eleventh King, after dinner commanded, that Tvifealanus (whom he had pardoned, that he might difclose the partakers of his fault) thould be brought to him. He confessed before the King, and a great affembly of his Nobles, the manner by which Sorcerets are conveyed, their dancings, facrifices offered to Satan, deteftable copulations with Devils, having fhapes of men and women: Moreover, he added, That dust was taken by many, with which they killed men, cattel, and fruit. Every one admiring at these his fayings, Caspar Colligniss, Admiral of France, (for he by chance was prefent) (aid, That a youth was apprehended in the field of Poistiers, fome moneths before, being accused concerning the death of two Noblemen, he confessed, that he was their fervant, and he faw them with dust cast into the houses, and the corn, faying these words; 337 words : A curfe on that fruit, on that boufe, on that Region: And therefore he having gotten this duft, took it, and caft it into the bed where thole two Nobles did lye; fo both were found dead in the bed, but fwelling, and very black. The Judges did difcharge the boy. Then Trifcalanus hearing that, difcovered allo many things of that kind. But it may be believed, if the King (whole body otherwife had the firongelt joynts and complexion) had commanded this Prince of Magitians, and his other followets, to be burned together, that God would grant a longer and more bleffed life to him for thefe Judgments. For the Word of God is alwayes manifeft unto him, that he who quitteth a man worthy of death, doth return his deferved punilitment on himfelf; as the Prophet faid to King Achab, That he, becaufe he had fhewed favour to a man that did deferve death, fhould dye. Ibid.

379:

378.

141

380.

IT is manifest unto all men, that the man of Rochell, who was wounded to death, of whose health all Chirurgions did despair, was to ordered by the help of a certain Magitian, that he could walk and speak some dayes; indeed Satan, and not any other, did bear him, that he might shew his power to the Magitians. Itid.

381.

Joachimm Camerariss doth declate in his book, de natura Damonum, When by chance a certain Butcher went by a Wood in the night, he heard a noile, and dancings; and therefore having fought the thing diligently, coming, he faw filver cups, which things, (as foon as the Sorceters and Devils were feparated,) prefently the Butcher took, and the day after brought them to the Magiffrate: fo they, whole marks were in the Cups, did accufe others, being fummoned to the Court, and were all defervedly punithed.

382.

Here is another more excellent example of that execution, which was made at Pillavium, in the year, 1564. the hiftory of which execution 1 learned as well from many in the fame place, as also from Salvertm, Prefident of the people of Poiltiers, (who was then fent for to hear the Judgment with Daventonius the Prefident of Poilliers, with other Judges); and all in that region know it. Three men with one woman being Sorcerers, were condemned to be burned alive together, when they were proved guilty of the death of very many men and cattel; dust being brought to them, as they did conteffe, by the help of the Devil fornithing them, which they hid under the ground of Sheep cotts, and the threshold of houses. But they declared, That they were wont to go thrice to the greatest meeting, whicher innumerable Magitians came together to a certain crois-way where Feafts are folemnized, which did afford them the use of an Image; there was before them a great black hee-Goat, speaking to those that were prefent with humane reason, that they flould leap all into the circuit of his embracements; and then

I Read Advis Lasdauum near Leg tered, w furnifhed whole na ing killed bad count terwards the duft e meet in th ing of nig were can Boy

Witchl

caule her

Baden-Württemberg

every

and cunning delusions of Devils.

t folks,

Region; And it into the bei

nd dead in the discharge the many thirty

vie body other

minindelinis

burned the

ed lifeyohm

aves manifelt

eath, doch re-

rophet faid m

to a man the

tell, who was

is did defpair,

OC any other

he Maginan

tars Demonstry

in the night

ing lought the

h things, (a

prefently dt

e Magiltran

others, beng

hat execution . the hifter

ie fame place

iers, (who was the Prefident

now it. That red to be burk

the death of

m, as they de hich they his

i boules. Be the greated

ther to a co-

id affordities

eas black hos-

ne realon, that Kints; and the

BLB

STIT

illhed.

that he cooli @

every one with a burning candle kifs his hinder-parts : This being done, the Goat was confumed with fire, of whole aftes every one took, that therewith they might kill the Ox of an enemy; this man's Sheep; that man's Horfe; that they might torment this man with feebleneffe, that man with death. Laft of all, the Devil with a terrible voice did thunder out these words; Revenge your felves, or flay: So every one did return by the help of the Devil the fame way that they came. The Prefident Salvertus, a most vertuous man, faid moreover, that it did appear from antient acts; for Magitians were condemned for the fame caufe 100 years before, and by the like confessions; and that it was done in the same place at the fame crofs. Two of these did repent, and two dyed in their obstinacy.

Read alfo a Judgment against the Sorcerers of Potezana, which Adrianus Ferress the King's general Vicar imparted to me at Laodunum. In it their confession is after this manner; That they near Legnium at the Trenquifanian prilon, certain words being utrered, were carried away with brooms, and there found others furnished with brooms ready at hand, and with them fix Devils, whole names are kept. After that they had forfaken God, they being killed, adored the Devils in humane shape, but yet having very bad countenances; and danced, having them in their hands : afterwards the Devils had to do with the women but shey required the duft to kill cattel : Laftly, it was appointed, that they thould meet in the fame place eight dayes after, on Monday at the begining of night; and when they had tarried there three hours, they were carried back.

Q Ovinus the Ruler of Galick, being fent Ambaffador to Biturgium Dby name, among the Blefenfrans, affirmed, that there was a Witch burned, he being Judge, whom her daughter accused, because her Mother had brought her to the meeting, and gave her to be inftructed by the Devil; She among other wickedneffe confeffed, that the danced in the circuit of the Goat, and at length the related the feveral gestures of the multitude at the last time, and in what manner they made use of the dust. This man faith, that he had a child killed by her, another a horle ; and he, a tree. But one being found to have done nothing from that time, received many firokes on the foles of the feet, and was derided by all others ; She alfo added, That it did behove them to have fresh powder oftcn. Bodin. lib. 2. cap. 4.

Thing like to this, is that which we read in the Judgment of another Sorcerefs, who confelled, That the could not reft, unleis the did commit fome evil daily, at leastwife the thould break a little vellel; but when her Miffris caught her breaking her earthen vellel of purpole, then the confested the matter, and was

3850

384:

143

was adjudged to dye, because she faid she could by no means rest, unless the had killed a man, or committed a mischievous act.

386. I Remember, faith the fame Bodin, That Turnerius a Learned man, an Aurelienfian Counfellour, told me, That there was a speech all abroad, and found out true, that the convention of Witches was kept at the Cleriacus, and that Devils declared there, whatfoever was done in divers Nations, because they do reduce the feveral deeds of men, as it were, into a brief History of all perfon's actions; and this is the manner of divination which Sorcerers use. But that Sorceres, whom we mentioned, would not firr from the fentence given, faying, She did prefer death before so great torments of the Devil, from which the could not be quiet even for a moment.

> But this is to be observed in the first place, That there is no a ceeing, wherein there is no dancing. So the Witches of Languiana did fing when they were dancing, Har, bar, Devil, Devil, leap hitber, leap thither, play here, play there; others faid, Sabbath, Sabbath, (that is) a quiet holy day, having their hands and brooms listed upwards, that then they might certainly testifie, with how great cheerfulnesse of mind and diligence they did worthip and adore the Devil, as also that they might represent the worthip which is due to God.

387.

388.

389.

There is a fresh History of Naturall Witchcraft, by a Neapolitane, who doth declare a thing which he tryed in a woman-Witch, who after she had anointed her felf naked, swounding, and void of sense fell down, and being returned after three hours space into her body, she related many things from divers Countries, which were afterwards found true.

I Heard from the Turettanias President, that he faw in Delphiraiss a Witch which was to be burned alive, therefore she lying down in the fire, faying, Remain ye at home with my body, she was taken away in a trance, and because the understood nothing, her Master smotcher with very heavy strokes of a rod, and then also that they might see whether the had departed this life or no, the fire overcame the parts which are most sensed this life or no, the fire overcame the parts which are most sensed by her Mafter and Mistris) dead, the was left there : the was found lying in her bed the next morning. Which when her Master admiring, enquired what had happened to her? She crying out, faid in her own language; Ah Master! How have you beaten me? Her Mafter manifesting this to the neighbours, a certain man faid, It is a Witch: and therefore her Master did not defiss till the acknowledging the thing, did make manifest that the had heard the meeting of Mag ces with Batia, in

Ason tics, i taken av Weltav year 157 of France filled to whereas ny God, onedid k did receiv ing luppl thing, ex try the tr and when the were and riting found to the order live yet, that it is f watch the withgrea or kuite,

T Han Promifec promifec what was and did what loev and did what loev and did what co accufed, hed to by D

Bailed ei killed ei facrifico allo pro Satan r cenfe r him;

ot

itims,

ld by no mean a milchieven

a Leathed min, ice was a freed iton of Winchs there, whats educe the fenof all perfort Sorceters up of firr from the ne fo great tuuiet even for t hat there is a the Witches i ar, Decal, Deal, i faid, Saldah ds and broom fie, with how i worthip all at the worthip

by a Near d in a woma d, fwounding ter three hom vers Countrig

y in Delphinicre the lying body, the we i nothing, he and then all life or no, the inter did the found lying a ther admirning y, faid in he me? Her Ma in faid, it is a the acknowles d the meeting d

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

ot Magitians in her mind. So moreover, the conteffed other offences which the had committed, and the was delivered to the fire. Bodin.in Damonomania, lib. 2. cap.4.

Acobus Sprangerus the Qualtor, who did examine many Wit-Jetics, doth write that they did confesse, when they seemed to be taken away by the fpirit, yet it might feem otherwife in the body. We have had another example in our memory at Burdeaux, in the year 1571, when perfecution was inftituted against the Magitians of France. A certain old woman at Burdeaux being a Witch, confelled to the Judges, that the was carried with others, every week where a great Hee-Goat was adored, by which author they did deny God, and did promife that they would ferve the Devill, every one did kiffe his privy parts, and after they had danced each one Then D. Belotus, mafter of the Bills containdid receive the dust. ing supplications, (when the forcereffe faid that the could do nothing, except the was brought out of the Prifon) being willing to try the truth of the thing, did command her to be brought forth; and when the had anointed her felf being naked, the fell down as if the were dead, and void of lenfe, afterwards coming to her fenfe and rifing after five hours, the declared many things which were found to be fo, as she had faid in divers places. A certain Earl of the order of men of arms, did relate this Hiftory to me, who doth live yet, and was prefent at that experience. Olaus doth teftify that it is frequent in the Northern parts, and that their friends do watch the body of him that is in a trance very diligently, untill with great grief he doth return, and bring with him his ring, letter, or knife, who is absent 300. miles. Idem. ibid.

T Hat judgment of feven Magitians is alike admirable, which I learned at Nauntes in the year 1549. Therefore when they promifed that they would shew before many, in an hours space, what was done ten miles in Circuit, they presently fell down dead, and did lye void of sense three hours: arising, they did relate what soever they had perceived in the whole City of Nauntes, and a longer Circuit, having observed places, deeds, and men, all which things were found presently. And therefore all they being accused, and found guilty of many mischievous acts, were condemned to be burned. Idem.

B Aro of Razii (who at Nauntes being condemued for his Magicall charms fuffered punctment) not onely conferfied, that he killed eight children, and deprived others of understanding, and facrificed his own young fon to the Devill, and that in her Mothers womb, that he might gratify Satan as much as it was possible, but also prostrating himfelf upon his knees in his chamber, did adore Satan appearing in humane sape; and did facrifice with Incenfe to him. Satan did promise many admirable things to him; and namely, that he should be great. But at length V f cing

392.

391.

145

390.

146

393.

394.

395.

396.

feeing himfelf Captive, and oppressed with the most bitter evils; confessed all things, and suffered the uttermost punishment. Badin. lib. 2. cap. 6.

W E read in Sprangerus, when he had intelligence of a certain forcereffe, which he condemned to be burned, that fhe confeffed, (how the was a Midwife) that the taking children out of the Mothers Womb, did prefent them to the Devill by lifting them aloft into the Ayr; afterwards the put a great pin into their heads, fo that the bloud might not run out: then carrying them to be buried, going in the night the digged them up, boyled them in a furnace, did eat the fleth, and did keep the fat for her ufe. By this means the killed fourty children: the was a Dane at Bafilea.

C Azereis was a Witch at Tholoffa, who having brought the bleffed bread to the Altar, went away to drown her felf, and when the was brought home again; the confetted that the intected the blefted bread with poyfon; the bread was caft before Dogs, they dye. She being in bonds, was in a trance more then fix hours, void of all feeling; afterwards rifing up, cryed out the was wonderfull weary, and fent back the Mettengers from many places with certain fignes and marks. When the was near her fentence of condemnation, and Judgment was ready to be paft upon her, the called upon the Devill, faying, That he promifed that there thould come fuch vehement ftorms and thowers that the might not be burned. But for all that the was not defended from the violence of the fire. Bodinus Damonoman, lib, 3. (ap. 3.

Nothing (faith the fame Bodinus in lib. 2. cap. 5.) is fo wonderfull and admirable as the Metamorphofing of men into beafts, and to be turned out of the fhape of a man into that of a beaft. Yet the truth is, that this is practiled among Magitians; and both divine and prophane Hiftories do prove it certainly. In the book of Inquifitions againft Magitians, which I have often mentioned; we read of one Statius a certain Magitian that he fuddenly and oftentimes flew, and efcaped out of the Bernates field, out of the midft of his enemies (for he had very many) and he could never be flain; but when he was afleep, he left two of his Difciples Hippo and Stadlinus which were the chief Magitians in all Germany, who raifed tempefts, caufed lightning and great forms.

T Here did arife a controverfy in the Parliament of Dolenfi, and the fentence was published the 18th day of January in the year, 1573. about Ægidius Garnerius, Lugdunenfis. Which Judgment is not fit to be inferted here at the prefent, when Aurelius at Eligium Giberium at Paris with Peter Hayanum, commended to the French Preffes; only we will set down the chief heads of those Articles that he was accused and convicted of. And first, That this Gar-

Arrigat. which an wench of to Woli voured th his Will iame ma three me fifteen da of Gredifa And laftly thape of a being ver been hind realons he execution

THere

Lord, 152

lially, and telates at gottus, and they had 1 to the De the Calex wax ourn facrificed ingtica greatcel and a w withthe were we that Bur and cru lome (young by the young agethe certain

> Rem Citor Belgi Clarks Wounde ing turn bring P

Baden-Württemberg

nerius

ions,

bitter evily, meat, Badia

pence of a ctrburned, that tring children Nevill by liftreat pin into the carrying n up, boyled e fat for her ras a Dase at ight the bleiner felf, and it fae infeftel before Doghen fix hours, we was woty places with atence of conher, fhe calthere though hight not be the violence is fo wonderen into beads, a beaft. Yes is; and both In the boos mentioned; enly and eltrof themidif ever be flam; es Hippo and ey, who railed Dilenfi, and ny incheyeon, ch. Judgment relias at Eligeitothe French hole Articles hat this Gre-

and cunning delusions of Devils.

147

397.

398.

neriss at Michaelmas time at the wood, in the Chaften yakian Vines, which are a quarter of a mile from Dolenfis Town, took a young wench of ten or twelve years old, with his hands, which feemed like to Wolves feet, and tore her to pieces with his teeth, and fo devoured the fieth of her thighs and arms, and brought part of her to his Wife. And about a Moneth after, he got another girl in the fame manner, and killed her; and being about to eat her, unleffe three men (as he himfelf confeffed) had hindered him. And about fifteen dayes after he strangled a boy of ten years old, in the Vines of Gredifaniorum, and did cat the fleth of his legs, thighs, and belly. And laftly, He flew a boy thirteen years of age (being then in the shape of a man, and not of a Wolf) in a Grove of the Perufan ; and being very hungry (as he of his own accord confeffed) if he had not been hindered, would have eaten him allo: Therefore for thefe reasons he was condemned to the flames; The Sentence was put in execution.

THere was another Cafe agitated at Vefontion, made known to, or discovered by John Boinss the Inquifitor, in the year of our Lord, 1521, in the Moneth of December, the caufe was fent into France, Itally, and Germany, which Vierrus, lib. 6. of Witchcraft, chap. 13. relates at large, but I will run over a few heads of it; Peter Bargottus, and Michael Verdunus, was found guilty, and confeffed that they had renounced God and their Faith, and had given themfelves to the Devill; Therefore Michael brought Burget in that ftreet of the Carlonian Caffle, where each of them had a Candle of green wax burning, with a dull obfcure flame; and fo they danced and facrificed to the Devill. Afterwards they confessed, that anointing themfelves, they were transformed into Wolves, running with great celerity and fwiftneffe; then again being turned into men, and a while after into Wolves, and in that shape had copulation with fhe-Wolves, and had the fame pleafure with them as they were wont to have with Women; Furthermore it was confelled, that Burgottus with feven Wolves feet and teeth, did tear to pieces and cruelly macerate a boy, and had quite devoured him had not tome Countreymen driven him away. And that Verdunus flew a young maid gathering peafe in the Garden, and was driven away by the Lord of Cunea. And in the last place, that there were four young laffes devoured by them at a certain place and time, whole age they did relate, and that they could deftroy men by caffing a certain kind of dust or powder.

Remember that D. Bordinus, the Kings Generall Factour, or Solicitor, did tell me of another example that was fent to him out of Belgia, with the whole Judgment, figned by the Judges and Clarks and Notaries; which was concerning a Wolf that was wounded in the hanch or Thigh with a Dart, which afterwards being turned into a Man laid in his bed with the Arrow in him, and being plucked out, he that was wounded acknowledged it, this was V 2 proved 397.

Baden-Württemberg

148

proved at that time, and in that forementioned place, both by his own confession, and by divers other testimonials.

Ob Fincelius writteh, that at Padua there was one man fell mad, and his Wolvith feet being cut off, inftantly he appeared a man I that was flumped, or had his members cut off, by which example (laith Bodinus) the Judgment against Witches is confirmed, and a great company of Witches in the Thape of Cats were wont to congregate and gather to the Caffle, and there were fer four or five men, who were let to watch them all night, and then a great mol inde of Cars did invade, and fer upon them, one of them was Arin, the reft were fore hurr, and wounded, but many Cats being cut and hurt, afterwards turned into women, were found to be fore flast't. But because the thing seems fo incredible, the tentence and Jugdment is mute and filent. Petrus Marmorius in his book of divinations, faith, hat he himfelf was an eye-witneffe of this transformation of Men into Wolves in Lubaudia and Henry Colonienfis in his Val. de lamis of VV irches, affirms it for an undoubted truch, and alfo Ulricus Molitor in his book which he dedicated to Sigifmundus Cafar, fetting down the difputation that was made before the Emperour, and proves by many reafons, and alfo by his own experience, this ftrange Metamorphofing of men into Wolves, and tells of one that was thus transformed at Conftance, who was accufed, convicted, condemned, and confeffing it, was executed. This is thewed in many books that are fet forth in Germany, one of which relates that there was a Chriftian King who was lately deceafed, that oftentimes turned himfelf into a Wolf, that he might be the Prince and chief of Magitians. And the truth is, this kind of Witchcraft over-spread all Greece and Afia, and some of the VV eftern countries, as our Merchants fay, that there were fome that were put in the flocks, and imprisoned, who turned them felves from the thape of men into VVolves. Therefore in the year 1542. Sultan Solyman, getting invefted in the Empire, there was fuch a company of VVolves at Conffantinople, that the Emperour was in arms marching against them with his Prætorian Souldiers, and compelled a hundred and fifty of them to fly, and vanish out of the City, all the people being spectators. Job Fincelius in his fecond book de Atirabilibus, and the whole Country agree to this. The Germans call these Wolves wervolf, the French, Loups varous ; Picardians, Loups Warous, as if thou shouldst fay, divers Wilves (for the French put G in the room of W) the Greeks call them Auxaulgatus, and moguer.uxias, the Latines, Versipelles, as Plinius (not Outa) writing of this Meramorphofis. Pomponatine and Theophraftus, the chiefest Princes of Philosophers in their age, do confirm that certainly there was fuch a transformation of men into Wolves. Cafper Peucerus, fon in law of Phillip Melan Ehon, writes, that formerly thefe feemed alwayes but as meet fables and fictions to him ; but at latt he was forced to believe that which fo many Merchants of good account and credit did confirm in Livonia, many being acculed

Have of negotiat alowith a ftory no Defle with the peopl wasa Per of France ligence w In those (among w Wolves, things wh lowing A I hat then that tem away: that cou all Marr

when b

ANJ init: tions, i it: not o and Ho M/er, i upon d

Baden-Württemberg

tons,

, both by hi

nan fell mad. ocared a man which exig. is confirmed IS WETC Whit re let four a titel a grea of them was y Cats being and to be ion the fentence in his book thefle of this Henry Colosin undoubted dedicated to as made by alfo by his into Wolre, who was arecuted. This one of which ly decealed, night be the this kind a fome of the were lone d themlelves e year 1544 was fuch a TOUT Was I poldiers, and th out of the 1 his lecond ree to this. renels, Lans fay, divers eks call them Plinias (at Theoperation confirm that nto Wolves. that former. to him ; he Merchanis et ny being ac (The

and canning delusions of Devils.

cuted, convicted, and contefled, and fo were executed, and therefore he fets down the manner which they observe in Livonia: for every year about the end of December, there was a knavish fellow who did flir up all the Magicians, that they might have a Congregation in fuch an appointed place, and it they did not appear there, they were corrected by the Devill with an Iron rod, fo that the common rout were a great while after their Captain, who marching before, Millions followed to a certain River, and paffing over it, they were transformed into Wolves, and would fall upon men and beaths; and brought great detriment to the Country; and twelve dayes after rowing again over the River, they reaffuned the figures and thapes of men.

T Have oftentimes visited one Languetus Burgundus, a Learned man, negotiating about important affairs with the Duke of Saxony, and alfo with the King of France for his Lord and Mafter: here he toli'd a ftory not much unlike to this; He faid, That having fome bufineffe with an old man in Livonia, the thing was known amongle the people, I have about me fome letters of a certain German, who was a Penfioner of King Henry the fecond, written to the Conftable of France, by which he certifies the Constable; the which Intelligence was given at Mosch in Livonia : and furthermore he adds, In those Countreys where Herodotus scems to place the Neurians, among whom there were those that could change themselves into Wolves, which was a common and ufuall thing in Livonia; many things which were related by Herodotus, feeming incredible, following Ages have found to be true. And the fame Author faith, That there were Magitians, that by certain for fentences allayed that tempeft in which Xerxes had above fourty Ships funk and caft away : And we read in Olaus Magnus, lib. 3. cap. 18. of the Lappi that could fell ftorms and calms, by unloofing fome ropes, which all Marriners know by trequent experience.

We also read in the History of John Tritemii, in the year 1470, of a certain Jew, Bajanus by name, the fon of Simeon, who when he pleased, could transform himself into a Wolf, and vanish out of fight, and made himself disertor, invisible.

And it is a wonderfull thing, and yet methinks 'tis more admirable, that many will not believe it, when people of all Nations, and Historians with one confent acknowledge and confessie it: not onely Herodotus hath written of it 2000 and 200 years fince, and Homer 40. but Pomponius, Mela, Solinus, Strabo, Dionysius. Afer, M. Varro, Virgilius, Ovidius, and fixty other; and fo Virgilius upon this,

> Has herbas, atq; hæc Ponto mihi lesta venena, Ipfe deait Mæris; nafeuntur plurima Ponto: His ego fæpe lupum fieri & fe conderefylvis Mærin.

Thefe

149

400%

401,

402.

160

Thefe herbs and poyfons cull'd, me Maris gave, Not a few fuch the briny Marshes have; By this I oft Maris a Wolt have feen, When in the covert woods h'as hidden been. And taking thefe, into a Wolf was chang'd, Hiding my felt, into Maris Woods rang d.

But pliny, lib.8. cap. 22. wonders, that Authors fhould agree about this, That men, faith he, fhould be turned into Wolves, and again return unto their proper thape, we ought to effeem falle, or believe all that which we find recorded in fabulous Annals; this he durft not affirm, fearing left he fhould be believed ; for among the chiefest of Greek Authors he bringeth Evanthes upon the stage, who faith, That in Arcadia, there was one of the Astean Nation that did fwim over a pool, and was transfigured into a Wolf, and after fome few years coming to the fame pool again, and when he did passe over it again, he received an humane shape. And Agriopas, who writ of the Olympionick games, telleth of one Demanetus Parrbafim, who tafting of the intrals of a boy that was facrificed to Jupiter Lycam, was changed into a Wolf, which M. Varre, the most learned of all the Greeks and Latines, as Creero teftifieth, brings it in for an example, and confirms it for an undoubted truth. Olam Magnus Speaking of the Countries of Pilapia, Narbonia, Fincladia, and Angermania, faith, Thefe are heathenish Nations, and full of wicked spirits and Conjurers; And in his History faith, That men are turned into beafts by them : And he that defires more examples, of which there are millions, (which for brevity fake we will omit) let him confult Olaus, the Saxo Grammaticus, Fincelius, and william Brabantius; I passe by Quia's Metamorphosis, who intermingled many true things with his fabulous ftories; but that which he writes of Lycaon, the Arcadian King, turned into a Wolfs is not incredible;

> Territus ipfe fugit, naltufq; filentia ruris Exululat, frustraq; loqui conatar.

Affrighted he did fly, run, howl, and walk, But on alas, in vain he ftrives to talk ! Obtaining filence in the Country there, As he was mutoor filent every where.

Neither is that fabulous, which Homer relates of Circes the Witch, and of Whyses's companions being turned into hoggs, when St. Augustime in Civitate Dei, brings in the fame Hiftory, (although wonderful, in his opinion) and he faith, that ftory of the Arcadians on the Alps was often in his mind; that many prating talkative women inftructed in wicked arts, would give fornething in their cheefe to Travellers, by which incontinently they would be turned into cattel, cattel, wards w as we h

Witch; where h went bac was feen things w or meer fulpected before th to himfe

Neha tetus, fau in the Su with an,

dinarily

liarly ; a fure and fure and well what the Afs to would eve very bold li the Ma nary prep trultation tricks it Relation. be bound steed, h

People.

tions,

VC.

ild agree about ves, and again alic, or believe this he durit nong the chute ftage, who Nation that olf, and altri d when he did And Agricua, one Demancini as facrificedto Varro, the mol heth, bringsit d truth. Ola mia, Finclady and full of mich-That men att ore examples we will omit incelius, and fis, who there ries; but the into a Well when stress the With when stress (although with the Arradiant of g talkative wo g in their check be turned inc.

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

cattel, that they might bear neceflary burdens; and then afterwards when they had done their work, come to themfelves again, as we have thewed before, &c.

We fight the fight of the second seco

Othing is more frequent and usual in Egypt, as our Merchants report, and Belonius in his Observations, printed at Luteua, faith, That there was a Stage-Player, which he himfelf faw in the Suburbs of Cayxus, a Town in Egypt, who had a Dialogue with an Afs, and spoke with it, and discoursed with it very familiarly; and he affirmed, that the Als, as he knew by its figns, gefure and voice, did fhew and intimate, that it took wonderfull well whatfoever he spoke to it. And if the Master had commanded the Afs to pick out the beautifulleft woman in all the company, and would eye her narrowly in all her parts, and would draw near very boldly and confidently to him, it would make much of him, If the Mafter had given out, That there should be some barn or grapary prepared for his Afs, then it would have fhewed a great deal of exultation more then ordinary, and a great many fuch kind of tricks it played; and many fuch like things at large declared in Belonius. I would speak more of them, but I fear that there will be bounds put to them; and I could not have put them in my creed, had I not been an eye-witness of them amongst the Cayxian people.

TO this is added one which Vincentius writes of, in Speculo, lib. 3. c. 109, that there were two guefts which were Witches, which fometimes were wont to change men into beafts; and when they had turned a young man, a Player, into an Afs, who that he might be in his right wits, did fhew great fport unto Travellers; he was bought by a Neighbour with a great price, who faid, they would not hold their bargain, not perform their Covenant, and if he fhould chance to go to a river, and fo efcape, therefore the Afs after a few dayes were fpent, went unto the next Pool or Lake, and dipping twice of thrice in it, re-affumed its priftine fhape. Peter Damianus, a 404.

171

403.

405.

man to be reckoned amongst the chief of his age, when he was diligently enquired of, of the Master and the Als, and of the female Witches, he confested it, and of those that faw the Als turned into his humane shape, it was related before Pope Leo the 7th, and after it was a long while disputed on both fides pro and con, before that Pope; at last it was concluded on the affirmative part.

406.

407.

152

And by this means may that alfobe confirmed which we read in Lucian and Apuleius Atherificall men, to be turned into Affes, who faid that this happened to the Witches by the Thefsalonian women, who therefore were enemies to them that they might kiew for certain whether this was true or no, for both of them were alterration atherificall and accufed of the Magicall Arts. Wherefore Apuleius turns every flone, and ufeth by all means and arguments in his Apology that he might wash off that accufation of Witchcraft and Sorcery, wherewith he was defamed, &c. Bodicus, lib, 2, cap. 6.

Fall the deeds that Magitians challenge to themfelves, you thall hardly find any more famous then that of causing Thunder, Lightning, Storms, and Tempests, as the Law had it ventilated, and has found it for certain, and therefore in lib. 5. Inquisitorum, it is recorded, that in the year 1488. in the Constantian Dioceffe, there were Storms, Hail, Lightning, and Tempefts, which hurt the corn for the fpace of four miles, the Countrey men inveighing against the Magitians, there were two of them apprehended, Anna de Mindelen and Agne, which were first attached, and when they were examined, they confessed apart, that one day they went into the field with a little water, and although one of them knew not the others mind or Counfell, yet they confelled they digged a little hole, or a little ditch, and that about noon-tide, throwing a little water into the hole or ditch, and ftirring the water about, using some certain kind of unknown words, and calling upon the Devill; then this being done, they both went home, and to raifed the Storm : Both of them were burned.

408.

The fame Author faith that there was Judgment given out by him against a Witch of the Constantian-field, which when the faw all the neighbours of her Village to be merry, and dancing at a marriage, and taking it grievously that the was not invited thereto; in the day time the was transported by the Devill to a hill near unto the Village, (the Shepherds feeing her) and because the had not water which the thould throw into the ditch that the might flir up the tempest (for the constessed that the observed this ceremony) the made water, and flirring that about in the ditch, the spoke fome certain words; by and by the Heavens which now were (as I may fay) all Crystalline clear, were muffled with Pitchy, Jet-like clouds, foul and black masks, and a great thore of hail came quickly upon the dancers in the Village, and the VVitch returned turned lieve th Shephic through knowle

www. ards, whithe Free fome Pr Streets is phemies acrwards to the C Verfes, si ned) the luge, a the Spa Images

was abt

A powder think) ki toreswi toot on haveb ftroyed the De Hail, L thiefly ? statics confiffic tel top and wh voice p balldy ving no

KIGO Y

and for bis fam

Litte w

tions,

hen he wasti of the female Als turned its 7 th, and afte on, before the tarr.

which were be turned in by the Thephat they may both of the agicall Am all means m hat acculation ied, Scc. Bob emfelves, su causing Thuad it ventile 5. Inquiti spantian Do npells, which men inveig apprehende icd, and who day they wer of them know they diggets , throwing I water abcu gupon the De d lo railed at given out by which when and dancing as not invation () and becark inch that the observed this in the disclusive hick now was likely pitch incre of ball the Witch to participation

BLB

and cunning delusions of Devils.

turned into the Village again, they feeing her, did all verily believe that the had raifed the tempest, and laid hold on her, and the Shepherds did give in their testimony that they faw her carried through the Ayr: which she being accused of, and convicted, acknowledged it, and was burned.

We read a memorable Hiftory in Pontanus 5. libro, The French of Suetia, befieged in the Neapolitan Kingdome by the Spaniards, when all things were parched with drought and heat, and the French in their battell having a great fearcity of frefh water; fome Priefts being Magirians, did draw-about the Crucifix in the Streets in the night time, and with innumerable railings and blafphemies, they went their proceffion, and threw it into the Sea, afcer wards they gave the confectated hoft to an Affe, and brought him to the Church-porch, and there buried him alive; then after fome Verfes, and horrible blafphemies (which is not fit to be mentioned) there came great dafhing fhowers, and made almost a deluge, and fo by this means raifed the fiege, and were freed from the Spaniards, there was one in the year 1557. who threw all his Images and pictures into a Salt-preter pit; and afterwards there was abundance of rain.

Nd oftentimes Witches kill Cattle by sprinkling a certain kind of powder upon the thresholds they go over, not that the powder can work fuch an effect, which might rather (as one would think) kill the Witches that carries it about them, then those creatures which go over it, especially when the Witches hide it one foot under the ground, but onely the Devill is the helper of it. I have heard of three hundred beafts by this means, which were deftroyed in one instant in a Sheepfold of Biturgia, Neither onely doth the Devill exercise his power, not onely in raising of Tempests, Hail, Lightning, and about Corn and beafts, but also upon Men, but chiefly upon wicked men, and those VVirches (which were burnt at Patavius in the year of our Lord, 1564. which we have mentioned) confeffed that in those conventicles in which they were congregated together, they worthipped the Devill in the fhape of a Kid, and when they were about to depart the place, they heard a great voice pronounced by the Kid, Either ye hall be revenged, or elfe ye fball dye : and fo there were many men and beafts flain by him, leaving no other means of preferving life.

Notestadlinus of the Laufanenfian Diocefle, who confeffed that ieven young Children were killed in the VVombs of the Mothers, and fo alfo brought barrennefle upon all the Cattle that belonged to his family, and being queftioned about the matter, gave answer that there was a certain beaft, whofename we keep fectet, that was laid there by him at the threshold, which being taken away, Birrenneffe ceased in his house.

Х

1.5

153

409.

410.

411.

VVe

154

412.

1405

1014

413.

TE real in the Atonstreletian Hiltory of a short Witch that was taken by a Prieft, who had two Toads that the had Bapuzed, which the uled to Magicall ules, which I thould efteem as ridiculous, were there not daily examples that confirmed it; VVhen Sir John Martin, put in flead of the Governour of Laodunenfis, condemned a V. Vitch of S. Probato be burned, who thook off two great Toads which they found in her Coffers. The Froifardian Hiftory witneffeth that there was one Curio with the Suefiunians who asked Countell of a VVitch that he might be revenged of an enemy who counfelled him that he thould Baptize a Toad , and give it lome brave name, and give it the Sacrament; which he did, and many other things which is not to be expressed here, he confessed. Five Inquisitors after VVitches, declare these things amongst others, that examined a VVitch, which confessed that the put the confectated bread in a Napkin which the ought to have fwallowed down, and hid in the Cup where fh nourished the Toad and put to it the powders which the had given her by the Devill, and to the muttered fome few words (which is not fit to be mentioned here) and fo fprinked the Sheepfold thresholds over which the Cattle were to passe over the aforesaid powder, therefore she was apprehended, and burned.

IN the examination of the Valerian Witches in Subaudia which was Printed flood to be fould; we read that caffing a certain kind of powder upon Plants, they will quickly wither and dye. I have (faith Bodinus) in my power fome Judgmeets that are fent unto me by that worfhipfull Gentleman, the Lord of Pipemontens de barbu Dorcea which by a Starme of Parliament 11. of Jumery, 1577. one was fentenced to death by the Governour of S. Chemopher, to Sanlifum which decree was confirmed and eftablished, and condemned to be burned, and afterward the Witch confeffed that the had killed three men by caffing a little powder wrapped in a theet of Paper, into that place by which they were to journey, and murmuring thefe words. In the name of God and all Devills, and other Conjuring diabolicall words. Which is not fit to be inferted in this place.

414. Miderus writes, who examined abundance of Witches, that he mat did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible for did turn up and down, her neighbours Ghoft being a horrible her year 1539, there was an Husbandman of Ulrichs that was affided with fuch kind of enchantments, Neufelfurus by name, thore would be kind tormented in his bowells ; and defpairing of remedy, ftrangled himfelf, and was anatomized, and cut up in the fight of all the Citizens, and there was found in his body a Staff, four Steel knives,

Linves nd was Works aboutt ine car Witch or by a WRCh body,a mind, beburn that the which officied askedw that did the wo manw confef thatic all the comm tret fh panion

Devill i fore Ves and foo three m ed, and fometim them of withou bloudy nus Da

AT th Herr fes, and paration diabolit anoint i and has ions, nort Witch ads that the ch I should t confirmed Mir of Laws. who theok The Fre. h the Satioe revenged ze a Toad, ; which he ed here, he these things fled that he ght to have ad the Toal the Devil, be mentionr which the ore the wat

haudia which hat calling quickly wifome Judgtleman, the store of Parliaby the Goas confirmed terward the ting a link: by which the name icall words

thes, that he and another are former ces, that is hat was alname, the as lognawed medy, these fight of all four Steel knires

ana cunning delusions of Devils.

knives, two plates of Iron, and a bottome of hair. And therefore no wonder is it, if the The Salonian Witch at Pamphila cauled a Womans belly to fwell and be tympanized, as if the had been about to bring lorth three births, and for the space of eight Moneths the carried about her this burthen. In like fort did that Martinian Witch, which killed the German, not by poifon, as Tacitus faith, or by a Cocks Egg, but by the help of the Devill. And also that Witch in the Confiantienfian Dioceffe, that did fo puff up a mans body, as though lichad the leprofy, and a little after troubled his mind. Sprangerus and other Inquitiors took care that the thould beburned. The fame Sprangerus relates, he being the caufe of it that there was another burnt on the borders of Bafil, and Alfalia, which confelled that the took grievoully a contumely that was offered to her by a good honeft man, a Husbandman, when the was asked what mifchief the defired to be done unto that Husbandman that did fo reproach her, to which queftion the gave answer, That the would have his face to fwell. Not long after the Husbandman was infected with a Leprofy; thele things fa: afterwards confeffed to the Judge, that the was not able to do fuch a thing, but that it was done by the Devill; by which argument we prove that all these things are done by the Devill, who to infinuates and accommodates himfelf to the wills of men that use him, that whofoever should cure his enemy, should be killed by his fociate or companion. = , notred od of tel

WE also read in Sprangerus's Story, of one Plumberus, a certain Conjuter, who lived at Lendenburg in Germany, whom the Devill taught to fhoot at, and pierce a Crucifix with Darts before Venus feafts, by which means using fome kin wicked words, and fhooting and darting into the Ayre, he could filly kill and flay three men which he faw and knew, although they were encloyftered, and flut up in the narrow circumference of a little Tower, and fometimes did deliberate and confult whether he fhould defiroy them or no. But at laft the Countreymen did tear him in pieces, without any Law-like Judgment after he had committed many bloudy murthers: Thefe things were done in the year 1420. Bodinus Demonom, lib. 2, cap. 8.

AT the Pedemontanians, one Caralius by name, who feemed to be an Hermophrodite, and when this Epicane entred into other houfes, and a while after they did kill men; therefore the Hermophrodite was attached and apprehended, and did difcover the conjurations and the conventicles of all the Witches, and many of their diabolical acts, (for there were almost 40 Witches) which did amoint the outward handle of the gates to kill men; this was done, and happened in the year 1536. And the fame fell out afterwards X 2 at Geneva in the year 1568, where the Plague raged for the space of seven years, of which there dyed many. Cardan writes, That he faw a certain Witch at Patavia, which quickly kill'd a boy while the only gently touched his back with a rod. Glauca being a zealous Witch of Medea, and the daughter of Creon, King, who married Jafon, whom afterwards the flew, who fent her a golden Crown on the Marriage-day; and when Glauca did fet the Crown upon his head, there thined out a flame, by which he instantly was burned, as Euripedes writes in Medea, expudrant 30° out or was, he faith, Non venenis tuis fed pharmacis, not by thy poilons, but druggs and Medicines.

416.

419.

155

417.

156

7 E have before made mention of a Biebrane Witch, which was burnt at Laodunum, in the year 1556; This Witch did debilitate and weaken men, and ftrangely fcrewed them awry, and deftroyed beafts and fruit; but at that very inftant when the was burned, all these ceased, as we have had intelligence of the Judge who examined her; befides, the fame Judge reported to me, That when the Witch threatned a certain woman, that the fould never after give fuck, it fo happened, that her milk inftantly dryed up ; and although the bore many children, yet her breafts were dryed up : but the Witch being burned quickly, her breafts abounded with milk; I heard this of a certain Nobleman, that her Aunt did put an obstacle, or did cause her to be barren, and bring forth no children; but when the dyed, the confested that the might get a place for her children : but after her Aunt dyed, and as foon as the clew of her life was unravell'd, or within a fhort while after, the Lady was with child, and bore 2, or 3. children after the had been married eleven years. Bodinus.

418.

T lerus tells a ftory of a certain Conjurer which he faw in Germany, who in the day time, in the fight of the people, afcended, flew upwards towards Heaven; and when his Wife caught him by the feet as he was flying up, the was taken up together with him, and fnatching hold on a Maid, fnatcht her up too, and they how red a good while in the Air, the multitude flood wondring at the miracle. A like Example we read in the Hiffory of Hugh Floriacensis, a Mantisconensian Earl, howling with a great voice, O friends, help me, was caught up into the Air and carried away, and wasn ever feen after. The fame Vieras relates, That he faw men fnatcht into the Air by devils. And it was required of a certain Magirian in Germany, who promised, that he would bring out ene Books of Franciscus the firft, King, out of the Madrid Tower; he was transported through the Ayr out of Spain into France; but for all this norhing was done, which was much feared, left that they thould ruth upon the Captain, and break all the necks of the spinators. So there was a Jewith Magitian, Sedechias by name, who

and cunning delusions of Devils.

157

who (as John the Tritemian Abbot relates) did fhoot a man thorough the Ayr, and tore his body, and gathering up his limbs, knit them together again, as did Simon Magus, Nero being prefent, who did gulph up a load of Hay, with Cart and Horfes, and drivers, in the fight of all the people.

The End of the First Book.

Deveroes

he Second Book.

Of Oracles, Prophecies, and Predictions

of Devils.

in time think and a stant who de the second and the second and a not at litemp of a Vincy whills was a that way on, who fire

Geers requising an energy work Country, relights was a long time

allight with any pain of the woundy and when he could not be outed by any means, when he was in great extremity, he was not monthed by a point Oracle, A bathe mould make the distriction of Allower

the lineald be denyed of the remote that was promited him by the lawer Counteys, when he coldinately partness with amengel the Vines; Eucheing hindred, be fell upon and the Kus stels thigh ; but Peace teing made, and the

Manual Miles

ACK IN

THE

BLB BADISCHE LANDESBIBLIOTHEK

hs,

the space

tes, That

I'd a boy

who maren Crown own upon was burnfaith, Nu

s and Mr.

h, which Nitch did wed them hant when ence of the tred to me, fhe fhould ntiv dryed

afts were her breaks and bring the might d as foon while al-

after fte

win Ga.

e, alcend. fe caught

and they

ndring u Hugh Fli-

voice, 0

way, and

faw mo

of a cer-

bring out

d Tomer;

, keft that

necks of

by name,